by each party should be made; and on that enquiry the Court will take all such evidence in the way of books and vouchers and so on; each party is entitled to produce as evidence the testimony of necessary witnesses and also all evidence tending to invalidate the accounts or to surcharge them; and eventually the Court should satisfy itself as to the amount which is due as established by the evidence of both the parties and frame its final decree accordingly. The Court should give no decree other than an order for filing the accounts and then confine the decree to such amounts as may be found due upon the proper taking of the accounts. If any party prove contumacious with regard to filing his accounts, the Court may proceed with the taking of accounts against him on the footing of evidence furnished, and in so doing the Court may make all reasonable presumptions against him." The plaintiff cannot get a decree against the defendants on the mere ground that the defendants failed to produce the accounts. "The plaintiff has to prove his own case, and though the defendants may have been equally negligent in not keeping detailed accounts and may possibly be to blame for not producing books, the plaintiff has been at least equally negligent in not keeping up any correct detail of the various works undertaken and of the profits realised therein." Where the books are lost, it is for the Court to give special directions as to the mode in which the accounts should be taken and vouched. It is impossible to find the proper amount due from one to another unless this course is adopted.— 13 T. L. J., 177.

procedure has been rendered applicable in such cases. Section 265 [see Section 46 Supra], for example, relegates the actual partition or separation of revenue-paying estates entirely to the execution department and entrusts it to the Collector. On the other hand, Section 396 [see Order XXVI, Rules 13 and 14 Infra] contemplates in the case of other immovable property, a preliminary order ascertaining the rights of parties, which is in itself a decree but involves a final decree upon the report of the Commissioner. These Sections, it is proposed in some measure to modify, and it is further intended, by an amendment of Section 540 [Cf. Case Law.

1. Plaintiff had a decree passed against him at suit of the defendant which he settled by payment out of Court. The defendant afterwards proceeded to execute the decree, had certain property of plaintiff sold in auction and became the purchaser thereof. In a suit by the plaintiff to set aside the sale :

Held,—The plaintiff could not sue to have the proceedings rescinded and the sale annulled ; his remedy being in the nature of a suit to recover damages occasioned by the fraud of the execution-creditor.— 1 T. L. R., 65.

2. In a suit to set aside execution proceedings on the ground that the decree has been satisfied, the objection that, under Section 190, old C. P. C., the question of satisfaction of the decree out of Court, could not be entertained and determined, was raised:

Held.—Section 190 of the old Civil Procedure Code had no application to regular suits to declare execution proceedings null and void on account of fraud, but that it prohibited only inquiry into adjustment of the decree out of Court in the execution proceedings.

" All monies payable under a decree shall be paid into the Court whose duty it is to execute the decree, unless such Court or the Court which passed the decree shall otherwise direct. No adjustment of a decree in part or in whole shall be recognized by the Court unless such adjustment be made through the Court or be certified to the Court by the person in whose favour the decree has been made or to whom it has been transferred].— 9 T. 3. Under Section 190 of the old Civil Procedure Code,. no adjustment of a decree in part or in whole, shall be recognized by a Court, unless such adjustment was made through the Court, or be certified to the Court by the person in whose favour the decree has been made or to whom it has been transferred.— 11 T. Payment out of Court to decree-holder.

2. (1) Where any money payable under a decree of any kind is paid out of Court, or the decree is otherwise adjusted in whole or in part to the satisfaction of the decree-holder, the decree-holder shall certify such payment or adjustment to the Court whose duty it is to execute the decree and the Court shall record the same accordingly.

(2) The judgment-debtor also may inform the Court of such payment or adjustment, and apply to the Court to issue a notice to the decree-holder to show cause, on a day to be fixed by the Court, why such payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified; and if, after service of such notice, the decree-holder fails to show cause why the payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified, the Court shall record the same accordingly.

(3) A payment or adjustment, which has not been certified or recorded as aforesaid, shall not be recognised by any Court executing the decree.

and obtain a release deed for the suit property, and on failure to make the payment as provided for, the plaintiffs were to realise by proceedings in execution, certain sums specified in the decree to be due by the defendant on account of rents, &c. The Court was closed for the summer recess before 15th Medom and reopened on 3rd Edavam, 1085. The defendant did not pay the money to plaintiffs, but paid it into Court on the day the Court re-opened. The Munsiff held that the tender made was out of time and that plaintiffs were not bound to accept payment.

Held.—It was not incumbent on the defendant to have made the payment on 15th Medom, 1085, out of Court directly to the decree-holder. He had the option of paying the money into Court under Section 253 of the Civil Procedure Code, and as 15th Medom was a Court holiday, the payment made on the day when the Court re-opened was payment in compliance with the decree.— 27 T. L. R., 217 (=2 T. L. J., 377).

Fol. —3 T. L. J., 348.

5. Held by majority that Section 362 of the Civil Procedure Code [ = Or. XXIV, r. 2 ] does not apply to execution proceedings, and a judgment-debtor is not bound to apply for issue of notice to the decree-holder when he deposits the decree-amount under Section 253 of the Code.

Per Palpu Pillai, J.—Section 362 applies also to execution proceedings, and a judgment-debtor is bound to apply for issue of notice to the decree-holder when he deposits the amount under Section 253, in order to escape liability for further payment of interest.— 12 T. L. J., 82.

6. Where under a decree money is payable at once, the execution Court has no jurisdiction to vary the decree, by granting time to the judgment-debtor for payment. 18 T. L. J., 614.

Sec. 254 : 1. After Section 253, there was the following Section in Regulation II of 1065 :—

"254. Agreement to give time to judgment-debtor.—Every agreement to give time for the satisfaction of a judgment-debt shall be void, unless it is made with the sanction of the Court which passed the decree, or whose duty it is to execute the decree.

Agreement for satisfaction of judgment-debt.—Every agreement for the satisfaction of a judgment-debt, which provides for the payment, directly or indirectly, of any sum in excess of the sum due or to accrue due under the decree, shall be void unless it is made with the like sanction.

Any sum paid in contravention of the provisions of this Section shall be applied to the satisfaction of the judgment-debt; and the surplus, if any, shall be recoverable by the judgment-debtor."

2. The above Section has been omitted, as is done in the British Indian Code. Section 257-A (corresponding to the above Section) of the Indian Code of 1882 was enacted in view to protect the interests of judgment-debtors against the exercise of undue pressure by decree-holders. In practice, the provision was found to be of little service to judgment-debtors. Section 16 of the Contract Act appears to afford adequate protection where required. So, that Section has been omitted. The sanction of the Court is not necessary for agreements provided for in the Section between the decree-holder and judgment-debtor; and such agreements would be given effect to, if otherwise valid.

I. The corresponding Section of Regulation II of 1065 ran as follows:—

"255. Payment to decree-holder.—If any money payable under a decree is paid out of Court, or the decree is otherwise adjusted in whole or in part to the satisfaction of the decree-holder, or if any payment is made in pursuance of an agreement of the nature mentioned in Section 254, the decree-holder shall certify such payment or adjustment to the Court whose duty it is to execute the decree.

The judgment-debtor also may inform the Court of such payment or adjustment and apply to the Court to issue a notice to the decree-holder to show cause, on a day to be fixed by the Court, why such payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified; and if, after due service of such notice, the decree-holder fails to appear on the day fixed, or having appeared fails to show cause why the payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified, the Court shall record the same accordingly.

Unless such a payment or adjustment has been certified as aforesaid, it shall not be recognised as a payment or adjustment of the decree by any Court executing the decree."

II. Sub-Rule (1).—The addition of the words "of any kind" after the word "decree" is intended to make it clear that the Rule applies not only to money decrees, but to mortgage decrees, partition decrees and other decrees under which money is payable.

See also 1 T. L. J., 82.

Sub-Rule (3).— It will be noted that the words "as a payment or adjustment of the decree" which occurred after the word "recognised" in the last Para of the old Section have been omitted. In regard to this, the Indian Special Committee said:— "The Committee have omitted certain words from the last paragraph of Section 258 of the Code in order to make it clear that the Court cannot recognise a payment or adjustment which has not been certified for any purpose whatsoever. It follows that an uncertified payment or adjustment cannot operate to prolong the period of limitation for applying for execution under the Limitation Act."

III. For Form of Notice to show cause why a payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified, see Appendix E, Form No. 1.

The lower Court dismissed the suit as not maintainable. On Appeal:

Held.— The debtor cannot seek to set aside the sale complained of.

However, a suit is maintainable as against the judgment-creditor for damages caused to the decree-debtor by the former's breach of contract to certify to Court the satisfaction of the decree. The contract to certify to Court the payment of the decree-debt is implied in the payment, and, therefore, the dismissal of the suit altogether is wrong.—

5. A, a decree-holder who had assigned his decree to B (his wife), received a certain sum of money from C, the decree-debtor, and agreed to certify satisfaction to the Court, but failed to do so and tried to execute the decree as the agent of B. C petitioned the Court to require A to acknowledge payment. His petition being dismissed, C prayed for an injunction to issue to A not to execute the decree and the Court granted a perpetual injunction prohibiting A from executing the decree.

Held.—(1) The Court, before issuing an injunction of the nature granted by it, must be satisfied that the damage caused or likely to be caused is unascertainable by any standard. The plaintiff in the case can always, if his claim is enforceable in law, recover adequate compensation for any damage sustained by A's failure to carry out the agreement and the damage that may be caused being of an ascertainable character, an injunction should not have been granted against B.

(2) Under Section 255 of the Code of Civil Procedure now in force, C may, through the Court, call upon A to certify adjustment of the decree. The order passed against C is appealable under Section 557 [=new Section 82 and Order XLII, r. 1]. Failing this summary remedy, which the Code provides to prevent execution of decrees by fraud, C's course is to sue for damages.—

6. Section 255 expressly concedes to the defendant in a decree which had been adjusted out of Court, the right of applying for the recording of such adjustment after notice to the decree-holder, and makes it incumbent upon the Court to enquire into the matter and pass such orders as it thinks fit. The consent of the decree-holder is not a condition precedent or essential to an order for recognising and recording of adjustments of decrees, if such adjustments be proved to have been duly made by the parties out of Court, and the provisions of Section 255 would be rendered wholly nugatory, were a decree-holder who at first made an adjustment of his decree with the judgment-debtor, to be permitted to back out of his first agreement, and successfully prevent the recognition of the agreement by the Court simply by denying subsequently in Court the factum or validity of the agreement. It would simply be a fraud if the decree-holder is to execute a decree already adjusted, and Section 255 is intended to obviate the perpetration of such frauds. The question whether a decree has been adjusted and thus rendered incapable of execution is one which the Court executing the decree is bound to determine in execution under the terms of Section 238 of the Code, [new Section 40], which enacts in distinct terms that all questions between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed, relating to the discharge or satisfaction of the decree, should be determined in execution and not by a separate suit.—

8. The adjustment of a decree out of Court subsequent to its attachment under Section 270 of the Civil Procedure Code [= Or. XXI, r. 51] cannot be recognised by the Court.

The non-service of notice of attachment on the judgment-debtor is not fatal to the validity of an attachment under Section 270, as notice to parties is prescribed only for attachment of simple debts not secured by a decree and of other movable property.

9. In execution of a decree for partition obtained by P against D, both parties executed Kyohits acknowledging partition and promising to report satisfaction on the alleged oral promise of D to remove a structure of D jutting into the land delivered to P. In the suit by P to enforce the agreement, the District Judge reversing the Munsiff's decree, held that the agreement had no consideration and hence it was no contract and that P's remedy was to apply for enforcement of the decree and not by a separate suit.

Held.—As the agreement answered all the conditions of a contract under Sections 2 and 10 of the Indian Contract Act, it was a valid contract. Such a contract would operate by way of substitution and extinction of the remedy under the decree, and where an adjustment extinguishes all remedies under the decree by way of execution, it is open to the parties to seek their remedies on the same as an independent contract.— 20 T. 10. In an application for execution, the decree-holder stated that a portion of the decree amount had been paid off and prayed for execution of the rest of the decree. The District Judge held that as no record of part satisfaction of the decree was made by the Court on the application, such part satisfaction could not be taken notice of.

Held.—No such recording by the Court was necessary either under Section 255 or under Section 228 [ = Or. XXI, r. 9 (2) ] under which the application was put in. Under Section 255, it is the decree-holder that has to certify payment and under Clause (e) of Section 228, the decree-holder is bound to state in his application for execution what adjustment, if any, of the matter in dispute had been made between the parties after decree. It is only when the decree-holder fails to certify, that the judgment-debtor may inform the Court and get satisfaction recorded.— 21 T. L. R., 152.

11. A and B executed a hypothecation deed to P in satisfaction of a decree obtained by the latter against A. P without entering up satisfaction of the decree sued on the deed for the recovery of the hypothecation amount. It was contended on behalf of A and B that the failure of P to enter satisfaction of the decree was a bar to the suit and that as there was no delivery of the hypothecation deed, the agreement was not a completed transaction.

Held.—(1) P's failure to enter up satisfaction of the decree was not a bar to the suit.

(2) The provisions of Sections 254 and 255, C. P. C., do not prohibit a fresh agreement between the parties to the decree to liquidate the decree-debt in any other manner if they see fit.

(3) The mere registration of the hypothecation deed unaccompanied by delivery of the deed did not evidence the intention of the parties to treat the transaction as a completed one.— 24 T. L. R., 254.

(= 7 T. L. J., 344).

12. In a suit by a judgment-debtor against a decree-holder for the excess amount realised by the latter in execution of the entire decree without giving credit for the uncertified payment made out of Court, the cause of action arises only from the date when the judgment-debtor is actually damnified by payment of the debt a second-time and not from the date of the first payment nor from the date when steps in execution were taken against him.

Per Sadasiva Iyer, C. J.—The action is for damages caused by the decree-holder's promise not to recover in execution more than the balance remaining due and this promise is not broken till excess money is realised.— 1 T. L. J., 59.

13. When a decree directed that defendant should pay plaintiff interest on a particular amount till certain property was delivered over by the former to the latter, and it was contended in execution, that plaintiff was not entitled to interest after a certain date when, according to the defendant, the property was delivered over to him (plaintiff) outside Court, and that such adjustment, though uncertified, could be recognised and acted upon by the Court, as Section 255 applied only to money decrees :

Held.—(1) Section 255 applied not to money decrees alone, but to all kinds of decrees including those directing delivery of immovable property.

(2) As the adjustment set up had not been certified to Court under Section 255, within the time prescribed by law, the Court could not recognise the same.

(3) Therefore, plaintiff was entitled to get the interest claimed even for the period subsequent to the alleged uncertified adjustment of the decree.— 1 T. L. J., 82.

Fol.—6 T. L. J., 469,
17 T. L. J., 755.

14. A decree for partition and recovery of plaintiff's share was adjusted out of Court by a partition deed among the parties. After sixty days of this partition deed, the plaintiff applied for execution of the decree which the defendant opposed in view of the partition deed. The plaintiff opposed the filing of the deed of adjustment as it was out of time. For the defendant, it was contended that Section 255, C. P. C., did not apply to partition decrees, and that even if it was applicable, the defendant in a partition suit being himself in the position of a decree-holder could certify adjustment under Section 255 at any time notwithstanding Article 143 of the Limitation Regulation.

Held.—(1) Section 255 applied to adjustments of all decrees and not alone to decrees for money, and as the adjustment in the case had not been certified to the Court within time it could not be recognised as an adjustment by the execution Court.

(2) The defendant in a partition decree could not be deemed to be a decree-holder so as to be entitled to certify the adjustment of the decree to the Court at any time notwithstanding the provisions of Article 143 of the Limitation Regulation, as he was not legally competent to discharge his liability under the decree by himself certifying adjustment of it to the Court.—

Fol.—17 T. L. J., 755.

15. Where a judgment-debtor in a suit executed a mortgage and directed the mortgagee to pay the decree debt and the mortgagee made payment out of Court to the decree-holder:

Held.—The mortgagee cannot, under Section 255 of the Civil Procedure Code, claim certificate of payment.

The Section apparently contemplates that the application should be by the judgment-debtor himself. Otherwise one would have expected some such words as 'the judgment-debtor or any other person on his behalf may inform the Court, &c.' Regarding the application as one that must be made by the judgment-debtor himself, the present respondent would not be a recognised agent as defined in Section 33 of the Code [= Or. III, r. 2]. He is indeed a stranger having no interest in making the payment to the decree-holder, as the decree would in no event be executed either against him personally or against the property mortgaged to him.—10 T. L. J., 466.

16. A decree-holder-purchaser is not debarred from certifying satisfaction of the decree at any time before the sale is made absolute. Section 255 does not make it obligatory on the parties to abstain from adjusting the decree out of Court. It provides, however, that when the decree has been so satisfied, the decree-holder shall certify satisfaction. If the decree holder fails to certify as enjoined, the judgment-debtor is enabled to apply to the Court within a specified period to compel the decree-holder to certify such satisfaction. There is nothing in the scheme or scope of the Chapter (XIX) relating to the execution of decrees which deprives the parties of the liberty to settle their differences out of Court at any time before the decree is effectually satisfied by virtue of the termination of the several modes of execution prescribed by the Legislature.—

(= 12 T. L. J., 162).

17. Section 255, C. P. C., does not mention any certificate and there is, therefore, no particular form in which the decree-holder has to certify payment. The Section would be satisfied if the decree-holder were to inform the Court orally of the payment.

The return of the process-server with the signature of the plaintiff, or of an agent of the plaintiff authorised to certify satisfaction on his behalf, might be taken by the Court as sufficient certification to satisfy Section 255.— 15 T. L. J., 293.

19. A mere offer by post to pay the amount due is not a valid tender. Again, a plea of tender before action must be accompanied by a payment into Court after; otherwise the payment is ineffectual.— 16 T. L. J., 383.

20. In execution of the decree in the case, a difficulty was experienced in putting up the wall as per the directions in the decree. Both parties recognised the difficulty. They appear to have each given up some technical right under the decree in favour of the other, and arrived at an agreement as to how the wall might be built up without detriment to either party in satisfaction of the decree. They jointly put in a petition before the lower Court evidencing the adjustment made by them. The Court ordered the further construction of the wall to proceed in accordance with that petition.

The defendant put in a petition to have that order and the settlement arrived at between the parties as evidenced by their joint petition cancelled on the ground that they amounted to an amendment or variation of the decree which the Court had no jurisdiction to make in execution.

Held.—(1) The defendant's contention was unsustainable. The parties might effect an adjustment of the decree outside the Court and have it certified in Court. The recognition of that adjustment by the Court would not amount to the Court varying the decree. Section 255 applies to the matter.

(2) Section 255 applies not to money decrees alone, but to decrees of all kinds.— 17 T.L. J., 755.

21. Where in a petition made by the judgment-debtor under Clause (2) of Section 255 for certifying payment or adjustment of the decree out of Court, the date of payment or adjustment is not given, the Court is competent to require the judgment-debtor to state the date, as it is necessary in view of the period of limitation prescribed for such petitions. If the judgment-debtor does not comply with the requisition, the Court would be justified in dismissing the petition and in refusing to consider it on the merits.— 19 T. L. J., 538.

22. The principle that the executing Court cannot take notice of any adjustment made out of Court which is not certified cannot apply where the decree-holder admits the adjustment and agrees to be bound by it. In such a case, if the decree-holder applies for execution in violation of the terms of the adjustment, the Court can and ought to investigate the terms thereof.— 19 T. L. J., 710.

Indian Special Committee said:—"The Committee have inserted this Rule to provide for cases, which they are told are not uncommon, of an estate being situated within the jurisdiction of two or more Courts. There are decisions on this point, but they are not harmonious, and the Committee think it well to determine the law definitely."

I. The corresponding British Indian Rule, which is the same as the last Para of Section 218 of the old Regulation, is as follows:—

"5. Mode of transfer.—Where the Court to which a decree is to be sent for execution is situate within the same district as the Court which passed such decree, such Court shall send the same directly to the former Court. But, where the Court to which the decree is to be sent for execution is situate in a different district, the Court which passed it shall send it to the District Court of the district in which the decree is to be executed."

The above was adopted in the original Bill. But the Select Committee substituted the existing Rule.

Court receiving copies of decree, etc., to file same without proof.

7. Where such copies are so filed, the decree or order may, if the Court to which it is sent is the District Court, be executed by such Court or be transferred for execution to any subordinate Court of competent jurisdiction.

I. The words "or of the jurisdiction of the Court which passed it" which occurred after the words "or of the copies thereof" in Section 220 of the old Regulation have been omitted. Also, the word "former" which occurred after the words "unless the" has been dropped.

II. The omission of the words in the British Indian Rule was made by the Select Committee who said :— "In our opinion a Court executing the decree of another Court ought not to go into any question as to the jurisdiction of the Court which passed it."

India Gazette dated 15-2-1908, Pt. V.

III. Note the change in the provision as regards the power to enquire into jurisdiction, with reference to the cases given below so far as that is concerned.

Case Law.

1. Under Section 220 of the Code, a certificate of non-satisfaction of a decree, sent for execution to another Court is conclusive proof of the truth or genuineness of the decree, of the correctness of the copy thereof transmitted for execution, and of the jurisdiction of the Court that passed the decree to pass it ; but nothing in the Section prohibits a Court executing a decree to ascertain whether the expenses incidental to the execution of the decree have been correctly calculated or charged to the judgment-debtor.— 12 T. L. R., 39.

2. (1) The provisions of Section 222 [new Section 38] read with Section 220, make it sufficiently clear that the Court to which a decree has been sent for execution possesses the same powers in executing the decree as the Court which passed the decree and that it is within the power of such Court to go into the question whether the Court which sent the decree for execution had jurisdiction to pass the decree.

(2) A Court has no jurisdiction to pass a decree against a person who was dead at the time of the suit. Such a decree is void ab initio. It is not in any sense a decree and is not susceptible of execution.

(3) The fact that the deceased man's legal representatives, to whom notice of execution was sent, took no steps to repudiate all liability under the decree, makes no difference.— 30 T. L. R., 171 (=4 T. L. J., 408**).

Fol.—14 T. L. J., 402.

3. Under Section 220 C. P. C., a Court to which a decree is sent for execution is competent to enquire into the jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree. This provision applies also to domestic decrees.

Order XXI, Rule 7, of the British Indian C. P. C., does not contain the above provision. The provision was embodied in Section 225 of the British Indian C. P. C., of 1882 ; but it was omitted in the Code of 1908.— 14 T. L. J., 403.

Application for execution.

8. Where the holder of a decree desires to execute it, he shall apply to the Court which passed the decree or to the officer (if any) appointed in this behalf, or if the decree has been sent under the provisions hereinbefore contained to another Court then to such Court or to the proper officer thereof.

Application for execution.

9. (1) Where a decree is for the payment of money, the Court may, on the oral application of the decree-holder at the time of the passing of the decree, order immediate execution thereof by the arrest of the judgment-debtor, prior to the preparation of a warrant if he is within the precincts of the Court.

I. The first Para of Section 223 of the old Regulation was as follows:—

"223. Application for execution.—When the holder of a decree desires to enforce it, he shall apply to the Court which passed the decree, or if the decree has been sent under the provisions hereinbefore contained to another Court, then to such Court or to the proper officer thereof."

II. For the other Paragraphs of Section 223, see Section 41 Supra and Rule 19 of this Order Infra.

III. See Section 34 for "Court which passed the decree" and Section 35 for "Court by which decree may be executed".

Case Law.

The Principal and Additional Munsiffs' Courts at a station cannot be deemed to constitute a single Court. The above two Munsiffs are not Officers attached to the same Court, but are Officers attached to two distinct and independent Courts. Therefore decrees passed by these Courts can only be executed by the Court which passed them unless a transfer has been made from one Court to the other.

Sections 3, 8 and 12 of the Civil Courts Regulation are not inconsistent with this view.

Merely because Articles 509 and 535 of the Civil Courts' Guide are apparently inconsistent with the provisions of the Civil Courts' Regulation, those Articles cannot be deemed ultra vires, as long as they do not contravene any provisions of the Civil Procedure Code. Even otherwise, the Rules regulating procedure cannot amount to a deprivation of the powers conferred under the Civil Courts' Regulation, but could only tantamount to directions for the mode in which such powers are to be exercised consistently with the rights that other Courts of concurrent jurisdiction possess in the matter.

A reading of Articles 509 and 535 of the Civil Courts' Guide shows that the intention has been to treat the institutions presided over by the Principal and Additional Munsiffs as distinct and independent Courts.—18 T. L. J., 780.

(2) Save as otherwise provided by Sub-rule (1), every application for the execution of a decree shall be in writing, signed and verified by the applicant or by some other person proved to the satisfaction of the Court to be acquainted with the facts of the case, and shall contain in a tabular form the following particulars namely :—

Written application.

(a) the number of the suit;

(b) the names of the parties;

(c) the date of the decree;

(d) whether any appeal has been preferred from the decree;

(e) whether any, and (if any) what, payment or other adjustment of the matter in controversy has been made between the parties subsequently to the decree;

(f) whether any, and (if any) what previous applications have been made for the execution of the decree, the dates of such applications and their results;

(g) the amount with interest (if any) due upon the decree, or other relief granted thereby, together with particulars of any cross-decree, whether passed before or after the date of the decree sought to be executed;

(h) the amount of the costs (if any) awarded;

(i) the name of the person against whom execution of the decree is sought; and

(j) the mode in which the assistance of the Court is required, whether—

I. This Rule is the same as the corresponding Rule in the British Indian Code.

II. Sub-Rule (1).—1. The corresponding Section of the old Regulation was as follows:

"252. Power to direct immediate execution of decree for money not exceeding rupees 500.—When a decree is passed for a sum of money only, and the amount decreed does not exceed the sum of rupees five hundred, the Court may, when passing the decree, on the application of the decree-holder, order immediate execution thereof by the issue of a warrant directed either against the person of the judgment-debtor if he is within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, or against his movable property within the same limits.

Explanation.—It is not necessary to verify the application presented under this Section."

The above Section was adopted from Section 256 of the Indian Code of 1882. That Section fixed the amount of the decree at Rs 1000 and also dispensed with a written application. In adopting that Section as Section 252 of the old Regulation, the Statement of Objects and Reasons thus remarked on the changes introduced therein:—"To mitigate the danger of allowing immediate execution of decrees on oral applications for such large sums as Rs. 1000, Section 256 is so amended as to empower Courts to grant such execution for sums not exceeding Rs. 500, on unverified but written applications. The verification of such applications is not insisted upon, as the object of the British Legislature in allowing oral application, was, presumably, to meet the cases in which verification could not be had, owing to the absence of the judgment-creditor."— Para 38.

2. The Notes on Clauses say :—

"Rule 9 provides for an oral application to issue a warrant of arrest against a judgment-debtor, if he is within the precincts of the Court at the time of the passing of the decree. There is no limit mentioned as to the amount for which such an application may be made, leaving it to the discretion of the Court as to when such an application may be allowed."

3. The Indian Special Committee said:—"The Committee have omitted the limitation imposed under the existing Code on oral applications for immediate execution. They see no reason why this limitation should be preserved."

4. The changes made in the provisions of the old Section by the present Rule are: —(1) Under Section 252, immediate execution could be issued only if the amount decreed did not exceed Rs. 500. Under the present Rule, there is no limit to the amount of the decree. The decree must be for the payment of money.

(2) Under Section 252, a written application is necessary to enable the Court to issue a warrant of arrest against the person of the judgment-debtor. Under the present Rule, an oral application will suffice and the Court is empowered to order immediate arrest of the judgment-debtor prior to the preparation of a warrant, if he is within the precincts of the Court.

(3) Execution could not issue against the movable property of the judgment-debtor on an oral application.

III. Sub-Rule (2).—1. This corresponds to Section 228 of Regulation II of 1065, which was as follows :—

"228. Contents of application for execution of decree.—The application for the execution of a decree shall be in writing verified by the applicant or by some other person proved to the satisfaction of the Court to be acquainted with the facts of the case, and shall contain in a tabular form the following particulars (namely) :—

(a) the number of the suit ;

(b) the names of the parties ;

(c) the date of the decree ;

(d) whether any appeal has been preferred from the decree ;

(e) whether any and what adjustment of the matter in dispute has been made between the parties subsequently to the decree ;

(f) whether any and what previous applications have been made for execution of the decree and with what result ;

(g) the amount of the debt or compensation, with the interest, if any, due upon the decree, or other relief granted thereby ;

(h) the amount of costs, if any, awarded;

(i) the name of the person against whom the enforcement of the decree is sought ; and

(j) the mode in which the assistance of the Court is required, whether by the delivery of property specifically decreed, by the arrest and imprisonment of the person named in the application, or by the attachment of his property, or otherwise as the nature of the relief sought may require."

2. For date of the decree (Clause (c) above), see Rule 7 of Order XX, Supra.

IV. For Form of Application for Execution of decree, see Appendix E, Form No. 6.

Case Law.

1. In an application for execution, the decree-holder stated that a portion of the decree-amount had been paid off and prayed for execution of the rest of the decree. The District Judge held that as no record of part satisfaction of the decree was made by the Court on the application, such part satisfaction could not be taken notice of :

Held.—No such recording was necessary either under Section 226 or Section 255 [ = Or. XXI, r. 2 ]. Under Section 228, Clause (e), the decree-holder is bound to state in his application what adjustment, if any, of the matter in dispute had been made by the parties after decree. It is only when the decree-holder fails to satisfy, that the judgment-debtor may inform the Court and get satisfaction recorded.—

2. Though a re-attachment after decree of the properties which have been already attached before judgment is not necessary, the decree-holder who has effected the attachment before judgment is not entitled to enforce his decree without putting in an execution petition in the prescribed form—see Sections 228 [ new Section 41 ] and 228.

2 T. L. J., 100.

3. The non-production of the copy of the decree with an application in execution does not make the application, one not in accordance with law, as such production is not required under Section 228.

A non-compliance with Rule 204 of the Civil Courts' Guide (based on Civil Circular

No. 57 of 1079) which insists on the production of the copy of the decree, will not render the application satisfying the requirements of Section 228, one not in accordance with law.

The proper view to take of Rule 204 of the Civil Courts' Guide is "not that it prescribes the essentials which an application for execution must contain and which are necessary to constitute the application itself an application in accordance with law, but that it requires something further besides the application itself, an accompaniment extraneous to the application as a condition precedent to further action by the Court executing the decree."—

4. The final decree was passed on 21-12-1079, for money to be recovered from the assets of the deceased debtor. The decree was kept alive until 1088. On 6-8-1089, a fresh application for execution was made, and the debtor's properties were placed under attachment. The application was thereafter dismissed for default of further prosecution. The next application was made on 28-5-1091 for sale of the attached properties. In the meantime, an assignee of a hypothecation bond on the security of the same properties obtained a decree and proceeded to execute it; but the decree was finally vacated. On 28-8-1098, the present application was made for proceeding with the sale of the attached properties in pursuance of the prior execution application of 1091. The District Judge allowed the decree-holder to proceed with the execution of the decree, on the ground that his petition of 1098 did not fall within Article 152 of the Limitation Regulation and that a decree-holder's petition for continuance of the proceedings on an execution petition which had not been finally disposed of was not subject to any rule of limitation and could be made at any time. The defendant appealed. The question raised was referred to a Full Bench.

Held.—Article 152 is no doubt expressed in terms appropriate to a residuary provision that is intended to cover all applications whatsoever, that are not specifically dealt with elsewhere in the Schedule appended to the Regulation. If the provision really achieves this, there can be no doubt that the present application which is admittedly not provided for in any other Article in the Schedule must fall within its provision. But that is far from being the case. That the Article is not so comprehensive as it purports to be, and that there are certain applications which are not touched either by that Article or by any other provisions in the Regulations is clear from the Preamble to the Regulation itself which shows that it does not profess to deal exhaustively with the subject of applications, but confines itself to prescribing periods of limitation for "certain applications" only. This view is also supported by a long current of decisions which lays down that the statute does not apply to applications made in pending suits or for the exercise by the Court of functions of a purely ministerial character, or of powers which it would be bound to exercise suo moto, even in the absence of such applications and which it would have no discretion to refuse.

At any rate, Article 152 is not applicable to pending suits. The question then arises whether the same principle could not be extended to execution proceedings. There is this fundamental distinction between a suit and proceedings in execution, namely, that while in the case of a suit, the legal machinery is set in motion by the filing of a plaint and it goes on functioning through all the stages of a suit without there being any need for the suitor to intervene with interim applications for the purpose of keeping the machinery in action, in the case of execution proceedings the law contemplates the filing of successive applications for execution one after the other till the fruits of the decree are realised, the proceedings being temporarily brought to a standstill when one of such applications has been properly disposed of, and being resumed only on the Court being moved to do so by the decree-holder by means of a fresh application in the form prescribed. Owing to this difference, the analogy of a pending suit cannot be applied to execution proceedings taken as a whole. But, the analogy of the pending suit may be taken to apply so far as that portion of the proceedings that is initiated by one of such applications is concerned so long as it remains pending. Between such portion of the execution proceedings and a pending suit, there appears to be no essential difference so far as the principle under consideration is concerned. On principle, therefore, there is no reason why the rule that applies to applications made in pending suits, should not also apply to applications made in furtherance of pending execution petitions. On this view, the application in question would be entirely outside the purview of the statute of limitations.

10. Where an application is made for the attachment of any movable property belonging to a judgment-debtor but not in his possession, the decree-holder shall annex to the application an inventory of the property to be attached, containing a reasonably accurate description of the same.

Application for attachment of movable property not in judgment-debtor's possession.

It is a well recognised principle that an application for execution of a decree may be treated as in continuation or revival of a previous application similar in scope and character, the consideration of which has been interrupted by the intervention of objections and claims subsequently proved to be groundless or has been suspended by reason of an injunction or the like obstruction. So long as proceedings initiated by the decree-holder are pending, his right to apply for their continuance accrues from day to day, i. e., on every day on which the Court does not suo moto continue them, and the right to apply would not be barred till three years have elapsed after the proceedings have ceased to be pending.

In the case, the execution petition of Dhanu 1091 was pending on the date on which the application of 1098 was presented to proceed with the execution petition. It was not therefore subject to the law of limitation and was not barred (F. B.).—

1. An execution application for arrest of judgment debtor's representatives and for attachment of properties was put in within twelve years of the date of the decree, but was not accompanied by a list of properties as required by Section 230, C. P. C. This defect was sought to be cured by putting in a list of properties to be attached more than fifteen days after the execution had become barred. The Munsiff then cancelled the attachment of properties ordered by him on two former occasions.

The Munsiff had power to cancel the previous orders passed by him. These orders were not passed on the date fixed for hearing objections to execution nor on any date fixed by an adjournment order for such hearing. The question of the right to execution was therefore not "heard" and "determined" by the Court and the order was therefore clearly not res judicata. It is one of those orders called in English Courts "Orders of course", and it has been held that the Court has inherent jurisdiction to modify and alter such orders when the party against whom such an order is passed showing cause against the passing of the order. The Munsiff therefore when the matter was brought to his notice (after attachment) cancelled the orders for attachment which

II. Section 233 omitted.—This Section empowered the High Court to transfer execution cases from one Court to another. There was no such provision in the Indian Code of 1882. The Statement of Objects and Reasons said :—"34. The absence of the power is greatly felt in cases in which either of the parties to the decree is related to the Judge. It is hardly necessary to point out that a Judge cannot be safely entrusted with the execution of the decree in which he is interested."

Case Law.

1. A Mahomedan widow and her minor children, a son and a daughter, as plaintiffs obtained a simple money decree against the defendants for the Chitty amount due to them, and the first application for the execution of the decree was made three years and nineteen days after the date of the decree. The plea of limitation bar under Section 9 of the Limitation Regulation was raised.

Held.—When one of the decree-holders is a minor, the applicant for execution is entitled to the benefit of Clause 1 of Section 7 of the Limitation Regulation, and he may execute the decree for the benefit of all the decree-holders. As the right to execute the decree rests in him along with others, the joint decree-holder has to obtain the permission of the Court to execute the decree in order that the interests of his co-decree-holders may not suffer thereby (F. B.).— 20 T. L. R., 239.

2. The decree was a joint one in favour of three plaintiffs; but as these would not agree to draw the decree-debt deposited in Court jointly, the Munsiff ordered payment of the money to the second and third plaintiffs on their furnishing security and directing the first plaintiff to seek his remedy by suit for the settlement of the disputes between the plaintiffs inter se. The District Judge, on appeal, varied the order by dispensing with the condition of giving security before drawing the money. On second appeal:

Held.—(1) The order passed by the Munsiff re the drawing of the deposited amount was in the exercise of the discretionary power vested in him under Section 224, and the law did not provide for an appeal against the order.

(2) A question of conflicting title between two persons holding a joint-decree was the proper object of a fresh suit between them. It is not one which can be raised before or determined by a Court of execution under Section 238 [now Section 40], since it is not one arising between the parties to the suit within the meaning of that Section.— 23 T. L. R., 245.

3. A decree for redemption was obtained by three persons, of whom the first plaintiff was the Karanavan and the other two were junior members. Subsequent to the decree, first plaintiff paid the mortgage amount out of Court, obtained a registered release from the mortgagee and, subsequent to the redemption, again mortgaged the property. The satisfaction of the decree was not, however, reported to the Court by either of the parties. The third plaintiff applied to execute the decree for redemption, and the application was objected to by the other two plaintiffs and the mortgagee.

The Munsiff held that the matter came under the purview of Section 224, and dismissed the plaintiff's application on the merits. The District Judge, on appeal, holding that the proceedings before the Munsiff came under the purview of Section 298 [new Section 40] and therefore appealable, allowed the third plaintiff to execute the decree.

Held.—The objection to the execution of the decree was one between joint decree-holders, and as such the proper Section applicable to the case was Section 224. Hence no appeal lay to the District Court against the order of the Munsiff. The order of the District Court reversing the Munsiff's order was therefore ultra vires.—

4. A decree for maintenance awarded one and a half Kottahs of paddy per mensem for the mother and her two minor sons who were the plaintiffs in a suit. The mother died and the two surviving decree-holders sought to execute the decree for the entire amount awarded by the decree.

Held.—The surviving decree-holders were entitled to realise by execution only their proportionate share.

No difficulty can arise if the decree, though in form passed jointly in favour of several persons, has determined the extent of the right possessed by each. Where the decree is silent about the respective rights of the joint decree-holders, and subequent to the decree, a portion of the rights to which the decree relates has been extinguished, say, by payment of a portion of the decree debt to one of the joint decree-holders, the judgment-debtor is entitled to credit for what he had paid to one of several joint decree-holders, to the extent of the share of the latter; in which case, the other joint-creditors cannot execute the decree for more than their own share. In the execution of a joint decree, when one decree-holder admits that the liability under the decree has been discharged wholly or in part, the extent of the right of such decree-holder and of the decree-holder seeking to execute the decree should be ascertained, and execution allowed only to the extent of the latter's right.

The present case does not fall under Section 224, as the Section can apply only when a joint-decree is capable of being executed still as a joint decree by all the decree-holders, or the surviving decree-holder, or decree-holders and the representative of those that are dead and nevertheless, some of them alone apply for the benefit of them all. Owing to the death of the mother in the case, whose right became extinct with her death, the decree was no longer executable as a joint decree for the benefit of all the decree-holders. By her death subsequent to the decree, there had been an effective discharge of the defendant's liability under the decree for her maintenance. Her right was not heritable; and the other plaintiffs could not be said to have succeeded to her right. Each of the plaintiffs had an independent right against the Tarwad for maintenance; and the decree was in effect three decrees consolidated into one and conferred separate divisible rights in the decree-holders which were not heritable. So that when the right of any one of the plaintiffs recognised by the decree became extinguished, the rights of the others were left intact.— 38 T. L. R., 219

Application for execution by transferee of decree.

14. Where a decree or, if a decree has been passed jointly in favour of two or more persons, the interest of any decree-holder in the decree is transferred by assignment in writing or by operation of law, the transferee may apply for execution of the decree to the Court which passed it; and the decree may be executed in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as if the application were made by such decree-holder :

Provided that, where the decree, or such interest as aforesaid, has been transferred by assignment, notice of such application shall be given to the transferor and the judgment-debtor, and the decree shall not be executed until the Court has heard their objections (if any) to its execution :

Provided also that, where a decree for the payment of money against two or more persons has been transferred to one of them, it shall not be executed against the others.

"225. Application by transferee of decree.—If a decree be transferred by assignment in writing, or by operation of law, from the decree-holder to any other person, the transferee may apply for its execution to the Court which passed it ; and, if that Court thinks fit, the decree may be executed in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as if the application were made by such decree-holder :

(a) where the decree has been transferred by assignment, notice in writing of such application shall be given to the transferor and the judgment-debtor, and the decree shall not be executed until the Court has heard their objections (if any) to such execution :

(b) where a decree for money against several persons has been transferred to one of them, it shall not be executed against the others."

2. By the omission of the words "if that Court thinks fit," the discretion of the Court in recognising the assignment of a decree, and to grant or refuse the application for execution seems to have been taken away.

Case Law.

1. No appeal lies to the Zillah Court against an order of the Munsiff refusing to recognize an assignment of a decree. No assignment of a decree is valid unless notice of the same was given to the judgment-debtor who is entitled to have his objections thereto heard. No order passed by the Court without giving him an opportunity to exercise such right could bind him. The mere recording of a petition of assignment of a decree does not entitle the assignee to sue out execution.— 3 T. L. R. App., 36.

19 T. L. J., 1113.

2. No person has a right to be substituted as decree-holder at the execution of the decree, unless the decree be transferred to him by assignment or by force of law.—
3 T. L. R. App., 43.

3. The Marumakkathayom law enables an Anandaravan to acquire by assignment special rights over the Tarwad property. The decree assigned to the Anandaravan can, at his instance, be executed against the Tarwad. The assignee not being the judgment-debtor is competent to accept the assignment from the creditor. In the case, the assignee who is the Anandaravan of the judgment-debtor is entitled to represent the judgment-creditor. In execution proceedings the question as to who supplied the assignee with funds to buy up the decree could not be gone into.—
7 T. L. R. App., 46.

4. An assignee of an appealable decree takes the rights of his assignor, subject to the condition that it may be lost or modified by the appellate Court's order. He is not a necessary party in appeal and other subsequent proceedings though he may become a party thereto to enable him to protect his own interests, but not give validity to the final decree.

The final decree in such a case passed in pursuance of the Appellate Court's order, will bind the assignee, even though he was not a party to the proceedings wherein that decree was passed.

At the date when the first defendant in the case took the assignment, the decree assigned was capable of being contested by a special appeal. On the special appeal being preferred, the matter in litigation became res sub judice and ceased to be res judicata. The decree passed, on remand, which is the final decree, is therefore the only legally operative decree, and the decree that had been passed prior to the remand ceased to be of any legal efficacy. A person, who accepts an assignment of a decree against which an appeal is preferred or which is capable of being appealed against, is bound by the decree passed by the Appellate Court. If the law was otherwise, the result would be that "suits would be interminable."—

Ref.—15 T. L. J., 312.

5. An assignee may sue in his own name without making the assignor a party, though the English Common Law is otherwise. The Courts have followed the rule of equity.

The absence of notice will not invalidate an assignment; it will validate any payment made by the debtor to the assignor in good faith, after the date of the assignment.
9 T. L. R., 81.

6. An assignee of a decree has no right to call upon the decree-debtor to pay him the judgment debt, when there is an order of Court recording satisfaction of the decree. As the plea of discharge in the case was urged within the time allowed by law to compel the decree-holder to certify payment, the Court executing the decree enquired into it, found it proved, refused to recognise the assignment and recorded satisfaction of the decree. No appeal was preferred against the order discharging the decree.— 9 T. L. R., 187.

7. An order sanctioning or refusing to sanction an assignment of decree, is final, the aggrieved party's remedy being by regular suit.

An assignment of a decree obtained by a mortgagor against a mortgagee, made to a purchaser of the mortgagor's equity of redemption at a court-sale, is a valid transaction, and not void for want of consideration.

8. A person who accepts an assignment of a decree against which an appeal is preferred, or which is capable of being appealed against, will be bound by the decree of the Appellate Court.—9 T. L. R. App., 21,

9. The assignment of a decree is invalid unless recognized by the Court executing it; and where the Court declines to sanction an assignment, the decree must be taken as standing in the name of the assignor—the decree-holder, and no objection can be raised to his executing the decree. The defendant's objection that the assignment was executed for good consideration and is binding on the decree-holder, after objecting to the assignment, is untenable. The question of consideration is a matter between the assignor and assignee.— 12 T. L. R., 132.

10. (1) Where the parties to a decree for partition are co-parceners, the assignment by any one of them, whether plaintiff or not, of his share in the property covered by the decree to another co-parcener is not invalid, there being no joint liability in respect of such share. In respect of such property co-parceners stand to each other in the position of decree-holders in respect of their own shares and of judgment-debtors regarding the share of others. Any co-parcener may move for execution of the decree, and such a decree is not governed by Clause (b) of the proviso to Section 225, C. P. C.

(2) The assignment by one judgment-debtor to another of the portion of the decree which related to costs in respect of which there was joint liability, was invalid under the provisions of Clause (b) of the proviso to Section 225, C. P. C.— 12 T. L. R., 182.

11. A sued B (his Vakil) for damages for allowing an ex parte decree assigned to him (A) to become barred by B's neligence in not applying for execution. B contended that A took the assignment of an ex parte decree and had it transferred for execution to another Court; that subsequently the Court which passed the ex parte decree set it aside on the application of the defendant in that suit and passed a fresh decree in favour of the original plaintiff which was appealed against and affirmed by the District Court; and that the second decree not having been assigned to the present plaintiff or transferred for execution had become barred through the plaintiff's omission.

Held.—An ex parte decree that had been set aside was not revived by a second decree being passed in the same terms, but was replaced or superseded by the second decree. All proceedings taken on or in respect to the first, must be considered as cancelled when the first decree was set aside; and the second decree not having been assigned to the plaintiff or transferred for execution, the defendant could not apply for execution and was, therefore, not guilty of negligence. Where a Vakil is required to perform a duty which could not be legally performed, he cannot be held liable for its non-performance.— 13 T. L. R., 122.

12. (1) The assignments of decrees are perfectly legal and recognised by the Procedure law of the State, and when the assignee is unable to get his name substituted on the execution records as a decree-holder and take out execution, the only remedy of the assignee is a regular suit for a declaration and establishment of his rights as assignee of the decree, no appeal from the execution Court refusing to recognise the assignment being allowed by law.

(2) In cases of assignment of decrees, whatever rights the assignor possessed, including the right to enforce execution by a regular suit must be considered to have passed to the assignee under the deed of assignment, unless the deed embodies the reservation of any particular right in the transferor.— 14 T. 13. A and B, becoming entitled to a mortgage lien held by T from Z on certain property, sub-mortgaged their right to X in 1060, executed another sub-mortgage to Y in 1062 without notice being given of the first sub-mortgage and assigned in 1063 the whole of their interest on the mortgage to R, the nephew of X, without making any reference to either of the two sub-mortgages in the deed of assignment. In 1067, N purchased the equity of redemption from Z, redeemed the mortgage held by R and obtained a deed of surrender which too contained no reference whatever to the sub-mortgages. R on obtaining his mortgage amount discharged Y's debt but not that of X, who, therefore, got a decree against A and B on his sub-mortgage and transferred it to R in 1071. In order to prevent the property passing into the hands of a stranger, N who knew nothing of these proceedings till R brought the property to sale, purchased it himself for a certain amount which he paid into Court and which was subsequently taken by A, B and R who are sued by N for the recovery of that amount;

Held.—(1) It was only when a sub-mortgagee was a party to a mortgage suit or was given notice of his rights, that he was, on equitable grounds, entitled to claim payment of what was due to him out of the mortgage amount.

(2) As the conduct of R in executing the decree after giving N a release deed has rendered the execution proceedings fraudulent, N was entitled to a decree as prayed for.

(3) As the actual loss accrued to N only when he had to pay R, the sub-mortgagee, a portion of the mortgage amount already paid to him as mortgagee, the cause of action arose only on the date N paid the sale amount into Court.— 15 T. L. R., 151.

14. Where a District Judge declined to recognise the assignment of a decree made in favour of the Seshakaran of the debtor:

Held.—No appeal lay against the order. But as a Court of revision, the High Court might consider the propriety of the order passed by the Judge below, and pass such order as might be deemed proper.

The fact of the assignee being the Seshakaran of the judgment-debtor is not per se sufficient to invalidate the assignment. Seshakars acquire, with their self-acquisitions, special rights over their own Tarwad property. Such rights are recognised and enforced by the Courts. If the assignment is taken for value paid by the Seshakaran out of his self-acquisition, there is no objection to its recognition by the Court; but, if it is taken in his name benami for the judgment-debtor to defraud creditors, it should not be recognized.

The Zillah Judge was directed to dispose of the appellant's application for the recognition of the assignment after hearing any evidence that might be adduced by the contending parties.— 16 T. L. R., 15.

18. A notice under Section 225 of the Civil Procedure Code is not necessarily limited to an enquiry as to the factum of assignment alone. A question of limitation may be also enquired into and decided in an application under the said Section.

A decree-debtor was served with notice to state whatever objections he had to the execution of a decree on the application of its assignee under the said Section. The decree-debtor defaulted to make his appearance and a question of limitation had to be decided against him in the enquiry as per notice.

20. The plaintiff assigned to the defendant a decree obtained by him for a consideration of Rs. 300 out of which the defendant gave a pro-note for Rs. 150 and paid the balance in cash. The defendant's application to recognise the assignment was however, dismissed. Plaintiff brought the present suit for recovering the sum due under the pro-note. Defendant contended that as the assignment had failed, the pro-note had no consideration.

Held.—As the assignment had become complete by the execution of the deed and plaintiff had done nothing in derogation of the deed, the defendant could not set up failure of consideration on the ground that the assignment was not recognised.— 25 T. L. R., 101.

21. A separate suit to declare the plaintiff's right as assignee will not lie, the proper remedy being by way of application in execution and by way of appeal.

Recognition by Court is not necessary to vest the right to execute a decree in the assignee of the same. The transfer vests the right in the plaintiff and nothing remains to be done by the transferee to complete the assignee's right to execute the decree.

An assignor of a decree is liable to refund the amount of consideration received under the deed of assignment only if there is any defect of title as regards the thing assigned or if he does something in derogation of his deed which has the effect of preventing the assignee from acquiring any right or title under the assignment.— 26 T. L. R., 67.

22. The assignment of a decree is complete without its recognition by the Court under Section 225, C. P. C.

The assignment is in fact not a sale by one who had no authority to sell, but by one who had limited authority, the completion of the title requiring the election of some person authorised by law to elect to complete the vendee's title. The contract in such cases may be suspensive in its effect as in the case of sales by the manager of a Hindu family, an agent or a minor's guardian, but is not void under Section 65 of the Contract Act. The contract not being void, a suit for refund of consideration is not maintainable either under Article 47 or 79 of the Limitation Regulation as the assignor has not received the decree amount.

Per Muthunayagom Pillai, J.—There is no cause of action for refund of consideration, merely because there has been failure of consideration in the sense that the assignee has failed in his attempts to enforce the title created by the assignment and realise the debt assigned to him.— 4 S. In the case, so far as the assignment went, the purchase and execution related to the portion of the decree that was not joint ; and therefore, the Proviso would not apply to such a transfer.— 4 S. D., 276.

24. Where the assignee of a decree from the decree-holder applied to the Court merely to recognise him as entitled thereafter to execute the decree :

26. A decree for future mesne profits obtained by the Karanavathi of a Malabar Brahmin Illom, was assigned to K. The junior members of the Illom, brought an action to set aside the deed of assignment on the ground of want of consideration. The assignee in resisting the suit contended that the validity of the assignment could not be questioned in a regular suit. The Court upholding the contention dismissed the suit. Thereupon, the validity of the assignment was fought out in execution. The execution Court found that the deed was unsupported by consideration, but it upheld the assignment on the ground that the decree-holder-assignor, as the Karnavathi of the Tarwad, was fully competent to deal with the decree regarding mesne profits, as mesne profits were nothing more than movable property belonging to the Tarwad. One of the junior members appealed against the said order. The assignee-respondent raised a preliminary objection that there was no appeal against the order passed by the lower Court and that the proper way, if any, for the appellant to obtain redress was by instituting a regular suit to set aside the assignment.

Held.—(1) Though C's proper remedy was by way of a regular suit, he not being a party to the decree and therefore not being entitled to come under Section 238, C. P. C., [new Section 40], yet as the assignee first successfully objected to the maintainability of the regular suit impeaching the validity of the assignment and contended that the matter was one which ought properly to be enquired into in execution, he was now estopped from contending that the execution Court had no jurisdiction to go into the matter.

"A party who has induced a Court to act without jurisdiction cannot be permitted when the validity of the order made for his benefit is challenged by way of appeal to take up an inconsistent position and to defeat the appeal by proof that the order was made without jurisdiction."

(2) The assignment was invalid for want of consideration; and as the assignment was alleged to have been made for consideration and as consideration was found against, it could not be upheld as a gift.—

27. A Karanavan of a Marumakkathayam Tarwad obtained a decree which made defendants 1 and 2 (two junior members of his Tarwad) and defendants 3 and 4 (strangers) liable for the costs of the litigation. He died soon after the decree and on his death, 1st defendant succeeded to the Karanavasthanam and was impleaded as plaintiff's representative. He applied to execute the decree for costs against defendants 2 to 4. The lower Court dismissed the application holding that the decree for costs being a joint decree for money against the 1st defendant and other defendants, the 1st defendant could not, in his capacity as transferee of the rights of the plaintiff by operation of law, execute the decree under Section 225, Clause (b), Civil Procedure Code.

Held.—As the 1st defendant succeeded to the Karanavasthanam not as the representative of the decree-holder, but as the representative of the Tarwad to which he belonged and as his position was not that of an assignee of the deceased 1st plaintiff by operation of law, but as the representative of the Tarwad, Section 225, Clause (b), was not applicable to the case. The position of the late decree-holder being in no way a personal one but as the agent, so to speak, of the corporate body to which he belonged and as that body still existed, the Tarwad was entitled to execute its decree by its lawful representative, the Karanavan.—

28. Whatever may be the rights of the manager or the other members of a joint Hindu family to deal with co-parcenary property, the property in decree is a peculiar kind of property and is governed solely by the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code; and, therefore, a decree cannot be assigned by any one except by the person who appears on the record as the person in whose favour the decree has been made or by some person whom the Court has by order recognised as the decree-holder from the original plaintiff or his representative.

Members of a joint Hindu family cannot be regarded as representing each other even during their life-time, so as to make each competent to validly assign decrees made in favour of any other.

An assignment of a decree made by unauthorised persons cannot be subsequently ratified by the decree-holder, when the same has not been made for and on behalf of the latter, especially when the ratification will prejudice creditors who have attached the decree before the ratification.—

29. The plaintiff assigned all his properties to another including his interest in a suit instituted by him. The joint petition also prayed that the assignee may be allowed to execute the decree.

Held,—By virtue of the admission of the decree-holder, the assignee had become a transferee by operation of law within the meaning of Section 225 of the C. P. C., and as such was entitled to execute the decree.

Per Palpu Pillai, J.—The words of Section 225 C. P. C. relating to a transfer of a decree cannot be construed so as to apply to a case where there was no decree in existence at the time of the agreement. The words 'decree-holder' must be construed as meaning decree-holder in fact and not as including a party who, in equity, may afterwards become entitled to the rights of the actual decree-holder.—36 T. 30. K, the holder of a redemption decree, died without executing it. Subsequently, there was a partition in the Tarwad of K under which the property comprised in the decree fell to the share of N. N then sold the property to P directing the latter to get herself brought on the record as the representative of the deceased decree-holder and execute the decree. P thereupon applied to execute the decree. The judgment-debtor resisted the application on the ground, among others, that the applicant's transferor had not been recognised by the executing Court.

Held,—The application for execution of the decree was competent. The transfer of a decree by an unrecognised transferee is recognised by the Court as passing good title.

Per Palpu Pillai, J.—The word "decree-holder" is wide enough to include any person to whom a decree is transferred either by assignment in writing or by operation of law.

Per Raman Tampi, J.—The Code of Civil Procedure has no provision which imperatively requires that the transferee of a decree shall, before himself assigning it, apply to the Court for recognition of his status. Section 225 merely contains an enabling provision regarding applications for execution of decrees.— 11 T. L. J., *65.

31. It is well established that the assignee of an appealable decree is affected by an adverse decision passed against the assignor affecting the decree assigned.

It would not follow from the above principle that a decision in favour of the assignor by the appellate Court would have the effect of enlarging the rights of the assignee, if all that was assgined was the limited interest of the assignor under the decree, that is the subject of the appeal. The assignee's rights under the assignment are affected by an adverse appellate decision against his assignor affecting the portion of the decree that is assigned, because the assignment is of a fluctuating interest which is finally determined only by the appellate decree, and because that decree has the effect of destroying in whole or in part the subject-matter of the assignment and not because that decision purports to construe the deed of assignment as one passing only the interest as fixed by the appellate decree. The adjudication by the Appellate Court in such a case is one between the assignor and assignee on the one hand and the judgment-debtor on the other; and as the Appellate Court finally determines the rights of the one and the liabilities of the other, the assignment attaches itself to them and ceases to be operative so far as it is in excess of them. But the case is different where the effect of the appellate decree is to enlarge the right of the assignor under the decree that has been assigned. In such a case, the question is one relating to the scope of the assignment as between the assignor and the assignee, which must be determined not by the extent of the rights and liabilities fixed by the appellate decree, but by the terms of the deed of the assignment itself. There is no reason why the rights of the assignee should be enlarged by the decree on appeal. A claim like this cannot be upheld upon a mere fanciful analogy to the principle of reciprocity.

The argument founded on the integrity and finality of the decree of the Court of appeal has also no force, as it is well established that there could be a transfer of a portion of a decree.

Under the general law, the assignment of a fund carrying interest would carry with it also the right to the interest accruing therefrom after the date of such transfer unless such rights are expressly reserved. Therefore, the assignee is entitled to interest after date of assignment.—

15 T. L. J., 312.

32. When the assignee of a decree applies for recognition of the assignment, it is open to the judgment-debtor to object on the ground that he has discharged the decree-debt to the assignor, although such discharge has not been certified to the Court.— 15 T. L. J., 379.

33. Though Section 225, C. P. C., contains only an enabling provision regarding applications for execution of decrees, there is no provision in the Code which imperatively requires the transferee to get his rights recognised by the execution Court before he acts as such.

It is open to a judgment-debtor to object to the execution on the ground that the assignment is but a benami transaction to benefit another judgment-debtor.

A defendant who is interested in the plaint property as a subsequent encumbrancer has to be deemed to be judgment-debtor within the meaning of Section 225. The judgment directing the properties to be proceeded against for the amount specified therein would be one passed against him and therefore making him a judgment-debtor as defined in Section 2 of the Code.—

16 T. L. J., 264.

34. The plaintiff obtained a decree against the first defendant (mortgagor) on the strength of a mortgage and lease. The second defendant is the puisne mortgagee. In execution, an assignment of the decree was obtained in the name of the first defendant's son, and the assignee applied for recognition of the assignment of the decree. The second defendant objected on the ground that the assignment was benami for the first defendant and that it was taken with the fraudulent object of rendering it impossible for the second defendant to recover his debt and that it should not be recognised.

Held,—The spirit of Section 225 is that one judgment-debtor should not by acquiring the interest of a decree-holder be allowed to put himself into a position in which he can force the other judgment-debtors to pay the whole of the decree amount when his proper remedy is a suit for contribution; and for this purpose it does not matter whether the assignee-decree-holder is one against whom a personal decree was passed or one who has been directed to pay the decree-amount out of the proceeds of the property in his hands.—42 T. L. R., 356 (=18 T. L. J., 85).

Ref.—19 T. L. J., 1113.

35. An application for recognition of assignment of decree, without a prayer for actual execution, is a step in aid of execution.

The provisions of Section 225 make it clear that the transferee becomes a decree-holder for the purposes of execution not by force of the assignment alone but by the added force of a recognition of the assignment by the Court.

Quaere.—Whether a prayer in an application for execution for executing the decree against the judgment-debtor will keep the decree alive against the surety also.—18 T. L. J., 916.

Doubted.—19 T. L. J., 1113.

36. So long as the transferee does not seek execution of the decree or the Court refuses to recognise the assignment, the parties to the decree are bound by the terms of the decree itself. The execution Court has no power to go behind the decree or to enter into questions beyond the scope of the decree. In such cases, the execution Court is bound to give effect to the decree as it stands on record and allow the decree-holder to execute it.—18 T. L. J., 1216.

37. Orders passed under Order XXI, Rule 14, though not appealable under Order XLII, Rule 1, fall under Section 40 and are appealable. The matter in controversy is clearly one between the parties to the decree. The order would constitute a decree as defined in Section 2 (2), and an appeal would lie from a decree in the absence of any provision to the contrary, under Section 76, Clause (1).— 19 T. L. J., 439.

38. Under Order XXI, Rule 14, an assignee in writing of the rights under a decree can apply for execution of the decree to the Court which passed it, execution having to be allowed thereon as if the original decree-holder himself had applied for the same. The use of the expressions "assignee" and "transferee" would indicate that even mortgage decrees would be transfers of decrees within the purview of the provision.

The assignment should clearly relate to the decree and the transfer must be in writing. A transferee from one of the joint decree-holders can validly apply for execution. An application by him would take effect in favour of all. If he gives up the remaining portion of the decree and execution is allowed to proceed with the other decree-holders on record, it may operate as a bar for execution with respect to the balance.

The Rule would only imply that, in case of transfers, an application for execution alone is contemplated thereunder. There is no necessity for a formal order recognising the assignment. A transferee cannot apply for the mere recognition of his right to execute his decree without asking for execution. But where an application has been made for this purpose alone and allowed, this is a step-in-aid of execution for keeping the decree alive.

Notice as provided in the Rule is imperative in such cases.

The notice contemplated under the Rule is one of application for execution and not of the assignment. What is, therefore, required under the Rule is that the application should be for execution with the assignee on record, and it is incumbent on the execution Court to issue notice of such application to the decree-holder and judgment-debtors and hear their objections, if any.

Decrees based on simple mortgages or hypothecation deeds are those for payment of money under Proviso 2 to the Rule, Procedure on receiving application for execution of decree.

15. (1) On receving an application for the execution of a deecree as provided by Rule 9, Sub-rule (2), the Court shall ascertain whether such of the requirements of Rules 9 to 12 as may be applicable to the case have been complied with; and, if they have not been complied with, the Court may reject the application, or may allow the defect to be remedied then and there or within a time to be fixed by it.

(2) Where an application is amended under the provisions of Sub-rule (1), it shall be deemed to have been an application in accordance with law and presented on the date when it was first presented.

(3) Every amendment made under this Rule shall be signed or initialled by the Judge.

(4) When the application is admitted, the Court shall enter in the proper register a note of the application and the date on which it was made, and shall, subject to the provisions hereinafter contained, order execution of the decree according to the nature of the application:

Provided that, in the case of a decree for the payment of money, the value of the property attached shall, as nearly as may be, correspond with the amount due under the decree.

It is however essential that there should be a specific direction for payment by the defendants jointly.

The objections under Proviso 1 are wider. They are intended to cover infirmative circumstances which on general principles would not justify the execution of a decree by the assignee being allowed. It is only in cases where, owing to fraud or other infirmative circumstances, which would invalidate the transaction as a whole or where the contract cannot be taken to have been a completed one or to have binding effect in the eye of the law that execution could be refused in the above Proviso: whether objections raised in a case would be admissible under this Proviso will have to be determined in the light of the principles set forth above.

Absence of consideration for assignment would not be a ground under the Proviso, if assignment is not a sham.

Where the understanding between assignor and assignee was that a recognition of the transfer should be procured to mislead third parties, the Court should refuse to aid the party guilty of participation in the fraud.

The fact that an attachment is subsisting would not per se render the assignment invalid.

Even if assignee is benamidar, his application for execution could not be refused.

Quaere.—Whether a true owner can apply for execution in the case of assignments, as to which there is a conflict of opinion.

Quaere.—Whether the second Proviso can come into operation where an assignee-decree-holder was one who had been directed to pay the decree amount out of the proceeds of property in his hands.—

"239. Procedure on receiving application for execution of decree.—The Court, on receiving an application for the execution of a decree, shall ascertain whether such of the requirements of Sections 228, 229, 230 and 231 as may be applicable to the case have been complied with; and if they have not been complied with, the Court may reject the application, or may allow it to be amended then and there, or within a time fixed by the Court. If the application be not so amended, it shall be rejected.

Every amendment made under this Section shall be attested by the signatures of the Judge and of the applicant or his vakil.

Procedure on admitting application.—When the application is admitted, the Court shall enter in the register of the suit a note of the application and the date on which it was made, and shall order execution of the decree according to the nature of the application:

Execution in case of cross-decrees.

16. (1) Where applications are made to a Court for the execution of cross-decrees in separate suits for the payment of two sums of money passed between the same parties and capable of execution at the same time by such Court, then—

(a) if the two sums are equal, satisfaction shall be entered upon both decrees; and

(b) if the two sums are unequal, execution may be taken out only by the holder of the decree for the larger sum and for so much only as remains after deducting the smaller sum, and satisfaction for the smaller sum shall be entered on the decree for the larger sum as well as satisfaction on the decree for the smaller sum.

(2) This Rule shall be deemed to apply where either party is an assignee of one of the decrees and as well in respect of judgment-debts due by the original assignor as in respect of judgment-debts due by the assignee himself.

(3) This Rule shall not be deemed to apply unless—

(a) the decree-holder in one of the suits in which the decrees have been made is the judgment-debtor in the other and each party fills the same character in both suits; and

(b) the sums due under the decrees are definite.

(4) The holder of a decree passed against several persons jointly and severally may treat it as a cross-decree in relation to a decree passed against him singly in favour of one or more of such persons.

Case Law.

1. A obtained a decree against B. B had also obtained a decree against A. The decree obtained by A was for a larger amount. C obtained a decree against B and attached the decree-debt due to B from A. C then applied to get himself impleaded as the decree-holder in the attached decree and to execute it. Notice was issued to A to show cause why the decree should not be executed after impleading C as the decree-holder. No objections having been received, the Court on 7-5-1098 passed an order :—"Attaching decree-holder is allowed to execute the decree." Notice was again issued to A to show cause why the decree should not be executed against him. A thereupon produced the decree he had obtained against B in Court and objected to the execution of the decree obtained by B against him praying for satisfaction being entered for the smaller decree.

Held (accepting the objection of A). - (1) The order of 7-5-1098 allowing execution did not operate as res judicata. The notice issued to A before that order was passed could be taken to have been issued only for the statement of objections, if any, to the impleading of the attaching creditor as the decree-holder. The issue of a second notice to A calling upon him to show cause why the decree should not be executed against him clearly supported that view.

(2) The cross-decree could be set off against the attaching creditor under Section 242, C. P. C.

(3) The pendency of an execution application relating to the decree obtained by A against B was not a necessary condition for allowing the set-off provided for by the Section. The Section contemplated only the production of the decree before the Court.

Per Venkitarama Aiyar, J.—The expression "produce" occurring in Section 242 has to be given a more liberal interpretation and not restricted to production by means of an application for execution. Rule 15 of the Civil Courts' Guide lays down the procedure to be adopted as regards the presentation of documents, &c., in Court. As such, if the decree has been produced or presented in Court in the manner prescribed by this Rule, the conditions laid down by Section 242 for claiming the benefit of its provisions should be taken to have been satisfied fully.

One of the elementary canons of intepretation of statutes is that "the grammatical and ordinary sense of the words is to be adverted to, unless that would lead to some absurdity or some repugnance or inconsistency with the rest of the statute in which case the grammatical and ordinary sense of the words may be modified so as to avoid that absurdity, repugnance or inconsistency, but no further.

Ref.—18 T. L. J., 880.

2. The essential pre-requisites for the applicability of Section 242 are :—(1) There must be more than one decree. (2) The decrees must be between the same parties. (3) One must be for a larger sum and the other for a smaller sum (if both the decrees are for the same amount satisfaction must be entered on them both). (4) The decrees must be produced in Court.

The expression "produce" in this Section has to be construed in its ordinary sense, no particular form of production being liable to be insisted upon for the purpose. If at all, the provisions of Chapter X of the Code (1065) relating to the production of documents and the standing orders issued by the High Court alone should govern such production.

Where no judicial order disposing of the execution application for the larger sum which was subject to the injunction had been passed, the decree-holder thereto has the right to the benefit of Section 242, C. P. C.— 18 T. L. J., 816.

Fol.—19 T. L. J., 1071.

3. In order that Order XXI, Rule 16, may be applied, the following essentials must be satisfied :—(1) The parties to the two decrees must fill the same character. (2) Applications for execution in both decrees must be pending. (3) Decrees in both the cases must be executable on the date of the application.

The expression "the same character," in this Rule, has the same import as that in Order VIII, Rule 8, relating to set-off. It

17. Where application is made to a Court for the execution of a decree under which two parties are entitled to recover sums of money from each other, then,—

Execution in case of cross-claims under same decree.

(a) if the two sums are equal, satisfaction for both shall be entered upon the decree ; and

(b) if the two sums are unequal, execution may be taken out only by the party entitled to the larger sum and for so much only as remains after deducting the smaller sum, and satisfaction for the smaller sum shall be entered upon the decree.

should be taken to be synonymous with capacity.

Parties cannot be said to fill the same character when in one suit they figure in their individual capacity, while in the other, they come in as trustee, manager or on behalf of their Tarwads.—

I. 1. The corresponding Section of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows :—

"243. Cross-claims under the same decree.—When two parties are entitled under the same decree to recover from each other sums of different amounts, the party entitled to the smaller sum shall not take out execution against the other party; but satisfaction for the smaller sum shall be entered on the decree, and execution shall be taken out for the balance only, by the party entitled to the larger sum.

When the amounts are equal, neither party shall take out execution, but satisfaction for each sum shall be entered on the decree."

2. The 1882 Indian Code did not contain, in Sections 246 and 247, corresponding to Sections, 242 and 243 of the Regulations, Explanation IV found in Section 242 and the words "and execution shall be taken out......to the larger sum" found in the first para of Section 243. These additions were made "to avoid various doubts which have been felt as to the effect of cross claims for different sums. Under the Sections, as thus amended, it is the duty of the Court to enter satisfaction and to issue process of execution for the balance at the instance of the party entitled to the larger sum."—

Case Law.

1. In a suit for redemption by the mortgagor, the plaintiff obtained a decree for redemption on payment of the mortgage amount, and the value of improvements to the mortgagee (defendant). The mortgagee sought to execute the decree awarding the mortgage amount and the value of improvements. The District Judge refused to proceed with the execution, on the ground that the mortgagee-defendant was not a decree-holder within the meaning of Section 223 C. P. C. [=Or. XXI, r. 8] under which it is the holder of a decree who should apply for its execution.

It was contended before the High Court on appeal that, as under the decree, the amount of mortgage and compensation of improvements were to be paid by the plaintiff to the defendant, while the latter had to pay to the former the costs of the suit, the case fell within the purview of Section 243.

Held.—In order to make Section 243 applicable the parties entitled under one decree to recover from each other, must hold the same character and possess identical rights of enforcing execution. In the case, the defendant's right to receive the mortgage amount and value of improvements is a contingent one and not absolute, and he could not claim these moneys until the mortgagor or his representative in interest seeks out execution of the decree for redemption. The decree in the case as drawn up, contained no order for unconditional payment of money by the plaintiff to the defendant, or for sale of the property in satisfaction of the mortgagee's claim. In fact, no such relief had been sought by the mortgagee-defendant, and the decree simply granted the relief claimed by the plaintiff.— 15 T. L. R., 11.

2. Plaintiff claimed the right to set off the amount of costs payable to him under the decree against the mortgage amount payable by him.

Held.—No claim for set-off arose under Section 243. The decree could not be regarded as a decree under which two parties are entitled to recover from each other sums of different amounts. The rule in Section 243 is based on the same principle as that in Section 242 [ = Or. XXI, r. 16 ]; but while the latter Section relates to several decrees, the former relates to cases where there is only one decree providing for counter-claims. It is obvious, upon the language of Section 243, that the single decree must be of such a nature that each of the two parties can, except for the prohibition contained in the rule, take out execution against the other for the amount due to him. Section 243 relates to a decree dealing with counter-claims for money, while Section 242 relates to cross decrees. Section 243 does not apply to the facts of the case.— 11 T. L. J., 398.

3. A decree for redemption of a mortgage directed the decree-holder to deposit in Court a specified amount and recover the property from defendants 1 to 4. The amount to be deposited was to be drawn by defendants 1 to 4 on production of a written consent from 5th defendant the hypothecatee. The decree-holder was to recover his costs from defendants 1 to 4.

Held.—The decree-holder was competent to set off his costs against the amount required to be deposited by him. The fact that a written consent was made a pre-requisite under the decree for the withdrawal of the deposit amount by defendants 1 to 4 did not per se stand in the way of the decree-holder claiming the benefit of Section 243, C. P. C.— 16 T. L. J., 403.

4. In a suit by reversioners to set aside alienations by a widow and to recover possession of the properties from the alienees, a decree was passed setting aside alienations and allowed the plaintiffs to recover the properties from the alienees. As regards the 15th defendant, an alienee in the case, the decree was that the plaintiffs should recover the property in his possession on payment of 5,000 Fs. and that 15th defendant should pay 600 Fs. costs to the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs applied for execution of the decree, but deposited only 4,304 Fs. instead of 5,000 Fs., the balance 696 Fs. being set off against costs from 15th defendant with interest thereon from date of deposit. The 15th defendant objected to the delivery of the property on the ground that the plaintiffs were not entitled to set off the costs. The lower Court overruled the objection and allowed execution. On appeal:

Held.—The plaintiffs could not be allowed to make the set off.

18. The provisions contained in Rules 16 and 17 shall apply to decrees for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge.

Cross-decrees and cross-claims in mortgage-suits.

The only two provisions of the Civil Procedure Code bearing on set-off are Order XXI, Rule 17 and Order XX, Rule 6. The first of these applies to cases where the decree is for the payment of some money by each party to the other. The provision can only apply to cases where each party is entitled to execute the decree in his favour. This condition is not satisfied in the case as the defendant cannot execute the decree for payment of 5,000 Rs. to him.

Order XX, Rule 6, vests a discretion in certain cases to make a specific direction to set off the costs. Where no such discretion is made by the Court, the set-off cannot be allowed.

It has been held in British India that the only principle on which set-off in execution can be allowed independently of the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, is that Courts may allow it on grounds of justice, equity and good conscience.

It is however doubtful whether this principle can be made applicable to execution proceedings. But even if this principle is accepted, the case is not one for its application, as the circumstances are covered by Order XX, Rule 6 (3).—

5. In order that Order XXI, Rule 17, might apply, there must be a decree in favour of the defendant which is executable by him against the plaintiff. A decree for recovery of property on condition of the plaintiff depositing the value of improvements cannot be said to be such a decree in favour of the defendant which he can execute.

"Order XXI, Rule 19, (British Code), applies, however, to cases where an application is made to a Court for the execution of a decree under which two parties are entitled to recover sums of money from each other. A vendee against whom a decree for pre-emption has been obtained subject to the payment of the purchase-money within a certain time is not a person entitled to recover that purchase money from the plaintiff. It is open to the plaintiff to pay that money if he chooses to enforce his pre-emptive right within the time allowed by the decree or withhold payment and allow the decree to lapse. If he adopts the latter course, the defendant-vendee cannot compel him to make the payment or seek to recover the purchase money by an application for execution. He may be able to recover the costs, if any, awarded to him against the plaintiff, but he cannot compel the plaintiff to take advantage of his pre-emptive right." (74 I. C. 553).—

I. This Rule is the same as the Rule in the British Indian Code. The latter was inserted by the Indian Select Committee "in order to make it clear that the provisions as to cross-decrees and cross-claims apply to the case of mortgage-decrees. The Rule also makes it clear that the expression 'decree for the payment of money' and other similar expressions in the Code do not include a decree for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge."—India Gazette dated 15-2-1908, Pt. Simultaneous execution.

19. The Court may, in its discretion, refuse execution at the same time against the person and property of the judgment-debtor.

Notice to show cause against execution in certain cases.

20. (1) Where an application for execution is made—

(a) more than one year after the date of the decree, or

(b) against the legal representative of a party to the decree, the Court executing the decree shall issue a notice to the person against whom execution is applied for requiring him to show cause, on a date to be fixed, why the decree should not be executed against him :

Provided that no such notice shall be necessary in consequence of more than one year having elapsed between the date of the decree and the application for execution if the application is made within one year from the date of the last order against the party against whom execution is applied for, made on any previous application for execution, or in consequence of the application being made against the legal representative of the judgment-debtor, if upon a previous application for execution against the same person the Court has ordered execution to issue against him.

Case Law.

1. A decree-holder applied for issue of warrant and attachment of property. On this application, the Court's order granted the attachment, but was silent as to warrant of arrest. A claim by a third party followed the attachment, and subsequently further proceedings in connection with the attached properties were stopped. More than four years after the disposal of the application for arrest, the decree-holder renewed his application for arrest.

Held.—When the prayer for attachment was granted and that for arrest not, the natural presumption, in the absence of anything to the contrary, was that the latter prayer was refused. The subsequent application for arrest was consequently barred by time — 15 T. L. R., 9.

I. 1. Sub-Rule (1).—In the Proviso, the words "of any decree passed on appeal from the decree sought to be executed or" which occurred after the words "within one year from the date" in the corresponding Proviso of the old Section 244 have been omitted.

2. The Indian Special Committee observe :—

"The Committee have omitted the reference to a decree passed on appeal, for that is ordinarily the decree to be executed. [Kristo Kinkur Roy V. Rajah Burrodacaunt Roy (14 Moo. I. A., 465) and Muhammad Sulaiman Khan V. Muhammad Yar Khan (I. L. R., 11 All., 267) ]."

II. For Form of Notice to show cause why execution should not issue, see Appendix E, Form No. 7.

Case Law.

1. If the notice to show cause against the execution of the decree was not legally served on the defendant, his remedy would be to get the order of the execution Court reviewed on that ground and not to raise it in a fresh suit (F. B.).— 10 T. L. J., 387.

2. The decree-holder presented an application for execution of the decree against the judgment-debtor's legal representatives on the 26th Dhanu 1093 and also prayed by his execution application for the issue of notice to them. Notice was issued, and ultimately, after proclamation of sale, the 5th Vrischigom 1094 was fixed as the date for the sale in Court. On that date the legal representatives appeared in Court and objected to the sale taking place on the allegation that no notice in terms of Section 244, Clause (b), of the C. P. C., had been served upon them, and that consequently, the order for sale was null and void. On the 12th Vrischigom 1094, the decree-holder presented an application for the issue of notice in the terms of Section 244; but the Munsiff held that an application for the issue of such notice should be made by the presentation of a fresh execution form; and on the same day he summarily rejected the execution application of the 26th Dhanu 1093. On appeal, the District Judge set aside the order of the Munsiff. On second appeal by the legal representatives of the judgment-debtor :

Held.—A notice under Section 244 is necessary in order that the Court should obtain jurisdiction to sell property by way of execution as against the legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor. The language of the Section makes it clear that it is the duty of the Court to issue the necessary notice under that Section when the judgment-creditor has asked for the execution of the decree against the legal representatives of the deceased judgment-debtor.

In the case, the judgment-creditor by his execution application of the 26th Dhanu 1093 asked for execution against the judgment-debtor's representatives and also prayed for the issue of notice to them. There was nothing further that he had to do in the matter of his application, and if the Court did not issue a notice in the terms of Section 244, the judgment-creditor was not to blame. The maxim of the law is actuo curiae neminem gravabit. When he was apprized of the defect in the notice, he at once moved the Court for the issue of a notice in due form; nevertheless the execution Court would not do what it was already bound to have done under the law. It seems difficult, in these circumstances, to hold that the judgment-creditor could be made to suffer.

"Procedure is but the machinery of the law after all—the channel and means whereby law is administered and justice reached. It strangely departs from its proper office when, in place of facilitating, it is permitted to obstruct and even extinguish legal rights, and is thus made to govern where it ought to subserve." Courts should look to the essential justice of the case without considering whether matters of form have been strictly attended to.

The representatives of the deceased judgment-debtor having already appeared and contested the decree-holder's right to execute the decree, no fresh notice need issue to them. Execution should be proceeded with in due course of law after hearing the representatives in answer, as if notice under Section 244 had been served on them.—

3. In the course of execution of a decree for money, two items of property belonging to one of the defendants (who had died since the passing of the decree) having been sold in court-auction, his widow applied to the Court for the cancellation of the sale. The Court set aside the sale on the ground, among others, that, before impleading the legal representative of the deceased 5th defendant, judgment-debtor, a notice under Section 244 had not been issued to the persons sought to be impleaded. On appeal by the heir of the 14th defendant (auction-purchaser of one of the items):

Held.—The omission to issue a notice under Section 244 was sufficient to make the subsequent proceedings in execution void and of no effect.— 38 T. L. R., 318

Ref.—19 T. L. J., 1113.

4. Civil Circular No. 13 of 1060 read with Civil Circular No. 10 of 1070, Paragraph (4), would indicate that a specific order for the payment of the process fee is necessary to enable the Court to strike off the exection application for default for non-payment of the same within eight days of that date. With respect to sales of immovable properties, Civil Circular No. 69 of 1075 requires affidavits and encumbrance certificates to be filed along with the proclamation schedule to enable the Court to settle the same. In a case where the issue of notice under Section 244 is applied for, preliminary to other steps in execution, a specific order requiring the party to file the proclamation schedule along with the necessary enclosures is essential before proceeding to dispose of the same. Even if the application containing the prayer for sale is found defective, the same should be returned or the additional statements or papers required to be produced within a time fixed by the Court. I. The corresponding Sections of the old Regulation were as follow :—

"246. Warrant when to issue.—When the preliminary measures (if any) required by the foregcing provisions have been taken, the Court, unless it sees cause to the contrary, shall, subject to the provisions of Sections 240 and 241 issue its warrant for the execution of the decree."

"247. Date, signature, seal and delivery.—Such warrant shall be dated the day on which it is issued, signed by the Judge, or such officer as the Court appoints in this behalf, sealed with the seal of the Court and delivered to the proper officer to be executed.

And a day shall be specified in such warrant on or before which it must be executed, and the proper officer shall endorse thereon the day and manner in which it was executed, or, if it was not executed, the reason why it was not executed, and shall return it with such endorsement to the Court from which it issued."

II. For the word "warrant" in the old Sections, the word "process" has been substituted "as being more exhaustive and familiar".— India Gazette dated 21-3-1903, Pt. VI.

Case Law.

1. No Court is ordinarily competent to execute its process outside the limits of its local jurisdiction, and the only way in which it could invoke the assistance of the Court competent to execute the process, is by transferring the execution of the decree itself to such latter Court (F. B.).—

2. An application for execution of a decree was made more than three years after the last application for the same, but within three years from the date of the order for

23. (1) The officer entrusted with the execution of the process shall endorse thereon the day on, and the manner, in which it was executed, and, if the latest day specified in the process for the return thereof has been exceeded, the reason of the delay, or, if it was not executed, the reason why it was not executed, and shall return the process with such endorsement to the Court.

warrant passed upon the last application. Notice was issued to the defendant to show cause why the application should not be granted. No objection having been taken by the defendant, his property was attached, though not sold in consequence of claims preferred by third parties. More than a year after the execution of the warrant of attachment, the defendant filed an objection that the decree was barred at the time of the last application for execution.

Held.—The plea of bar was too late. The defendant not having appealed against the order for attachment, it has become final and the said order whether right or wrong determined that the decree was not barred. The proper time for raising the objection was when notice of the application was issued to the defendant.—

3. Where the Court had ordered a process for execution of a decree to issue on an application by the decree-holder, the legal presumption is that the decree was not barred at the date of the order, as it is always the duty of the Courts to ascertain whether execution is barred, before passing such an order. The debtor's silence as to limitation only strengthens this presumption.—

4. The omission to affix the Court seal to a warrant for the arrest of a judgment-debtor renders the warrant void, and the arrest of the judgment-debtor under an unsealed warrant being consequently illegal, resistance to such arrest is justifiable on the ground of self-defence, and is therefore not punishable.— 4 T. L. J., 71.

5. On an application for execution of a decree presented by the assignee-decree-holder, the Court on 16-8-1091 ordered notice to issue to the other side to show cause why the assignment of the decree should not be recognised. On the 19th of that month, the Court took up the application and passed the order striking it off.

Held.—The order could not be treated as one due to the default of the applicant, for, under Civil Circular No. 13 of 1060, he had eight days' time to pay the process fees and the order was passed within three days. It could not, therefore, be treated as an order judicially and finally disposing of the application.— 17 T. L. J., 926.

Section 247 of the old Regulation, while Sub-Rule (2) is stated as new.

A comparison, however, of the Rule with Section 333 shows that Sub-Rule (1) is a reproduction of the first Para of that Section and Sub-Rule (2) reproduces the second Para omitting the words "on oath" which occurred after the words "examine him" and adding the words "and may, if it thinks fit......record the result."

In the above circumstance, Rule 23 may be taken as corresponding to the old Section 333, and the portion of the second Para of Section 247 not incorporated in Sub-Rule (3) of the previous Rule (22) may be taken as dropped.

It may be noted that in the comparative Table A, the entry against the old Section 333 is 'omitted.'

The first Court allowed the suit, but the District Judge on appeal eventually dismissed the suit on the ground that a suit for setting aside a decree should be brought in the Court that passed the decree.

Held.—The District Judge was right. The policy of the law is to compel parties against whom a decree of one Court had been, at the instance of that Court, executed by another Court, to prefer their objections to the validity of the decree to the Court which passed it, and not to allow Courts of equal or inferior status to sit in judgment over one another. This policy would be defeated if the party against whom a decree is passed by one Court is to be allowed to impeach that decree by means of a fresh suit in another Court.

No claim for damages would lie, as the amount had been recovered under a subsisting decree, which not having been set aside, the debt created by it should be regarded as genuine debt.— 18 T. L. R., 14.

Held.—Section 237 was very generally worded and did not preclude one of several judgment-debtors from taking advantage of its provision if he had brought a suit formally against the decree-holder. In such a case, the Court ought to stay execution of the former decree only as against the judgment-debtor who was the plaintiff in the new suit and not against all the judgment-debtors of the former suit. It should also (unless in exceptional cases where the new suit is almost bound to be successful) put the applicant for stay of execution on terms. 4 S. D., 380.

3. An application for execution of a hypothecation decree (O. S. No. 9 of 1078) by sale of the hypotheca was made on 23-7-1078, and the hypotheca was proclaimed to be sold on 26-10-1078. On 20-10-1078, an application under Section 237, C. P. C., was made in O. S. No. 59 of 1078 (a suit brought by the co-sharers of the judgment-debtor in O. S. No. 9 of 1078, praying for the stay of the sale, and on 21-10-1078, the sale was ordered to be stayed pending the disposal of the application under Section 237. On 29-10-1078 when the interim order staying the sale was in force, the application for execution, viz., that dated 23-7-1078, was rejected with costs. But in finally disposing of the application dated 20-10-1078, made under Section 237, the Court on 30-10-1078 ordered that the sale should be stopped pending the disposal of O. S. No. 59 of 1078, only in respect of the shares of the plaintiffs in that suit. The decree-holder in O. S. No. 9 of 1078 revived his application for execution on 27-5-1085. The Zillah Judge threw out the application. In appeal, it was contended on behalf of the judgment-debtor that the second application, having been made more than six years after disposal of the prior application, was barred.

Held.—The subsequent application was only a continuation of the previous application, and therefore was not barred on the principle, that when an illegal order was set aside, the parties were necessarily restored to their former position.

An application for execution of a decree may be treated as in continuation or revival of a previous application, similar in scope and character, the consideration of which has been interrupted by the intervention of objections and claims subsequently proved to be groundless or has been suspended by reason of an injunction or like obstruction.— 2 T. "250. Decree for money.—Every decree or order directing a party to pay money, as compensation or costs, or as the alternative to some other relief granted by the decree or order, or otherwise, may be enforced by the imprisonment of the judgment-debtor, or by the attachment and sale of his property in manner hereinafter provided, or by both."

III. For Form of warrant of attachment of movable property in execution of a decree for money, see Appendix E, Form No. 8.

Case Law.

1. (1) A decree of Court is no doubt property that can be attached under Section 263 [ new Section 52 ] of the C. P. C., and it (the decree) falls under the description of "other property" in that Section. The mode of attachment depends upon the nature of the decree sought to be attached; if it is a simple decree for money, the attachmen should be made under Section 270 [Or. XXI, r. 51]. The provisions therein contained should be strictly complied with to make the attachment complete and legally valid. If it is a decree for either immovable property or for money charged on specific immovable property, the attachment should be made according to the provisions of Section 271.

(2) A regularly perfected attachment is an essential preliminary to sales in execution of simple decrees for money, and where there has been no such attachment, any sale that may have taken place is not simply voidable but de facto void.—

Ex.—20 T. L. R., 165.

2. It is an elementary principle of law that the property attached or distressed, should be proportionate to the amount of the demand.— 6 T. L. R., 90.

3. The procedure to be followed by a judgment-creditor to realise the debts due to his judgment-debtor is quite different from that laid down for the attachment and sale of immovable property.

As no attachment of the debt due to the judgment-debtor (2nd defendant), was made in the manner prescribed, his debtor was at liberty to pay, and the 2nd defendant to receive, it at any time.— 6 T. L. R., 119.

4. So far as the judgment-debtor is concerned nothing short of the satisfaction of the decree, in execution of which the attachment was made would release the property from attachment. The Civil Procedure Code contains no provision for the release of attached property, if not brought to sale within a prescribed time.—

5. The attachment by Courts of property, movable or immovable, in execution of a decree simply creates a lien, and does not of itself vest the right to the property or thing attached in the attaching creditor. Something more than mere attachment is needed to vest the property or right in the thing attached in the execution-creditor (F. B.).— 10 T. L. R., 128.

6. An attachment of property made in execution of a decree continued in force, under the old Limitation Regulation, until it is removed or superseded. It operates de die in diem as process of execution upon the decree, and at any time further process for the sale of the property might be issued upon the attachment (F. B.).

Per Ormsby, J.—The effect of an attachment is to render all private alienations of the property attached, whether by sale, gift or otherwise during the continuance of the attachment, void.

An attachment of immovable property once made can only be removed by the express order of the Court issuing the attachment or by sale of the attached property.— 11 T. L. R., 13.

7. A mortgage lien is immovable property and its attachment and sale as movable property would confer no valid title on the purchaser thereof. [The Report states that the ruling in A. S. No. 194 of 1063—IX T. L. R., P. 81 has been applied to this case. This is a mistake for VI T. L. R., p. 81. The case published on page 81 of IX T. L. R., is S. A. No. 61 of 1066 and refers to the right of an assignee to sue without impleading the assignor ].— 11 T. L. R., 202.

(=14 T. L. J., 432).

8. The effect of attachment under the Procedure Code is seizure, or taking into judicial custody, of the property by Court. The property is, as it were, held by the Court in its custody for the benefit of the creditor at whose instance the attachment takes place.— 11 T. L. R., 213.

9. The attachment of property made in execution of a decree comes to an end the moment the whole amount due under it is paid into Court. The object of an attachment is to compel the debtor to pay up the judgment-debt. After the payment of the debt, the continuance of the attachment would be unjust and meaningless. The law does not require the formal withdrawal of attachment on payment made into Court, but leaves it to the parties to determine in each case whether they should obtain an order declaring that the attachment was at end.— 12 T. L. R., 23.

10. An attaching creditor does not "get" the property attached, but only seeks to realise the decree-debt by sale of the property. The creditor may or may not be the eventual purchaser of the property. The right derived by the decree-holder under the attachment is simply to prohibit private alienation of the property by the debtor until the decree-debt is paid and discharged. No sooner the debt is paid than the creditor ceases to have anything to do with the property.— 12 T. L. R., 188.

11. Where one mode of attachment is prescribed by law, and another method is followed, the improper mode of attachment has to be considered as a material irregularity. Such irregularity alone will not vitiate a sale held in pursuance of the attachment. To set aside a sale in execution of a decree, substantial injury in addition to material irregularity must be established (F. B.).— 20 T. L. R., 165.

Appl.—8 T. L. J., 354.
Ex.— 18 T. L. J., 726.
Ref.— 19 T. L. J., 1113.

12. An omission to adopt any one of the steps to be taken in execution is only a material irregularity and a sale so made is not invalid unless substantial injury to the judgment-debtor is affirmatively shown (21 Cal. 66).

An attachment is a measure resorted to for the protection of the decree-holder and purchaser against intermediate alienations. After a Court-sale had been confirmed and a sale certificate granted to the purchaser, the sale is not to be considered a nullity merely by reason of the absence of attachment (18 Cal., 188).— 20 T. IV. Section 259 of the Indian Code of 1882 (corresponding to Section 256 of Regulation II of 1065), had a provision for decrees for the recovery of wives. In the new Indian Code of 1908, reference to such a decree has been omitted. The Indian Special Committee who omitted it, said :—"There can be no such decree under the law, as a wife cannot be treated as a chattel to be delivered over to the husband. Where any third person prevents the wife from returning to her husband, the latter may obtain an injunction against him which may be enforced in case of disobedience by the imprisonment of the defendant, or by the attachment of his property or by both."

(5) Where a decree for the specific performance of a contract or for an injunction has not been obeyed, the Court may, in lieu of or in addition to all or any of the processes aforesaid, direct that the act required to be done may be done so far as practicable by the decree-holder or some other person appointed by the Court, at the cost of the judgment-debtor, and upon the act being done the expenses incurred may be ascertained in such manner as the Court may direct and may be recovered as if they were included in the decree.

A, in spite of his detention in prison and the attachment of his property, declines to obey a decree obtained against him by B and directing him to remove the building. B may apply to the Court to remove the building and may recover the cost of such removal from A in the execution proceedings.

I. Sub-Rule (1).—1. The corresponding Para 1 of Section 257 of the old Regulation was as follows :—

" When the party against whom a decree for the specific performance of a contract, or for restitution of conjugal rights, or for the performance of, or abstention from, any other particular act, has been made, has had an opportunity of obeying the decree or injunction and has wilfully failed to obey it, the decree may be enforced by his imprisonment, or by the attachment of his property, or by both."

2. The corresponding Sub-Rule (1) of the British Indian Code has been amended by Act XXIX of 1923, which has added the following words after the word "enforced":—"in the case of a decree for restitution of conjugal rights by the attachment of his property or, in the case of a decree for the specific performance of a contract or for an injunction."

II. Sub-Rule (3).—1. The words "one year" have been substituted for "six months." See under previous Rule.

2. "Shall pay" has been substituted for "may pay."

2. The words "or, if made, has been refused" have been substituted for the words "and granted."

3. The following words which occurred at the end, after the words "shall cease" have been omitted :—"to exist and the property shall be returned on application to the person from whom it was taken."

IV. 1. Sub-Rule (5).—1. "This is a new provision, and provides a remedy in cases such remedy is deemed applicable. The illustration makes it clear in what cases such remedy may be resorted to."—

3. Rule 30 of Order XLII of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, to which Sub-Rule (5) corresponds, is as follows :—

"If a mandamus, granted in an action or otherwise, or a mandatory order, injunction, or judgment for the specific performance of any contract be not complied with, the Court or a Judge, besides or instead of proceedings against the disobedient party for contempt, may direct that the act required to be done may be done so far as practicable by the party by whom the judgment or order has been obtained, or some other person appointed by the Court or Judge, at the cost of the disobedient party, and upon the act being done, the expenses incurred may be ascertained in such manner as the Court or a Judge may direct, and execution may issue for the amount so ascertained, and costs.".

Case Law.

1. Where in execution of a decree for restitution of conjugal rights against the wife, the latter set up the plea that she had divorced the plaintiff :

Held.—The divorce was of no avail if it was before the date of the decree.

If the divorce was after the decree, the defendant could set it up in execution under Section 238 C. P. C., [new Section 4C] as discharging the decree. The appeal must fail as the evidence showed that the divorce was after date of decree and it was a valid one.— K. P., 296.

2. The plaintiff, a Makkathayam Hindu, alleging that his wife, a girl of 18 years of age, was being wrongfully kept back from him by defendant, her grandmother, sued for recovery of the wife. The District Judge being of opinion that without impleading the wife as a party defendant, an effective decree could not be passed, directed amendment of the plaint on impleading her. It was contended by the defendant in appeal that the addition of the wife as a party altered the nature of the suit and that as the order for amendment was made after the examination of some witnesses, it was irregular.

Held.-(1) Under the Civil Procedure Code there is no provision for the execution of a decree for the recovery of a wife. Section 257 of the Code only provides for decrees for restitution (which includes institution) of conjugal rights. The old British Indian Code of 1882 contained a provision (Section 259) for the execution of a decree for the recovery of a wife; but the new Code of 1908 has omitted it. (For reasons see under previous Rule). The plaint in effect was one asking for a direction being made for the wife's joining her husband, the defendant who obstructs such return being enjoined to refrain from opposing it. For the granting of that relief the wife should be a party to the suit and such amendment did not materially alter the nature of the suit.

(2) Courts are to act with considerable liberality in the matter of granting amendments and ought to correct all kinds of errors or mistakes which are not fraudulent or intended to over-reach the Court.—

Ref.—14 T. L. J., 543.
16 T. L. J., 517.

3. A valid divorce by the wife, made subsequent to the date of the decree in plaintiff's favour for restitution of conjugal rights, could be successfully pleaded in bar to the execution of the decree.

31. (1) Notwithstanding anything in Rule 30, the Court, either at the time of passing a decree for the restitution of conjugal rights or at any time afterwards, may order that the decree shall not be executed by detention in prison.

Discretion of Court in executing decrees for restitution of conjugal rights.

(2) Where the Court has made an order under Sub-rule (1) and the decree-holder is the wife, it may order, that, in the event of the decree not being obeyed within such period as may be fixed in this behalf, the judgment-debtor shall make to the decree-holder such periodical payments as may be just, and, if it thinks fit, require that the judgment-debtor shall, to its satisfaction, secure to the decree-holder such periodical payments.

(3) The Court may from time to time vary or modify any order made under Sub-rule (2) for the periodical payment of money, either by altering the times of payment or by increasing or diminishing the amount, or may temporarily suspend the same as to the whole or any part of the money so ordered to be paid, and again revive the same, either wholly or in part as it may think just.

(4) Any money ordered to be paid under this Rule may be recovered as though it were payable under a decree for the payment of money.

A marriage, contracted between members of the Makkathayee Ezhavas of South Travancore, could be dissolved at the pleasure of either party. The customary requisites for a valid divorce, among the community, were the meeting of the caste-men and the settlement of the marital claims in their presence with the return of the 'Tali' or 'Mangalyam'.— 34 T. L. R., 65.

Or. XXI, r. 31 [ = „ = Or. XXI, r. 38 ]

I. 1. "This Rule provides for new methods of working out a decree for restitution of conjugal rights. In such matters, the Court should have large powers of control over the parties and be in a position not to send an unwilling wife, for instance, to prison, and to provide for the support of a wife, who has obtained a decree for restitution."

2. This Rule was taken from the Matrimonial Clauses Act, 1884 (47 and 48 Vict., C. 68, Secs. 2-4).

II. In proposing this provision, it was observed as follows in the Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the amending India Bill of 1901:—"Under the Code as it now stands, a Court cannot refuse to execute a decree for the restitution of conjugal rights by the attachment of the person or property of a recalcitrant judgment-debtor; but in England this mode of execution has been put an end to by the enactment of the Matrimonial Clauses Act (47 & 48 Vict., c. 68). It is thought that some relaxation of the provision in force in India is desirable, but it is extremely doubtful whether it should go so far as this. The question is of great difficulty and delicacy, and for the present it is proposed tentatively Decree for execution of document or endorsement of negotiable instrument.

32. (1) Where a decree is for the execution of a document or for the endorsement of a negotiable instrument and the judgment-debtor neglects or refuses to obey the decree, the decree-holder may prepare a draft of the document or endorsement in accordance with the terms of the decree and deliver the same to the Court.

(2) The Court shall thereupon cause the draft to be served on the judgment-debtor together with a notice requiring his objections (if any) to be made within such time as the Court fixes in this behalf.

(3) Where the judgment-debtor objects to the draft, his objections shall be stated in writing within such time, and the Court shall make such order approving or altering the draft, as it thinks fit.

(4) The decree-holder shall deliver to the Court a copy of the draft with such alterations (if any) as the Court may have directed upon the proper stamp paper if a stamp is required by the law for the time being in force; and the Judge or such officer as may be appointed in this behalf shall execute the document so delivered.

only to give the Courts discretion in the matter and to enable them to follow a procedure slightly adapted from the English practice in the cases in which attachment and imprisonment appear inappropriate."—

India Gazette dated 21-12-1901, Pt. V.

III. The British Indian Rule has since been amended as follows by Act XXIX of 1923 :-

1. In Sub-Rule (1), the words "against a husband" have been inserted after the words "passing a decree".

The words "shall be executed in the manner provided in this Rule" have been substituted for the words "shall not be executed by detention in prison".

2. In Sub-Rule (2), the words "and the decree-holder is the wife" which occurred after the words "under Sub-Rule (1)" have been omitted.

I. 1. Throughout, the word "document" has been substituted for "conveyance."

2. The Paras of Section 258 corresponding to Sub-Rules (3) and (4) were as follow :—

(5) The execution of a document or the endorsement of a negotiable instrument under this Rule may be in the following form, namely :—

"C. D., Judge of the Court of

(or as the case may be), for A. B., in a suit by E. F. against A. B.", and shall have the same effect as the execution of the document or the endorsement of the negotiable instrument by the party ordered to execute or endorse the same.

(6) The Court, or such officer as it may appoint in this behalf, shall cause the document to be registered if its registration is required by the law for the time being in force or the decree-holder desires to have it registered, and may make such order as it thinks fit as to the payment of the expenses of the registration.

Decree for immovable property.

33. (1) Where a decree is for the delivery of any immovable property, possession thereof shall be delivered to the party to whom it has been adjudged, or to such person as he may appoint to receive delivery on his behalf, and, if necessary, by removing any person bound by the decree who refuses to vacate the property.

"The decree-holder may also tender a duplicate of the draft to the Court for execution, upon the proper stamp-paper if a stamp is required by law.

On proof of such service, the Court or such officer as it appoints in this behalf shall execute the duplicate so tendered, or may, if necessary, alter the same, so as to bring it into accordance with the terms of the decree and execute the duplicate so altered :

Provided that, if any party object to the draft so served as aforesaid, his objection shall, within the time so fixed, be stated in writing and argued before the Court, and the Court shall thereupon pass such order as it thinks fit, and execute, or alter and execute, the duplicate in accordance therewith."

II. The Indian Special Committee observed that "Section 261 has been recast so as to bring it into conformity with the chronological order of events, and a provision has been added to meet the requirements of the Indian Registration Act."

III. For Form of Notice to state objections to draft of document, see Appendix E, Form No. 10.

(2) Where a decree is for the joint possession of immovable property, such possession shall be delivered by affixing a copy of the warrant in some conspicuous place on the property and proclaiming by beat of drum, or other customary mode, at some convenient place, the substance of the decree.

(3) Where possession of any building or enclosure is to be delivered and the person in possession, being bound by the decree, does not afford free access, the Court through its officers, may, after giving reasonable warning and facility to any woman not appearing in public according to the customs of the country to withdraw, remove or open any lock or bolt or break open any door or do any other act necessary for putting the decree-holder in possession.

"248. If the property sold shall consist of land or other immovable property in the occupancy of ryots or other persons entitled to occupy the same, the Court shall order delivery thereof to be made by affixing a copy of the certificate of sale in some conspicuous place on the land or other immovable property, and proclaiming to the occupants of the property by beat of drum, or in such other mode as may be customary, at some convenient place or places, that the right, title, and interest of the defendant has been transferred to the purchaser."]

2. Per Raman Menon, C. J.—The effect of delivery in execution of a decree for immovable property [see Sections 260 and 261] in the mode prescribed by law is to vest legal possession in the decree-holder, as between himself and the person or persons against whom the decree has been passed.

If after the delivery the judgment-debtor remains or goes on the property without the permission of the decree-holder, he commits trespass. Whether it would be criminal trespass or not, would depend on the presence or absence of the requisite mens rea.

Per Muthunayagom Pillai, J.—The delivery of possession of property in execution of decree for the same even if it were only formal, has the effect of determining the previous possession of the persons against whom the decree was passed. Therefore, if being aware of the delivery, they enter upon the property after such delivery, it

34. Where a decree is for the delivery of any immovable property in the occupancy of a tenant or other person entitled to occupy the same and not bound by the decree to relinquish such occupancy, the Court shall order delivery to be made by affixing a copy of the warrant in some conspicuous place on the property, and proclaiming to the occupant by beat of drum or other customary mode, at some convenient place, the substance of the decree in regard to the property:

Provided that, if the occupant can be found, a notice in writing containing such substance shall be served upon him, and in such case no proclamation need be made.

Arrest and detention in the civil prison.

Discretionary power to permit judgment-debtor to show cause against detention in prison.

35. (1) Notwithstanding anything in these Rules, where an application is for the execution of a decree for the payment of money by the arrest and detention in the civil prison of a judgment-debtor who is liable to be arrested in pursuance of the application, the Court may, instead of issuing a warrant for his arrest, issue a notice calling upon him to appear before the Court on a day to be specified in the notice and show cause why he should not be committed to the civil prison.

(2) Where appearance is not made in obedience to the notice, the Court shall, if the decree-holder so requires, issue warrant for the arrest of the judgment-debtor.

be orally examined as to whether any or what debts are owing to the judgment-debtor and whether the judgment-debtor has any and what other property or means of satisfying the decree; and the Court may make an order for the attendance and examination of such judgment-debtor, or officer or other person, and for the production of any books or documents.

Attachment in case of decree for rent or mesne profits or other matter, amount of which to be subsequently determined.

40. Where a decree directs an inquiry as to rent or mesne profits or any other matter, the property of the judgment-debtor may, before the amount due from him has been ascertained, be attached, as in the case of an ordinary decree for the payment of money.

Attachment of movable property other than agricultural produce, in possession of judgment-debtor.

41. Where the property to be attached is movable property, other than agricultural produce, in the possession of the judgment-debtor, the attachment shall be made by actual seizure, and the attaching officer shall keep the property in his own custody or in the custody of one of his subordinates, and shall be responsible for the due custody thereof:

Provided that, when the property seized is subject to speedy and natural decay, or when the expense of keeping it in custody is likely to exceed its value, the attaching officer may sell it at once.

I. Section 264 of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows:—

"264. Power to summon and examine persons as to property liable to be seized.—The Court may, of its own motion or on the application of the decree-holder, summon any person whom it thinks necessary, and examine him in respect to any property liable to be seized in satisfaction of the decree, and may require the person summoned to produce any document in his possession or power relating to such property, and, before issuing the summons of its own motion, shall declare the person on whose behalf the summons is so issued."

"251. Decree for mesne profits or other matter, amount of which to be subsequently ascertained.—If the decree be for mesne profits or any other matter, the amount of which in money is to be subsequently determined, the property of the judgment-debtor may, before the amount due from him under the decree has been ascertained, be attached as in the case of an ordinary decree for money."

II. The provisions contained in Rules 42 and 43, are among the material alterations made in the Code relating to execution. The British Indian Rules are adopted in toto. The following observations, made in the Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the amending Indian Bill of 1901 and the Select Committee Report thereon explain the nature of the provisions and the principles underlying them. It may be stated that the provisions were inserted in the Bill with the approval of the Government of India. The Select Committee who reported on that Bill modified the provisions; and the Indian Special Committee reproduced them as amended by the Select Committee.

1. "Growing crops will no longer be treated as immovable property, but will fall within the purview of the simpler remedies provided in the case of movables. At the same time, a measure of protection will be extended to agriculturist judgment-debtors by providing for the exemption by the Local Government of a proportion of their crops from attachment."— S. O & R.

2. The Notes on Clauses said :—

"The inclusion of growing crops in the category of movable property will remove perhaps the most valuable assets of the country from the operation of the cumbrous procedure rendering their effective attachment almost impossible and will subject them to the short and sharp process of seizure. In the interests, however, both of creditor and debtor, some special provisions are demanded by the peculiar character of the subject. In order to secure to both parties the fullest value from the property attached, the crop must be allowed to mature in the usual course of husbandry, and actual seizure must, therefore, take the shape of such arrangements for custody as the Court may deem sufficient, having regard to the variety of local conditions of tillage and the nature of the products affected. In this connection, however, the experience gathered from the working of Sub-section (1) (g) of Section 122 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1855, discloses that the decree-holder can and should be required to inform the Court, in his application, of the time at which the crop is likely to be cut or gathered. On the analogy of Section 126 of the same enactment, which has its counterpart in the rent-law of other Provinces, it is proposed to empower the judgment-debtor to continue to perform all acts of husbandry and, if he endeavours to defeat the attachment by neglecting the crop, the decree-holder will be authorised to intervene and

44. (1) In the case of—

Attachment of debt, share and other property not in possession of judgment-debtor.

(a) a debt not secured by a negotiable instrument,
(b) a share in the capital of a corporation,
(c) other movable property not in the possession of the judgment-debtor, except property deposited in, or in the custody of, any Court, the attachment shall be made by a written order prohibiting,—

(i) in the case of the debt, the creditor from recovering the debt and the debtor from making payment thereof until the further order of the Court;

(ii) in the case of the share, the person in whose name the share may be standing from transferring the same or receiving any dividend thereon;

(iii) in the case of the other movable property except as aforesaid, the person in possession of the same from giving it over to the judgment-debtor.

(2) A copy of such order shall be affixed on some conspicuous part of the Court-house, and another copy shall be sent in the case of the debt, to the debtor, in the case of the share, to the proper officer of the corporation and, in the case of the other movable property (except as aforesaid), to the person in possession of the same.

(3) A debtor prohibited under clause (i) or Sub-Rule (1) may pay the amount of his debt into Court, and such payment shall discharge him as effectually as payment to the party entitled to receive the same.

to protect his interests. The effect, however, of permitting a growing crop to be cut or gathered will be to remove it from the definition in so far as it will have ceased to be 'attached to the soil', and it is accordingly proposed to enact that, to avoid any possible difficulty analogous to that now arising in regard to the continuance of the attachment of a crop ceasing to be 'immovable property' after being severed, the attachment should continue after cutting or gathering. A discretion to suspend attachment when the period of maturity is distant and a discretion to refuse applications presented within twenty days before the maturity of a crop not lending itself to storage, have been borrowed from Sections 123 (4) and 124 of the Bengal Act."—

3. The Select Committee in their Report said :—"We have extended this provision which originally affected 'growing crops' only to all 'agricultural produce.' We entirely concur in the principle adopted in the Bill that the Court should attach such produce, which will now in all cases be treated as movable property, by taking it into its possession and custody. At the same time, the procedure relating to the 'actual seizure' of movables cannot be applied in its entirety, to a growing crop and, having regard to the special provisions suggested by us in Clause 295-B [see Rule 71 Infra] with respect to the sale of 'agricultural produce', we see considerable objection to allowing such produce to be ordinarily removed on attachment. In these circumstances, we think that to give proper effect to Clause 295-B, attachment should be effected by affixing a notice in situ on the field or threshing floor, and also by way of greater caution, on the judgment-debtor's ordinary place of residence. To meet special cases of persons not residing in the actual neighbourhood, we would allow, under the special orders of the Court, affixure on the house in which the judgment-debtor carries on business or personally works for gain or in which he is known to have last resided or personally worked for gain. We have provided that the costs of the attachment shall be added to the decree.— India Gazette dated 21-3-1903, Pt. V.

Case Law.

1. A executed a registered debt-bond to B for a certain sum of money, pledging, as security, with him (B) a debt-bond executed in A's favour by C. In execution of a decree against B, his right, title and interest in the said registered bond (executed by A) were sold and purchased by D, the attachment by Court being made by means of prohibitory notices under Section 220 (old) Civil Procedure Code, and not by actual seizure. The Court, therefore, which made the attachment, did not deliver the bond to D, but simply furnished him with a sale certificate. Some time after this, in execution of another decree passed against B, the debt bond obtained by A from C and pledged as security to B was also attached by actual seizure and sold to, and purchased by, E who was put in possession of this bond by Court. E subsequently delivered the bond to C on his paying E the amount secured thereby. D sought recovery from A of the amount of the registered bond executed by A to B in virtue of his right as purchaser thereof. A pleaded non-liability to pay the amount sued for, unless D delivered to him not only the bond sued on (the one executed by A to B) but also the bond executed to A by C and pledged with B.

Held (Justice Ormsby dissenting).—The registered bond in question not being a negotiable instrument, was not governed by Section 222 of the (old) Civil Procedure Code which required that the attachment of negotiable instruments should be made by actual seizure.

The legal mode of attaching debt bonds of the kind (which are not negotiable instruments) was by prohibiting the obligee from receiving the payment, and the obligor from paying the debt.

No rule specially applicable to the sale of non-negotiable instruments, is prescribed in the Code.

A debt-bond not attached by actual seizure may be sold since Section 249, old C. P. C., authorizes the delivery of such bonds to purchasers being made by service of prohibitory notices on the obligor and obligee.

Actual delivery of bonds of this description is not necessary to give validity to its attachment and sale.

A judgment-debtor, by handing over a bond already attached by means of prohibitory notices to a subsequent attaching creditor, cannot defeat the prior attachment and sale legally made.—6 T. L. R., 1.

[Section 222 of Regulation II of 1037 provided for attachment of negotiable instruments by actual seizure; and Section 249 related to delivery of debts not being negotiable instruments, and of shares in public companies.]

2. A judgment-debtor's mortgage lien secured by a document should be regarded as immovable property, for the purpose of attachment and sale in execution of the decree against him. The provisions of the Civil Procedure Code relating to attachment and sale of such properties should be strictly followed in bringing such lien to sale.— 8 T. L. R. App., 54.

Ex.—20 T. L. R., 165.

3. Suit by a purchaser of hypothecation bond at a court-auction, to recover from the obligor and from the hypothecated property the amount due under the bond. The court sale not having been conducted under the procedure applicable to real property and the sale certificate granted to plaintiff not having been registered, it was contended that the sale was ab initio invalid :

Held.—A hypothecation deed consists of two obligations,—

(1) to pay the debt as a simple debt and

(2) the creation of a charge on the real property in the way of collateral security.

The failure to adopt the procedure prescribed for sale of immovable property and the non-registration of the sale-certificate deprive the purchaser of the right to recover the debt as a specific charge on the property hypothecated; but the sale of the bond as movable property, does not invalidate the transfer to the purchaser of the right to enforce the first obligation, i. e., the right to recover the debt from the obligor (defendant) and his property as a simple debt.— 11 T. L. R., 177.

4. Suit for recovery of money under a hypothecation bond attached and sold in execution of a decree obtained by plaintiff against the hypothecatee. The defendants, the hypothecators, pleaded discharge to the hypothecatee on the latter's production of a certified copy of a false order purporting to have been passed by the execution Court to the effect that the said decree was satisfied out of Court :

Held.—(1) The attachment notice served upon the defendants imposed upon them the legal duty of the payment of the debt due into Court for payment to the plaintiff in satisfaction of his decree. The alleged payment by the defendants to the hypothecatee, even if true, is no defence to the plaintiff's action as it does not exonerate them from the liability imposed by the prohibitory notice served on them under the express provisions of law and not duly withdrawn.

(2) The fraud committed by the debtor under the decree in execution of which the bond in question was attached and sold, does not affect the plaintiff who was no party thereto.— 14 T. L. R., 19.

5. A, a judgment-creditor, purchased in execution, the debt due to his judgment-debtor Y from X to whom a notice was sent prohibiting him from paying the debt to anybody except A. X put in a petition under Section 265 of the Civil Procedure Code tendering the sum and praying that the same should not be paid to A, but held in deposit till the dispute between the latter's debtors and their relatives was settled. No notice of deposit was given to A. Suit was by A for recovery of the debt purchased by him in auction. On the contention that the suit was not maintainable :

Held.—(1) The suit was maintainable.

(2) X should have paid the money into Court to the credit of A unconditionally; and if the former chose to make a protest, the latter was not bound to take the money subject to any liability which might arise as a consequence of such protest.

Section 362 [= Or. XXIV, r. 2] lays down that when money is deposited by a defendant in any suit to recover a debt or damages, notice in writing of the deposit shall be given through the Court by the defendant to the plaintiff. It is not clear under what provision of law X (defendants' father) paid the money into Court after the debt was sold. His petition tendering the money purported to be under Section 265, but that Section did not apply as the debt had been sold and notice thereof given to X. But whether considered as money paid under Section 265 or otherwise legally deposited, the principle of Section 362 will apply, and X was bound to send notice of the deposit to the plaintiff. He failed to do so, and the plaintiff brought his suit for the recovery of the debt purchased by him.—

6. A executed a Chitty security bond to X, the foreman of the Chitty, hypothecating the plaint property and afterwards sold the property to B subject to the hypothecation, i. e., with direction to pay the Chitty subscriptions to X. C another subscriber to the same Chitty obtained a decree against X and assigned it to D and the latter attached the debt reserved with B and purchased in auction the right to recover the same. The lower Courts on the authority of XI T. L. R., 177, over-ruled D's right to proceed against the security in B's hands on the ground that the debt was attached simply as a debt under Section 265, C. P. C., and not in the mode prescribed by Section 271 [=Or. XXI, r. 52] for attaching immovable property.

Held (by the majority on reference to the Full Bench over-ruling XI T. L. R., 177 and the decisions based thereon).—

(1) The procedure to be followed in the attachment and sale of a simple mortgage or hypothecation debt is that laid down under Section 265, C. P. C.

(2) The sale of the debt in pursuance of the attachment would necessarily carry with it the right to the security.

(3) A material irregularity caused by attaching under a wrong Section unaccompanied by substantial injury would not vitiate the sale.— 20 T. L. R., 165.

Appl.—8 T. L. J., 354.
Ref.—19 T. L. J., 1113.

7. A owed a debt to B under a bond. In execution of a decree obtained by C against B the debt under the bond was attached on 21—1—83 by a written order of prohibition under Section 265, Civil Procedure Code. On 24—1—83 A paid the amount of the debt into Court which issued the prohibitory order. On 19—12—82, P had obtained an assignment of the bond from B and he gave notice of the assignment to A on 3—2—83 and demanded payment of the debt which was refused. P therefore, sued A for recovery of the amount under the bond. It was contended on behalf of P that the attachment of the debt was not in accordance with the provisions of the law inasmuch as a copy of the prohibitory order was not affixed in a conspicuous part of the Courthouse as required by Section 265, and that the payment in pursuance of such attachment was, therefore, ineffectual to absolve the debtor from his liability under the bond.

Held.—The payment into Court was an effectual discharge of the debtor's liability.

One of the clauses of Section 265 clearly lays down that a debtor prohibited by an order from making payment to his creditor, may pay the amount of his debt into Court and thus obtain effectual discharge. The debtor who receives the prohibitory notice is in no way concerned with its publication in the Court-house. The clause in question does not make the validity of the discharge dependent on the due publication of the prohibitory order. The receipt of the order by the debtor and his payment into Court in pursuance of it, is all that is essential under the Clause to obtain his discharge.—

(= 3 T. L. J., 266).

Fol.—10 T. L. J., 95.

8. The procedure laid down by Section 265, C. P. C., must be followed when a mere charge on immovable property is sought to be attached and brought to sale.

Where an attachment which ought to have been made under Section 265, C. P. C. is made under Section 271, C. P. C., [=Or. XXI, r. 52] the creditor who is thereby deprived of the opportunity of having notice of the prohibitory order involved in a proper attachment, ought to be protected if he makes a bona fide payment to the judgment-debtor.— 8 T. L. J., 354.

Ex.—18 T. L. J., 726.

9. The defendants in a suit assigned their rights in a Chitty security bond and the assignee gave notice of the assignment to the subscriber (debtor). After this a prohibitory order under Section 265 C. P. C. was passed and served on the debtor in a suit against the Chitty foreman and he deposited the amount in Court in pursuance to such order. In a suit by the assignee against the debtor :

Held.—Payment into Court discharged the liability of the debtor as effectively as payment to the party entitled to receive the same.— 10 T. L. J., 95.

10. A foreman refused to accept tender of subscriptions from an unprized subscriber for a particular drawing, and the subscriber sued to compel acceptance thereof. The suit was decreed in terms of the plaint. The subscriptions for the subsequent drawings were refused when tendered. Plaintiff claimed to recover the paid-up subscriptions, with interest from date of termination of chitty.

Held.—Under the circumstances, it was not incumbent on the plaintiff-subscriber to tender subscriptions for the subsequent instalments till disposal of that suit. The conduct of the foreman would in such a case amount to a waiver of tender. But the plaintiff was bound to tender all the subscriptions in arrears, with that for the current drawing immediately after the date of disposal of the suit. If this had not been done, he would be a defaulter in the eye of the law. A readiness to pay would not per se amount to a tender.

In regard to interest, it was contended that the defendant was not liable therefor by reason of a prohibitory notice received by him in pursuance of an attachment before judgment effected in a suit in another Court, and he could not have paid the amount really due to the plaintiff. This contention could not be upheld, as after attachment it was open to the defendant to deposit the amount in his hands in the attaching Court and get himself discharged from all liability. Or. XXI, Rule 44, enables the person to whom notice of attachment of a debt is sent to deposit the amount of such debt in Court and get an effective discharge of his liability for the same. The fact that, in the case, the attachment was before judgment could not affect the position, for under Order XXXVI, Rule 7, attachments before judgments are required to be made in the same manner as those made in execution of decrees and the effect of an attachment before judgment is the same as that made in execution of a decree. The enabling provisions contained in Order XXI, Rule 44, regarding deposit of amounts of debt attached has to be held applicable to attachments before judgments also.—

18 T. L. J., 651.

11. Though the term "immovable property" has not been defined in the Nair Regulation, the right under a hypothecation bond is immovable property within the meaning of the term used in Section 25 of that Regulation.

45. Where the property to be attached consists of the share or interest of the judgment-debtor in movable property belonging to him and another as co-owners, the attachment shall be made by a notice to the judgment-debtor prohibiting him from transferring the share or interest or charging it in any way.

Attachment of share in movables.

46. (1) Where the property to be attached is the salary or allowances of a public officer or of a servant of a local authority, the Court, whether the judgment-debtor or the disbursing officer is or is not within the local limits of the Court's jurisdiction, may order that the amount shall, subject to the provisions of Section 52, be withheld from such salary or allowances either in one payment or by monthly instalments as the Court may direct; and, upon notice of the order to such officer as the Government may, by Notification in the Government Gazette, appoint in this behalf, the officer or other person whose duty it is to disburse such salary or allowances shall withhold and remit to the Court the amount due under the order, or the monthly instalments, as the case may be.

Attachment of salary or allowances of public officer or servant of local authority.

The rulings in 20 T. L. R., 165 and 8 T. L. J., 354 can be taken to lay down only the procedure of attachment of hypothecation debts, quo debts, and not as declaring that the rights created thereunder would not be a benefit arising out of land as contemplated in the definition of immovable property under the General Clauses Regulation.—

It was the Select Committee on the Indian Bill of 1901 that proposed the new Section which is reproduced as Rule 47 in the present Indian Code and adopted as Rule 45 in the Regulation. In proposing the Section, the Committee observed :—"It frequently occurs that the property to be attached consists of a share or interest in movable property belonging to the judgment-debtor and others in co-ownership. Such a share or interest is obviously incapable of actual seizure. We are not prepared to accept a proposal that in such cases the entire property should be attached and sold, and the co-owners other than the judgment-debtor relegated to their rights either of redemption or of participation in the sale-proceeds. No doubt the extreme frequency of co-ownership presents a formidable obstacle to the rapid and effectual execution of decrees; but, at the same time, we do not feel justified in furthering the interest of the decree-holder at the expense of proprietary rights belonging to third parties. In these circumstances, we see no other solution open to us than to provide for the issue to the judgment-debtor of a notice prohibiting him from transferring or charging the share or interest."— India Gazette dated 21-3-1903, Pt. V.

(2) Where the attachable proportion of such salary or allowances is already being withheld and remitted to a Court in pursuance of a previous and unsatisfied order of attachment, the officer appointed by the Government in this behalf shall forthwith return the subsequent order to the Court issuing it with a full statement of all the particulars of the existing attachment.

(3) Every order made under this Rule, unless it is returned in accordance with the provisions of Sub-Rule (2), shall, without further notice or other process, bind the Government or local authority, as the case may be, while the judgment-debtor is within Travancore and while he is beyond Travancore if he is in receipt of any salary or allowances payable out of Government revenues or the funds of a local authority in Travancore; and the Government or local authority, as the case may be, shall be liable for any sum paid in contravention of this Rule.

I. The provisions contained herein do not appear to be altogether a novelty, as may be seen from the last three Paras of Section 265 of Regulation II of 1065 which were as follow :—

"In the case of the salary of a public officer, the attachment shall be made by a written order requiring the officer whose duty it is to disburse the salary to withhold every month such portion as the Court may direct, until the further orders of the Court.

"A copy of every such order shall be fixed up in a conspicuous part of the Court-house, and shall be served on the officer so required.

"Every such officer may, from time to time, pay into Court any portion so withheld, and such payment shall discharge the Government as effectually as payment to the judgment-debtor."

Under the above provisions, the salary of a public officer could not be attached unless the disbursing officer was within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court executing the decree. This involves considerable difficulty in the execution of such decrees and great expense to the decree-holder.

II. The present Rule reproduces the corresponding Rule of the British Indian Code. The circumstances which led to the enactment of that Rule in British India are thus explained in the Notes on Clauses appended to the 1901 Bill :—"Officers of the army serving in this country whether they do or do not belong to the Indian forces, are public officers within the meaning of the Code of Civil Procedure. Under Section 151 (3) of the Army Act (44 & 45 Vict., c. 58) such officers were liable to stoppage of one-half of their pay in execution of decrees and such orders remained in force wherever the judgment-debtor was in India. When this provision was repealed as a sequel to the abolition of the Courts of Request, an addition was made to Section 136 by the Army (Annual) Act, 1895, to legalize deductions authorized by any law passed by the Governor-General of India in Council. This provision, in view of the definition of 'public officer', placed military and civil officers on the same footing for the purposes of ataachment under the Code of Civil Procedure. Owing to the comparatively more frequent and rapid transfers of military officers to places at a considerable distance, attention has been directed somewhat more pointedly to an inconvenience which, to a greater or smaller extent, is experienced in connection with the various branches of the public services in India. A public officer, whatever the amount of his indebtedness, remains, by virtue of statutory exemption, in enjoyment of one moiety of his salary, while his creditor, by reason of the application of the provisions relating to local jurisdiction, must follow him from Court to Court all over the country with troublesome and expensive applications for transfer and attachment. It has, moreover, been represented that a tradesman at a distance ought not to be burdened with responsibility for tracing out the actual officer disbursing the salary; and the facts of an incident reported disclose that it is possible, in practice, for a public servant acting as his own paymaster to place the most serious obstructions in the way of execution. In these circumstances, it is proposed to revert, in substance, to the provisions of Section 151, Sub-section (3), of the Army Act, but to extend them to all public officers, railway servants and servants of local authorities; and to cast the responsibility on the Government or the Company or authority concerned for making its arrangements for receiving notice and for effecting the proper deduction. As a corollary to these suggestions, it is believed that the order may reasonably be declared effective, not merely while the judgment-debtor is in India, but while he is in receipt of emoluments from the Indian revenues or from the funds of an Indian local authority or of a Railway Company carrying on business in British India."—

Attachment of partnership property.

47. (1) Save as otherwise provided by this Rule, property belonging to a partnership shall not be attached or sold in execution of a decree other than a decree passed against the firm or against the partners in the firm as such.

(2) The Court may, on the application of the holder of a decree against a partner, make an order charging the interest of such partner in the partnership property and profits with payment of the amount due under the decree, and may, by the same or subsequent order, appoint a receiver of the share of such partner in the profits (whether already declared or accruing) and of any other money which may be coming to him in respect of the partnership, and direct accounts and inquiries and make an order for the sale of such interest or other orders as might have been directed or made if a charge had been made in favour of the decree-holder by such partner, or as the circumstances of the case may require.

I. 1. In regard to the Rule in the British Indian Code which is reproduced here, it is observed :—"It has been strongly represented that, for the protection of commercial enterprise, the rules relating to the attachment of any interest in partnership property should be assimilated to the English practice. At present, the Indian case-law on the subject is somewhat conflicting. It is thought that, at any rate in the commercial centres, the time has arrived for introducing the provisions of Section 23 of the Partnership Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict., c. 39) ; but how far they are likely to be useful when applied to the family business forming portion of the joint estate of Hindus is a matter which will require further consideration. The enactment in question has, therefore, been tentatively adopted as Clauses (1) to (3) to which the other Sub-Clauses embodying the simplified procedure directed by Or. XLVI, rr. 1 a and 1 b, of the Rules of the Supreme Court, are merely ancillary."— India Gazette dated 21-12-1901, Pt. V.

2. The words "or against the partners in the firm as such " at the end of Sub-section (1) show " that the operation of the Section is not ousted by the mere circumstance that the decree is passed, not against the firm, but against the partners constituting it, where these partners have been been sued as such."— India Gazette dated 21-3-1903, Pt. V.

II. Section 23 of the English Partnership Act, 1890 (53 and 54 Vict. c. 39) is as follows :—

" 23. (1) After the commencement of this Act (January 1st, 1891) a writ of execution shall not issue against any partnership property except on a judgment against the firm.

(2) The High Court, or a Judge thereof, or the Chancery Court of the County Palatine of Lancaster, or a County Court may, on the application by summons of any judgment-creditor of a partner, make an order charging that partner's interest in the partnership property and profits with payment

48. (1) Where a decree has been passed against a firm, execution may be granted—

Execution of decree against firm.

(a) against any property of the partnership;

(b) a gainst any person who has appeared in his own name under Rule 6 or Rule 7 of Order XXX or who has admitted on the pleadings that he is, or who has been adjudged to be, a partner;

(c) against any person who has been individually served as a partner with a summons and has failed to appear.

of the amount of the judgment-debt and interest thereon, and may by the same or a subsequent order appoint a receiver of that partner's share of profits (whether already declared or accruing), and of any other money which may be coming to him in respect of the partnership, and direct all accounts and enquiries, and give all other orders and directions which might have been directed or given if the charge had been made in favour of the judgment-creditor by the partner, or which the circumstances of the case may require.

(3) The other partner or partners shall be at liberty at any time to redeem the interest charged, or in case of a sale being directed, to purchase the same."

III. Rules 1-A and 1-B of Order 46 of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, as amended, are as follow :—

"1-A. Every summons by a separate judgment-creditor of a partner for an order charging his interest in the partnership property and profits under Section 23 of the Partnership Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 39), and for such other orders as are thereby authorised to be made, shall be served in the case of a partnership other than a cost-book company on the judgment-debtor and his partners, or such of them as are within the jurisdiction or in the case of a cost-book company on the judgment-debtor and purser of the company; and such service shall be good service on all the partners or on the cost-book company as the case may be and all orders made on such summons shall be similarly served.

"1-B. Every application which shall be made by any partner of the judgment-debtor under the same Section shall be made by summons, and such summons shall be served in the case of a partnership other than a cost-book company on the judgment-creditor and on the judgment-debtor, and on such of the other partners as shall not concur in the application and as shall be within the jurisdiction, or in the case of a cost-book company on the judgment-creditor and on the judgment-debtor and on the purser of the company, and such service shall be good service on all the partners or on the cost-book company as the case may be and all orders made on such summons shall be similarly served."

I. In reproducing the corresponding Rule of the British Indian Code, the following Proviso to Sub-Rule (1) has been omitted:— "Provided that nothing in this Sub-Rule

(2) Where the decree holder claims to be entitled to cause the decree to be executed against any person other than such a person as is referred to in Sub-Rule (1), clauses (b) and (c), as being a partner in the firm, he may apply to the Court which passed the decree for leave, and where the liability is not disputed, such Court may grant such leave, or, where such liability is disputed, may order that the liability of such person be tried and determined in any manner in which any issue in a suit may be tried and determined.

(3) Where the liability of any person has been tried and determined under Sub-rule (2), the order made thereon shall have the same force and be subject to the same conditions as to appeal or otherwise as if it were a decree.

(4) Save as against any property of the partnership, a decree against a firm shall not release, render liable or otherwise affect any partner therein unless he has been served with a summons to appear and answer.

shall be deemed to limit or otherwise affect the provisions of Section 247 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872."

II. Rule 8 of Order XLVIII-A of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, is as follows :—

"8. Where a judgment or order is against a firm, execution may issue :

(a) Against any property of the partnership within the jurisdiction;

(b) Against any person who has appeared in his own name under Rule 5 or 6, or who has admitted on the pleadings that he is, or who has been adjudged to be a partner;

(c) Against any person who has been individually served, as a partner, with the writ of summons, and has failed to appear.

If the party who has obtained judgment or an order claims to be entitled to issue execution against any other person as being a member of the firm, he may apply to the Court or a Judge for leave so to do; and the Court or Judge may give such leave if the liability be not disputed, or if such liability be disputed may order that the liability of such person be tried and determined in any manner in which any issue or question in an action may be tried and determined. But except as against any property of the partnership a judgment against a firm shall not render liable, release or, otherwise affect any member thereof who was out of the jurisdiction when the writ was issued, and who has not appeared to the writ, unless he has been made a party to the action under Order XI, or has been served within the jurisdiction after the writ in the action was issued."

[Rule 5 referred to provides for appearance by persons sued in firm-name; and Rule 6 requires no appearance by person served, as having control or management of the partnership business. Order XI deals with 'Service out of the jurisdiction.']

49. Where the property is a negotiable instrument not deposited in a Court, nor in the custody of a public officer, the attachment shall be made by actual seizure, and the instrument shall be brought into Court and held subject to further orders of the Court.

Attachment of negotiable instruments.

50. Where the property to be attached is in the custody of any Court or public officer the attachment shall be made by a notice to such Court or officer, requesting that such property, and any interest or dividend becoming payable thereon, may be held subject to the further orders of the Court from which the notice is issued:

Attachment of property in custody of Court or public officer.

Provided that, where such property is in the custody of a Court, any question of title or priority arising between the decree-holder and any other person, not being the judgment-debtor, claiming to be interested in such property by virtue of any assignment, attachment or otherwise, shall be determined by such Court.

Case Law.

1. Plaintiff, as the execution-creditor of a party who (it is alleged) is entitled to certain money deposited with the Sirkar, attached this deposit in execution of his decree by a prohibitory order. The Sirkar denied that any such money was due and refused to pay the same. The plaintiff, thereupon, obtained an order of the Court which passed the decree in his favour, to recover the money from the Sirkar authorities, and brought this suit on the basis of that order.

Held.—(1) Plaintiff has not, by mere attachment and order of the Munsiff, acquired such right to, or property in the deposit alleged to exist in the custody of first defendant—the Sirkar—as to entitle plaintiff to maintain a suit for recovery of the deposit.

(2) Plaintiff's right to bring a suit can only be acquired by purchase at a sale in pursuance of the attachment made.

There is nowhere in the Code any indication that the framers of the Code contemplated to treat the deposits in the hands of public officers, except the Courts of justice, in any other light than as a debt or movable property in the custody of third persons to be realised by the judgment-creditors in the ordinary mode provided by the Code in respect of such debts or movable property, namely, by sale. It is noteworthy that Section 269, while it lays down that the attachment of property deposited in the custody of any Court or public officer should be in the same mode, that is, by notice, has by its proviso conferring the power of deciding questions of title to such property on the Courts alone, impliedly left the deposits in the hands of public officers, to be governed by the ordinary provisions of law applicable to attached property generally.

The order of the Munsiff's Court, in the case, was not one which could have the effect of transferring to the plaintiff the right to recover the deposit (F. B.).—

2. It is the duty of the Court, on an application to attach movables in the hands of any public officer, in the execution of a decree, to satisfy itself that the movables so sought to be attached, belonged to, or were delivered to, the decree-debtor. The duty of the officer to whom a prohibitory notice under Section 269 (Section 221 old) is issued, is to hold the movables in his official custody, subject to the further order of that Court. It is not the business of the latter officer to enquire whether the movables belonged to the debtors or not: It is not competent to him to disregard the notice because, in his opinion, the order was not rightly issued or that the Court did not make proper enquiries about the ownership of the movables before the issue of the notice. Section 269 (Section 221 old) requires public officers who get prohibitory notices, without regard to any right asserted or proved to the articles in their custody by any person, to hold them subject to the further order of the Court, and should they, however, entertain any doubt about the propriety of the order or of the title of the judgment-creditor to have the articles attached, they should simply refer the party aggrieved or affected by the notice, to the Court which issued the same, keeping the articles in their custody pending the further instructions of that Court. As the defendant (Dewan Peishkar in the case) took upon himself the responsibility of disregarding a legal attachment of Court by ordering his subordinate to hand over the movables to a third party, he is certainly liable civilly for the consequences that followed from that act.— 10 T. L. R., 178.

3. A District Judge rejected the Sirkar's application for payment of Court fees out of the funds deposited in Court as maintenance to the credit of a pauper plaintiff on the grounds that (1) the decree in the pauper suit awarding the plaintiff's claim for maintenance did not expressly direct the payment of the Court fees to the Sirkar, and (2) the Sirkar's application was barred by lapse of time.

Held.—(1) The absence of the words "the Sirkar do get the costs" in the decree which has calculated the amount of Court fees as provided by Section 396, C. P. C., [ = Or. XXXIII, r. 10] and directed the plaintiff to pay the same does not destroy the Sirkar's right to realise the Court fees.

The Sirkar's right to realise the Court-fee in pauper suits is a statutory right expressly conferred by Section 396 ; and it is the prerogative of the Sirkar to claim fees as a first charge.

(2) The application of the Sirkar for payment out of the fund in Court is not to be viewed as an application for execution of a decree to which the limitation period of three years is applicable.

The Sirkar has the first claim to the proceeds of a pauper suit to the extent of the amount of Court fee that would have been payable at the institution of the suit, had the plaintiff not been a pauper ; and what the Court had to do in the case was to proceed under Section 269, C. P. C., and to determine the question of priority as between the Sirkar and the representative of the deceased plaintiff who contested the Sirkar's claim.— 18 T. L. R., 3.

4. The word "Court" in Section 269, Civil Procedure Code, does not merely denote a Civil Court but includes also a Criminal Court. Where property which is the subject of attachment by a Civil Court is in the custody of a Criminal Court, it is the Criminal Court, and not the execution Court, that has jurisdiction to determine any question of title or priority between the decree-holder and another claimant, and such Criminal Court cannot by a provisional order, abdicate the jurisdiction in favour of the execution Court.

(a) if the decrees were passed by the same Court, then by order of such Court,

The preamble to an Act cannot be resorted to for the purpose of limiting its meaning unless there are strong words in the preamble indicating the intention of the Legislature to control the effect of the enacting portion and if on a review of the whole Act a wider intention than that expressed in the preamble appears to be the real one, effect is to be given to it notwithstanding the less extensive import of the preamble.— 27 T. L. R., 123 (= 2 T. L. J., 232).

5. An order under the proviso to Section 269 of the Code of Civil Procedure passed by a Magistrate after investigating a claim to thondi articles attached in execution of a decree of a Civil Court, is one to which the provisions of Sections 275 to 280 [Or. XXI, rr. 56-61] of the Code apply. No revision lies ordinarily against such order, as the Legislature has provided a remedy by suit in Section 280.

The fact that the order was passed by a Criminal Court and not by a Civil Court does not make any difference.— 28 T. L. R., 209 ( = 3 T. L. J., 169).

6. Where the attaching Court and the custody Court are the same, the principle of Section 269, C. P. C., must apply. Having regard to the form of attachment prescribed in that Section, it appears necessary when the attaching Court and the custody Court are the same, that an order should be made by the Court as attaching Court for transferring the money from the suit in which it came into Court to the suit in which the attachment took place.

"The order 'attach' appears to be sufficient, though of course some record of the attachment must be placed among the records of the suit to the credit of which the money is lying." The order of attachment, however, does not of itself effect a transfer to the credit of the suit in which the attachment is made. Unless the Court as attaching Court has directed the money to be paid over to itself, the money remains in the hands of the custody Court subject to the further orders of the attaching Court.— 37 T. L. R., 305 (= 11 T. L. J., 343).

7. The Code of Civil Procedure does not recognise an anticipatory attachment of money expected to reach the hands of a public officer. The attachment contemplated by law is restricted only to money actually in his hands. Anticipatory attachments are contrary to law.— 12 T. L. J., 204.

If the property be a decree for money passed by any other Court, the attachment shall be made by a notice in writing to such

The Court receiving such notice shall stay execution accordingly, unless and until—

(a) the Court which passed the decree sought to be executed cancels the notice, or

(b) the holder of the decree sought to be executed applies to the Court receiving such notice to execute its own decree.

On receiving such application, the Court shall proceed to execute the decree and apply the proceeds in satisfaction of the decree sought to be executed.

Every Court receiving such notice shall give effect to the same until it is so cancelled.

Case Law.

1. Section 270, clause (b), of the Civil Procedure Code enables an attaching creditor, by mere attachment, to execute a money-decree attached. Nowhere does the Code provide for sale of decrees. Such sales are unauthorised ; and therefore the purchase of a money-decree in execution is invalid and inoperative.—

2. Where a judgment-creditor (plaintiff) attached and purchased a hypothecation lien held by his debtors after being, on his own motion, made a party to a decree that the debtors themselves had obtained against their hypothecator prior to plaintiff's attachment, moved for execution of the latter decree against the hypothecators of plaintiff's decree-debtors:

Held.—When plaintiff's decree-debtors obtained the decree against their hypotheecators, the former's rights under the hypothecation became merged in the decree, and plaintiff's attachment of the hypotheca was null and void. He had acquired no rights by his purchase, and the making him a party to the decree was wrong.

The execution of the whole decree still remained with the hypothecatees (defendants).

Under Section 270 of the Civil Procedure Code a person executing a decree by attaching another decree is not required to bring the latter to sale, an attachment duly made being sufficient to give the execution creditor the right to receive the money due under the decree that has been attached.— 12 T. L. R., 183.

3. A obtained a decree against B in O.S. 318 of 1073. C obtained a decree against A in O. S. 389 of 1079 and attached the former decree on 1-4-1081. The last application under Section 218 to take a step in aid of execution of the decree in O. S. 318 was granted on 11-1-1078 and the records were received by the execution Court on 3-4-1078. C applied for execution of the decree in O. S. 318 on 21-3-1083, which application was dismissed as time-barred.

Held.—(1) In computing periods of limitation under Article 158, Schedule II, Clause 4, having regard to the hardships which a decree-holder will suffer, if the delay in th' transfer of records by the original Court, the miscarriage of the records in tran prevents the decree-holder applying ... second Court for execution within the limitation period, the words 'the date on which such order was carried out' therein, ought to be construed as including the date on which the records were received by the execution Court in cases of transmission of decrees for execution under Section 218, C. P. C., [new Sections 35-37].

(2) The attaching decree-holde s entitled to take all steps necessary or the realisation of the attached decree as if he were the decree-holder.

The second decree-holder was n attachment, entitled at once to apply or execution of the first decree. Rule 51 contemplates the right of the attaching creditor in every case to enforce execution of the decree he had attached. The second decree-holder becomes a 'representative' of the first decree-holder, as soon as first decree is attached, and he has only to apply as such representative to execute the first decree—Vide Sub-Rule (3) of this Rule. Under the Rule, even the first decree-holder is not prohibited from applying for execution. Sub-Rule (1), (b) (ii), allows both the decree-holders to apply for execution, and Sub-Rule (6) merely prohibits the first decree-holder from receiving payment of the first decree amount from or adjusting the first decree with, the judgment-debtor.

(3) Section 15 of t' Limitation Regulation was intended tc ve the hardships of litigants who are under a disqualification to make a necessary application by reason of a prohibitory order, and not to extend the time in favour of persons who have not been so prohibited, but who are entitled to make the application themselves as representing the rights of the prohibited persons.

(4) Section 270 does not prohibit the first decree-holder from applying for execution but only directs the first Court to "stay execution," and it is doubtful whether ...en the first decree-holder could obtain ...xtension of time for execution, simply ...use the first decree-holder failed to pay ... decree-debt due by him to the second decree-holder, and owing to such negligence or breach of his obligation to pay up the second decree, the second decree-holder attached the first decree. The Legislature cannot have intended to extend the time for execution of the first decree, simply because the first decree-hoder happend... to be himself a judgment-debtor in anoth... ...se.— 24 T. L. R., 12.

4. An ...tachment of a decree for money under Sec...n 270 C. P. C. stands till the notice requ...sting the stay of execution is cancelled.— 10 T. L. J., 275.

5. The appellant, a creditor, applied for an attachment of the decree in the case on 21-5-1095. This was ordered and made conditional on his producing a copy of the decree. On the same day, the decree-holder petitioned to the Court to strike the case off the file, the decree-debt having been paid. Notice was ordered on this to the appellant. This application was, however, dismissed for non-payment of process fee. In the meantime, the appellant produced a copy of the decree on 10-6-1095, and the notice of attachment was issued on 25-6-1095 and returned after substituted service on 29-6-1095. The appellant then applied to the Court for execut... the decree. The respondent-judgme... ...tor, objected thereto, setting up a discharge of the decretal amount to his decree-holder on 21-5-1095. Both the lower Courts upheld the plea of discharge. The appeal was against this decision.

Held.—Under Section 270 [=Or. XXI, r. 51 ], an attachment of a decree if made in execution of a decree passed by the same Court has to be effected by the order of that Court to that effect. Section 273 [new Section 56] declares payment to the judgment-debtor of any debt or money void as against all claims enforceable under the attachment. By the substitution in the new Code of the expression "contrary to such attachment" in place of "during the continuance of the attachment" in the old Code, no substantial change has been effected, the words now used being only more comprehensive and effective. Attachment becomes effectual as soon as the order relating thereto is passed, and non-service of the notice regarding the same on the judgment-debtor is perfectly inmaterial, as the Code does not lay down that such notice is necessary to effectuate attachments of this kind. Thus, if the order of attachment had as a matter of fact been passed, payments out of Court made thereafter could not bind the attaching creditor. In the case, the attachment should be held to have become operative on 21-5-1095 and not on 29-5-1095 as assumed by the judge below.

When the transaction which is prima facie valid is sought to be invalidated, by reason of an attachment, the burden of showing that the transaction in question took place is upon the attaching-creditor.

Of course, a presumption will arise as regards judicial acts that they should have been done at the earliest point of time on the dates they purport to have been performed.

The order of attachment is a judicial act, and therefore the above presumption will arise with respect to the same, though it is only a rebuttable one.

52. (1) Where the property is immovable, the attachment shall be made by an order prohibiting the judgment-debtor from transferring or charging the property in any way, and all persons from taking any benefit from such transfer or charge.

Attachment of immovable property.

(2) The order shall be proclaimed at some place on or adjacent to such property by beat of drum or other customary mode, and a copy of the order shall be affixed on a conspicuous part of the property and then upon a conspicuous part of the court-house, and also, where the property is land paying revenue to the Government, in the office of the Tahsildar of the Taluk in which the land is situate.

The provisions in Section 255 [=Or. XXI, r. 2] clearly show that a distinction had been kept in view between the "certifying" and "recording" contemplated in the Section. The word "certify" in paragraph 3 of Section 255 related to cases of appraisal by the decree-holder with respect to adjustment or payment and the word "record" to the applications of the judgment-debtor in such cases.

A certificate by the decree-holder is sufficient to enable the judgment-debtor to plead that the decree has been satisfied.—

"The order shall be proclaimed at some place on or adjacent to such property by beat of drum or other customary mode, and a copy of the order shall be fixed up in a conspicuous part of the property and of the Court-house.

When the property is land paying revenue to Government, a copy of the order shall also be fixed up in the office of the Tahsildar of the Taluk in which the land is situate."

1. Section 286 of the Civil Procedure Code [=Or. The publication by means of affixing such copies in the Court-house and the Tahsildar's office referred to in the Section, should be made only after publication on the spot, which must be simultaneous with the proclamation of sale by beat of drum.

1. The corresponding Section of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows :

"272. Order for withdrawal of attachment after satisfaction of decree.—If the amount decreed with costs and all charges and expenses resulting from the attachment of any property be paid into Court, or if satisfaction of the decree be otherwise made through the Court, or if the decree is set aside or reversed, an order shall be issued on the application of any person interested in the property, for the withdrawal of the attachment.

If the judgment-creditor fails to bring to sale any property attached in execution of a decree for money within three years from the date of the attachment, the Court may order the withdrawal of attachment, unless, for any special reasons to be recorded, it considers that the attachment should continue.

Explanation.—Pendency of a claim-petition or any objection to the sale shall be a sufficient reason for the continuance of the attachment after the lapse of three years."

2. The second Para with the Explanation were added to the provision in Section 275 of the Indian Code of 1882 which was adopted as the first Para. The Statement of Objects and Reasons said :—"44. Now, property attached in execution of decrees is not often brought to sale within a reasonable time ; and the execution of decrees is thereby delayed. To compel creditors to be diligent it is necessary to prescribe a limit within which the property should be brought to sale."

Case Law.

1. So far as the judgment-debtor is concerned, nothing short of the satisfaction of the decree, in execution of which the attachment was made, would release the property from attachment. The Civil Procedure Code contains no provision for the release of attached property, if not brought to sale within a prescribed time.—

2. Plaintiff is the decree-holder in O. S. No. 67 of 997 and the defendant the decree-holder in No. 669 of 1053—both decrees being against the members of the same family. In execution of the former decree, plaintiff attached in 1022 certain properties of his judgment-debtor. No sale followed this attachment. In Kanni 1057, the defendant, in execution of his decree, caused the attachment of the same properties and brought about the sale of them. In the meantime, plaintiff applied for re-attachment of the properties which was granted and attachment was made in Thulam 1058. Plaintiff applied to have the assets realized paid to him as the first attaching creditor. An order was accordingly made, but the defendant got that set aside on the ground that plaintiff was not the first attaching creditor. The sale-proceeds were then paid to the defendant. The plaintiff files the suit to have the order in favour of the defendant cancelled and the money recovered from him.

The first contention raised on behalf of the defendant was that the execution of the plaintiff's decree (O. S. No. 67 of 997) having become barred on the date of the sale of the attached properties, plaintiff had no locus standi to apply for the sale proceeds.

Held.—An attachment of property made in execution of a decree, continues in force, under the old Limitation Regulation until it is removed or superseded. It operates de die in diem as process of execution upon the decree, and at any time further process for the sale of the property might be issued upon the attachment. The attachment made in execution of plaintiff's decree in 1022 continued in force up to 1057 when the property, the sale proceeds of which form the subject-matter of this suit, was sold. Plaintiff's claim is not barred. Being the first attaching creditor, he was under the law in force at the date of sale, entitled to be paid first (F. B.).—

3. Section 272, Para 2, applies only to attachments made "in execution of a decree" and not to attachments made prior to judgment: and hence an attachment of the latter kind cannot be withdrawn under the Section on the ground that the decree-holder has failed within three years of the attachment to bring to sale the property attached.

The expression "attached in execution of a decree for money" cannot apply to attachments made before judgment. Such an attachment may no doubt be availed by the decree-holder, on fulfilment of certain preliminary conditions, for realisation of his money in the event of his suit being ultimately decreed. But it is essentially different in character from an attachment made after decree. "An attachment before judgment does not, for all purposes, stand on the same footing as an attachment in execution proceedings. This, indeed, is obvious from first principles. The attachment does not of necessity ensure the property to the person who attaches it. He becomes entitled to proceed against it only if he eventually gets a decree; it is not competent to him to proceed against the property attached unless he has also taken the preliminary steps which the law requires for its enforcement; in other words, he must apply for execution just like any other creditor." (38 Cal., 448). "An attachment prior to a decree is not an attachment for the enforcement of the decree; but it is a step taken merely for the purpose of preventing the debtor from delaying or obstructing such enforcement when the decree subsequently passed shall be sought to be executed. An attachment after decree is, on the other hand, an attachment made for the immediate purpose of carrying the decree into execution and it presupposes an application on the part of the decree-holder to have his decree executed." (4 B. L. R., 63).— 6 T. L. J., 252.

55. Where any property has been attached in execution of a decree but by reason of the decree-holder's default the Court is unable to proceed further with the application for execution, it shall either dismiss the application or for any sufficient reason adjourn the proceedings to a future date. Upon the dismissal of such application the attachment shall cease.

4. The question whether there has been an abandonment of the previous attachment by reason of the subsequent attachment has to be decided from the intention of the parties, as the placing of the second attachment could not ipso facto conclusively make out such an abandonment.

No presumption in favour of such abandonment could arise from such attachment alone.

Though in cases of attachment before judgment, a second attachment after judgment is not necessary under law for taking further steps in execution allowed under the Code, the effecting of such second attachment after judgment does not appear to be uncommon here as well as in British India. Under these circumstances, the prior attachment could not be deemed to have been abandoned by the subsequent attachment after decree.—

I. For Form of Order for payment to plaintiff of money, &c., in the hands of third party, see Appendix E, Form No. 25.

II. Section 274 applies to property attached by actual seizure and as such at the immediate disposal of the Court executing the decree. Mere notice to a public officer is insufficient to constitute actual seizure of property in the custody of a public officer. The Section evidently contemplates an immediate payment, and no coins or currency notes in the hands of parties over whom the Courts have no control and who dispute the right and title of the judgment-creditor and debtor to such money or currency notes, can be said to be capable of immediate payment. Were this Section to be held applicable to coins and currency notes in the hands of third parties to which the judgment-debtors may lay a claim, the Courts would be made the medium of perpetrating gross injustice upon such third parties who may not have an opportunity of stating and proving their claims and objections to the attachment, for the Section enables the Court to direct payment even a few minutes after the attachment.— 10 T. Investigation of claims and objections.

Investigation of claims to, and objections to attachment of, attached property.

Provided that no such investigation shall be made where the Court considers that the claim or objectinn was designedly or unnecessarily delayed.

(2) Where the property to which the claim or objection applies has been advertised for sale, the Court ordering the sale may postpone it pending the investigation of the claim or objection.

I. The Indian Special Committee observe :—"The purpose of this Rule is to put an end to doubts which from time to time have arisen as to the continuance of an attachment by reason of the practice of 'striking off proceedings' or 'removing proceedings from the file' for which there is no justification in the Code."

II. It has been held that the Rule does not apply to attachments made before judgment. "It makes an attachment cease on the dismissal of an execution application only if that attachment had been made 'in execution of the decree,' and not when it had been made before judgment in view to a possible execution of a decree which might probably be passed thereafter." (26 M. L. J., 215).— 6 T. L. J., 252.

Case Law.

Order XXI, Rule 55, is not retrospective in its operation. The right of the decree-holder to have the properties of his judgment-debtor sold without a fresh attachment is a vested one. Under the old Code, the decree-holder was entitled to move for the sale of the judgment-debtor's properties which had been attached already without a fresh attachment, even in cases where his application for execution had been dismissed. This would clearly constitute a right which is vested in the decree-holder and a later enactment cannot be allowed to deprive him of such right.— 19 T. L. J., 732.

Or. XXI, r. 56 [=S. 275=Or. XXI, r. 58]

I. The corresponding Section 275 of Regulation II of 1065 did not contain the Proviso now found in Sub-Rule (1). Section 275 was a reproduction of Section 278 of the Indian Code of 1882, minus the Proviso. The reason for the omission was thus explained in the Statement of Objects and Reasons':—"Proviso to Section 278 is omitted as, in the Limitation Bill, a limit is prescribed within which the claim or objection should be preferred. Where the claim or objection is brought forward after the lapse of the prescribed time, it shall be rejected on the ground that it is barred. Instead of leaving it to the discretion of the Court to hear an objection if it considers that it was brought within a reasonable time, and thereby introducing an element of uncertainty in the administration of law, it seems highly desirable that the law itself should fix a reasonable time, after the lapse of which no claims should be received for summary adjudication."

II. For Form of Notice to attaching creditor, see Appendix E, Form No. 26.

III. Sections 275 to 280 of Regulation II of 1065 embody the provisions contained in Sections 230 and 231 of Regulation II of 1037. These latter Sections are subjoined for reference in connection with the cases under them, given below.

"230. How claims and objections to sale of attached property are to be investigated.—In the event of any claim being preferred to, or objection offered against the sale of lands or any other immovable or movable property which may have been attached in execution of a decree or under any order for attachment passed before judgment, as not liable to be sold in execution of a decree against the defendant, the Court shall, subject to the proviso contained in the next succeeding Section, proceed to investigate the same with the like powers as if the claimant had been originally made a defendant in the suit, and also with such powers as regards the summoning of the original defendant as are contained in Section 204. And if it shall appear to the satisfaction of the Court that the land or other immovable or movable property was not in the possession of the party against whom execution is sought, or of some other person in trust for him, or in the occupancy of ryots or cultivators or other persons paying rent to him at the time when the property was attached, or that, being in the possession of the party himself at such time, it was so in his possession not on his own account or as his own property, but on account of or in trust for some other person, the Court shall pass an order for releasing the said property from attachment. But if it shall appear to the satisfaction of the Court that the land or other immovable or movable property was in possession of the party against whom execution is sought as his own property, and not on account of any other person, or was in the possession of some other person in trust for him, or in the occupancy of ryots or cultivators or other persons paying rent to him at the time when the property was attached, the Court shall disallow the claim. The order which may be passed by the Court under this Section shall not be subject to appeal, but the party against whom the order may be given shall be at liberty to bring a suit to establish his right at any time within one year from the date of the order.

"231. Claims and objections shall be preferred at the earliest opportunity.—The claim or objection shall be made at the earliest opportunity to the Court which shall have ordered the attachment; and if the property to which the claim or objection applies, shall have been advertised for sale, the sale may (if it appears necessary) be postponed for the purpose of making the investigation mentioned in the last preceding Section. Provided that no such investigation shall be made if it appear that the making of the claim or objection was designedly and unnecessarily delayed, with a view to obstruct the ends of justice. The order disallowing the investigation shall not be subject to appeal, and the claimant shall be left to prosecute his claim by a regular suit."

IV. The Sections of the old Regulation have been adopted with some modifications, as Rules 56 to 61 of this Order. In connection with some of the cases under the old Sections given below, the effect of the changes introduced by the Rules has to be noted.

V. "Section 275 (Regn. II of 1065) compendiously indicates the scope of the claim or objection which it directs the Court to investigate. It is that the property attached is not liable to such attachment: and Sections 277 and 278 point out the real issue to be decided by the Court: Was the attached property at the time of the attachment, in the possession of the judgment-debtor? If so, was it in his possession as his own property and not on account of any other person? If it was in the possession of some one other than the judgment-debtor, was such possession held in trust for the judgment-debtor or under him by one who, either as tenant or by virtue of some other relation, paid rent to him? If the answer to these issues be in the affirmative, the claim is to be disallowed. If, however, the possession of the judgment-debtor be found to have been on account of or in trust for another, or partly on his own account and partly on account of some other person, the order is to be one releasing the property from attachment either wholly or partially, as the Court thinks fit. Section 280 provides for a suit by the party against whom an order is passed under any of the preceding Sections 'to establish the right which he claims to the property in dispute', the order being made conclusive subject to the result of such suit.

The provision contained in Section 276 did not find a place in the earlier Regulation, II of 1037. There was, therefore, room for doubt whether a claimant who had no interest whatever in the attached property or possession thereof might not come forward and prove that the judgment-debtor had no possession or that, if he had, it was not on his own account. To remove the doubt, Act X of 1877 introduced Section 279 corresponding to Section 276. It, therefore, seems that the provision in Section 276 is meant only to exclude persons who cannot show any interest in the attached property or possession thereof, from the benefit of an enquiry under Sections 275 to 279. In other words, the claimant, before he can ask the Court to decide the questions indicated in Sections 277 and 278, must show, in limine either a title himself or jus tertii in which he has some interest. Shortly put, the claimant must satisfy the Court that he is not an absolute stranger to the attached property, but has such an interest therein as would justify his intervention to prevent the sale sought to be effected."

"The creditor acquires by a perfected attachment a right to realise his debt out of the attached property—a right which, in case of competition, will have priority to all the alienations made by the debtor subsequently to the date of the attachment.

An attaching creditor has the right to redeem a prior mortgage. He has the right to apply for execution of the attached decree. The holder of a decree against a Hindu co-parcener can, by attaching the latter's interest in the co-parcenary property during his life-time prevent survivorship. An attaching creditor acquires a right to have the whole of the attached property applied in satisfaction of his debt, if no other creditors come forward; and, in any case, to have a rateable proportion so applied—a right which, if violated (e. g., by removal of the attached property from the custodia legis), will entitle the creditor to claim damages. An attaching decree-holder acquires by his attachment such an interest in the subject-matter of the attachment as would entitle him to be made a party to the appeal preferred against the decree attached."— 35 T. L. R., 54 (=9 T. L. J., 256).

Case Law.

1. To exclude a party from his ordinary right to sue within 12 years, and to bring the case within the purview of Section 230 (Regulation II of 1037), there must be an actual adjudication under the provisions of that Section. An order that plaintiff could not proceed under those provisions is not such an adjudication.— 1 T. L. R., 93.

2. To compel a claimant to sue within one year from the date of the order on his claim, there must have been an adjudication on the question of possession or no possession after investigation; and an order of the Court to strike off the claim petition without investigation, whether owing to the default of the claimant or otherwise, is not the order contemplated by Section 230 (Regulation II of 1037).

The dismissal of a claim for default of prosecution is not an order under this Section.— 3 T. L. R., 6.

3. The limitation of one year provided for suits to set aside orders passed on claims referred under Section 230 (Regulation II of 1037) has been held to apply to cases in which the claim has been duly investigated, but where this has not been done, the claimant has twelve years.—6 T. L. R., 114.

4. Section 230 (Regulation II of 1037) does not authorize the members of a Marumakkathayam Tarwad to object to the attachment of Tarwad property in execution of decrees against their Karanavan, on the ground that the judgment-debt is not a charge on the Tarwad; and, therefore, the limitation for a suit to set aside such attachment is not one year.

The wording of the Section clearly shows that the objector or claimant must show that the judgment-debtor is not in possession of the property attached, on his own account, and that he has also no interest whatever in the said property. Every Karanavan is in possession of the Tarwad property on his own account and on account of his Seshakars. A Seshakaran objecting to the attachments made in execution of decrees against his Karanavan can only seek the release of the property on the ground that the judgment is not a charge on the Tarwad. The scope of investigation sanctioned by Section 230 does not permit the Court executing the decree to go into this question. The object of the Legislature in enacting this Section was to provide a summary remedy for those whose property is not under any circumstances liable to answer the demands against the judgment-debtor.— 7 T. L. R., 121.

5. A party who has been in possession on his own account for more than 12 years, without any recognition of the claims of the judgment-debtor, is entitled, on the strength of such possession to an order releasing the property from attachment made in execution of a decree-debt, unless it is shown that the judgment-debtor has still a present right, title, or interest in the attached property. If the claims of a party have been time-barred, and are thus unenforceable, his bare right, if any, is valueless, and the purchaser who would stand in the shoes of such party, can derive no benefit whatever from the purchase. An attachment and sale of such valueless rights are not contemplated by the C. P. C. and before a property can be put up for sale it must be shown that the debtor has on it some present right, title or interest capable of valuation. When a person in possession of porperty sold in execution as being the property of another, sues to establish his title to such property, the burden of proof is not upon him but upon the purchaser, and on failure of proof of title in the judgment-debtor, plaintiff is entitled to a decree

6. Where an application is made to set aside an attachment of property in the possession of the judgment-debtor, on the ground that the debt was not contracted for purposes which would make it a charge on such property, and involving such other questions as the Court is not competent to try, and the execution Court refers the application to a regular suit, Section 230 (Regulation II of 1037) has no application and the period of limitation applicable to cases of that nature is 12 years.—

7. Certain property was attached in execution of a decree against a junior member of a Marumakkathayam Tarwad. The Karanavan and senior Anandaravan objected to the attachment on the ground that the property belonged to the Tarwad and was not liable to be attached for a junior member's personal debt. The Court executing the decree found that the Tarwad had no right to the property. The property was subsequently sold in auction, and a suit was brought by a female member of the Tarwad to set aside the sale one year after the date of the order dismissing the Karanavan's claim.

Held.—When a claim is made under Section 230 (Regulation II of 1037) and on proper investigation it is disallowed, the sale of the property claimed which may take place subsequently, is subject to the result of any suit that the unsuccessful claimant may bring within one year from the date of the disallowance of the claim.

Therefore, the suit is barred by one year's limitation under Article 7 of the Limitation Regulation.

Article 8 does not apply, as the rights of the Tarwad which the Karanavan represented in the proceedings under this Section were unaffected by the sale.

The act of the Karanavan, in the absence of fraud or collusion, is the act of the whole Tarwad ; and a judgment or decree passed in a suit brought by or against a Karanavan, binds all his Seshakars and operates as res judicata. An order under this Section has the same force of res judicata as a decree in a regular suit.— 9 T. L. R., 78.

8. In execution of a money decree against some junior members of a Tarwad, certain property belonging thereto was attached, whereon the Karanavan and others preferred a claim which was allowed on the ground that Tarwad property was not liable for the debt. The decree was subsequently assigned, and the assignee attached certain other properties belonging to the Tarwad, which were—no claim having been preferred—sold and purchased by third parties. The suit was brought to set aside this sale. The Munsiff dismissed the suit, but the Zillah Judge held that the order on the claim petition debarred execution of the decree against the Tarwad properties.

Held.—The order on the claim petition was not authorised by law. It is not within the competence of a Court executing a decree to determine whether that decree is binding on the judgment-debtors' Tarwad, or in other words, whether the judgment-debtors were competent to borrow the decree-debt on behalf of their family. Such a Court cannot, under the provisions of Section 230 (Regulation II of 1037) entertain and decide the question whether the decree was passed against the debtors in their representative or individual capacity. It cannot, by any order passed in execution, limit or modify the operation of the decree. Its functions in executing a decree are purely ministerial. Under Section 230, the Court has simply to consider whether the attached property was or was not in the possession of the judgment-debtors or of any other person on behalf of them, at the time of the attachment. Such an order, under no circumstances can operate as res judicata or as estoppel against the decree-holder in attaching any other property belonging, or alleged to belong, to the debtors.

An order on a claim petition will bind and affect only parties thereto and the subject-matter thereof; the sole effect of such an order being simply to preclude the judgment-creditor from again attaching the property released from attachment thereby without establishing its liability to be sold for the decree-debt by a regular suit.—

9. A decree was passed against two junior members of an undivided Hindu families. They died soon after the decree was passed, and their respective fathers were made parties to execution proceedings. On the decree-holder attaching the immovable family properties, a stranger, alleging himself to be the alienee of the judgment-debtor's father and brothers preferred a claim which was rejected by the Court below.

Held.—No appeal lay from the said order, and the claim of one who is not a party to the execution proceedings cannot be held to fall under Section 238, C. P. C. [new Section 40]. Such a clain falls under Section 275, and therefore, the only course open to the aggrieved party is to file a separate suit to establish his right as directed by Section 280 [= Or. XXI, r. 61].— 1 S. D., 1.

10. An objection by the junior member of a Marumakkathayam Tarwad to the attachment of Tarwad property in execution of a decree against his Karanavan, who is alive and on record as judgment-debtor, on the ground that the debt is fictitious and therefore not binding on the Tarwad, falls under Section 275 C. P. C., and not under Section 238 [new Section 40].

It was argued that if the petitions were claims under Section 275, orders rejecting them would be final, and the appeals were therefore incompetent. But the case was one where the lower Court had erroneously failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law. The High Court dealt with the matter in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction.— 6 T. L. J., 151.

11. Objection to attachment by the person impleaded in the place of the deceased Karanavan judgment-debtor on the ground that the decree was not binding on the Tarwad falls within the scope of Section 238 C. P. C. [new Section 40], and not under Section 275.— 14 T. L. J., 68.

Ref.—19 T. L. J., 627.

12. Where a judgment-debtor raises a claim or objection on behalf of third parties who are not represented before the Court, the order thereon falls under Section 275 and not under Section 238 [new Section 40]. Therefore, where a decree is obtained against the Tarwad properties of the plaintiffs and certain properties are attached in execution, an order passed on the petition of the plaintiffs to raise the attachment on the ground that the properties attached are the Makkathayom properties of the plaintiffs falls under Section 275 and not under Section 238.

It is open to the Appellate Court to go into the question of res judicata or any other question of law which may be raised for the first time in appeal provided it does not require the proof of any facts.—

Release of property from attachment.

Case Law.

The question was whether an attaching creditor under the Civil Procedure Code could be deemed to have acquired any interest in the property attached, and, if so, whether such interest was sufficient to sustain a claim under Section 276 of the Code.

Held.— (1) The statutory effect of an attachment duly intimated and made known in the manner provided by the Civil Procedure Code, is to render void, as against all claims enforceable under the attachment, any private alienation by the debtor of the attached property. This restriction on the power of free disposition has the effect of creating a real obligation which is correlative to a right in rem vested in the attaching creditor. This right being in and over another's property is a right in re aliena—an encumbrance in the generic sense; and, being created for the purpose of securing satisfaction of the decree, it may be called a lien or charge, though its operation is much less extensive than that of a charge as ordinarily understood. It is, however, an interest in the attached property sufficiently substantial to entitle the person in whom it is vested (namely, the attaching creditor) to claim an investigation under Sections 275 to 279, of the Code.

(2) The above observations hold equally good in the case of an attachment before judgment as in the case of one after judgment.

"The most common form of judicial liens is an attachment of the debtor's property in execution of a decree against him. But such attachment, though it avoids as against the attachimg creditor any alienation of the property made by the debtor during its continuance, does not create any interest in the creditor which enables him to be paid out of the property attached in priority to other creditors. Though an attachment does not confer any title, but only prevents alienations, it cannot be said that it creates no kind of charge upon the property."

Looking at the various Sections (276-280) as a whole, there can be little doubt that the Legislature intended that the same effect should be given to an attachment before judgment as is expressly provided in Section 276 in respect to an attachment in execution of a decree.—35 T. L. R., *54

59. Where the Court is satisfied that the property was, at the time it was attached, in the possession of the judgment-debtor as his own property and not on account of any other person, or was in the possession of some other person in trust for him, or in the occupancy of a tenant or other person paying rent to him, the Court shall disallow the claim.

Disallowance of claim to property attached.

60. Where the Court is satisfied that the property is subject to a mortgage or charge in favour of some person not in possession, and thinks fit to continue the attachment, it may do so, subject to such mortgage or charge.

61. Where a claim or an objection is preferred, the party against whom an order is made may institute a suit to establish the right which he claims to the property in dispute, but, subject to the result of such suit, if any, the order shall be conclusive.

1. A property was attached, in respect of which the appellant's mother had a maintenance right. Her prayer was that the attachment placed on that property should be raised so far as it affected her interests. The order passed on the claim petition releasing the attachment could be held to operate only on the interest which the appellant's mother claimed in respect of the property. In other respects, the attachment must be considered to have been in force. Therefore, no fresh attachment before sale was necessary.

I. The corresponding Section of the old Regulation was as follows :—

"280. Saving of suits to establish right to attached property.—The party against whom an order under Section 277, 278, or 279 is passed may institute a suit to establish the right which he claims to the property in dispute, but subject to the result of such suit, if any, the order shall be conclusive."

II. In regard to this Rule, the Notes on Clauses say :—

"This is couched in terms wider than the language used in the present Code. The orders that may now be included, but are not within the language of Section 280 C. P. C., are orders passed on default of parties in prosecuting or defending claims. The mischief aimed at by providing a shorter period of limitation when claims are allowed or disallowed on merits is, more or less, present when the disposal is by default."

Case Law.

1. The object of a summary investigation into a claim on attached property is, on the one hand, to prevent sales of property not belonging to the judgment-debtor, and, on the other, to ascertain the property that could be sold for the debt. The order made on the claim petition is expressly made final, subject to the result of any regular suit that may be brought to contest it within one year. Where the order is not, by regular suit, contested within the prescribed time and the sale proceeds in pursuance of the order, the parties to the order have no right to question the validity of the sale. The order will operate as estoppel as against the parties thereto in subsequent suits, even though they appear as defendants in such suits.— 9 T. L. R., 201.

Ex.—K. P., 303.

2. An order passed on a claim petition has no force of res judicata, its only effect being that it will be conclusive on the parties thereto, and as regards the subject-matter thereof, if unquestioned for a year from the date of its passing.—

3. Where a plaintiff, an auction-purchaser, who alleged himself to be the benami for 2nd defendant at the time of purchase, had brought a suit under his original purchase for recovery of the property from the 1st defendant to whom the 2nd defendant had made an assignment of the same :

Held.—(1) The 1st defendant is not debarred from proving her title to the property as against the certified auction-purchaser, the plaintiff. Section 314 of the C. P. C. only bars the maintainability of suits brought against certified purchasers.

(2) Where a judgment-debtor has had notice of a claim and his interest in the property is in direct conflict with the interest claimed by the claimant, Article 7 of the Limitation Regulation applies to him, i. e., his suit to set aside the claim order must be brought within one year of the date thereof.

Fol. —K. P., 303.

4. An order passed on the merits of a claim petition claiming any portion of the attached property is conclusive, unless it is disputed within one year by means of a regular suit.

The order which has become conclusive by the failure of the defendant's predecessor in estate to contest it in time by a regular suit precludes the defendant from disputing the plaintiff's right to any part of the property in dispute.— 15 T. L. R., 63.

5. When the judgment-debt in satisfaction of which an attachment of property was made has been paid into Court and the attachment has practically come to an end, the party who unsuccessfully sought to cancel the attachment in the first instance is not entitled to maintain a suit having for its object the cancellation of the attachment and the establishment of his alleged claim.

Section 280 contemplates the continuance of the attachment and it could not have been the intention of the Legislature to give the right of suit to an unsuccessful claimant, even after the object of the claim is attained in other ways.

The law does not require the formal withdrawal of an attachment on payment of the decree-debt into Court. It is left to the parties to apply for and obtain an order of withdrawal of attachment. The omission to obtain such order would not give an unsuccessful claimant a right of suit for cancelling an attachment which has vanished the moment the decree-debt has been paid into Court.— 18 T. L. R., 79.

6. Per Sadasiva Iyer, C. J.—As the suit is brought under the statutory right given to plaintiff by Section 280 C. P. C. (that is, for a declaration that the order passed in favour of second defendant on the latter's application to raise the execution attachment should be made ineffectual), the objection that an ordinary suit to declare an alienation as fraudulent against creditors should be brought only on behalf of all creditors, cannot prevail.—

(1). The case in I. L. R. 8 Madras 484 at page 493 shows that where the Legislature has enacted that an order shall be "conclusive" no revision petition lies. The Section under which the order was passed in this case by the lower Court used the word "final," but it means the same thing (see 7 Bombay 341 at the end where the words "final" and "conclusive" are used as synonymous).

(2). No question of jurisdiction or irregularity is involved and petitioner has his right by suit expressly granted by the Legislature. The petition is rejected.—

8. In a suit for a declaration of right to and recovery of plaint property on the footing of a lease, the 1st defendant set up in respect of that property his right as assignee of a mortgage of 1053 and his purchase of the equity of redemption in 1072 and both the lower Courts dismissed the suit holding the defence allegations to be true. In special appeal, two claim orders in favour of plaintiff passed after 1053 in cases in which the vendor's Tarwad was the judgment-debtor were urged as estopping 1st defendant from putting forth his claims.

Held,—(1) A judgment-debtor is not necessarily a party against whom an order is made within the meaning of that term as used in Section 280, C. P. C., and whether he was such must depend on the facts of each case.

(2) The claim orders being after 1053 could not affect 1st defendant's mortgage rights and the special appeal must be dismissed as the judgment-debtor was not proved to have had notice of the claim proceedings.— K. P., 303.

9. Revision petitions do not lie against orders in claim petitions which are declared by Section 280 to be conclusive, subject to the result of the suit which the parties against whom such orders are passed may institute to establish the right which they claim to the property in dispute.—

10. It was contended that if the petitions were to be really deemed as claims under Section 275, orders rejecting them would be final, and the appeals were incompetent. As the cases were those in which the lower Court had erroneously failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law, the matter may be dealt by the High Court in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction.

6 T. L. J., 151.

11. Orders on claim petitions are not ordinarily liable to be interfered with in revision. No doubt, the revisionary jurisdiction of the Travancore High Court is much wider in scope than that of the High Courts in British India, but this distinction makes it all the more incumbent on the High Court to exercise the jurisdiction sparingly and with circumspection and to abstain, except on extraordinary occasions and under proper safeguards, from setting aside or varying orders which have not been appealed from, where appeals are permissible, or are expressly declared by law to be non-appealable and final.

In the case, it was neither alleged nor shown that irreparable injury would result from the rejection of the revision petition or that the Court below acted manifestly without jurisdiction when it disallowed the claim. On the other hand, the attachment objected to by the petitioner had been followed up by the proclamation and sale of the movable properties attached. The corresponding Section of the old Regulation was as follows :—

"281. Power to order property attached to be sold and proceeds to be paid to person entitled.—Any Court may order that any property not being a decree for money which has been attached, or such portion thereof as may seem necessary to satisfy the decree, shall be sold, and that the proceeds of such sale, or a sufficient portion thereof, shall be paid to the party entitled under the decree to receive the same."

Case Law.

1. A sale upon an attachment before judgment may legally follow after decree, only if there are no conflicting attachments. If there are conflicting attachments, the creditor could not, without a second attachment, call upon the Court to issue a process for sale of the property attached by him before decree.— 2 T. L. R. *42.

Dist.—9 T. L. R., 72.

2. A Court-sale cannot change the nature of the tenure of the property or the particular enactment by which it was governed before such sale. The purchaser—whatever may be his caste or creed—succeeds to all the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor.

The purchaser of a jenmom at a Court-sale is treated in all respects as the original Jenmi.

A public sale in execution of a decree vests in the purchaser the right, title and interest possessed on the land by the judgment-debtor. No portion of such rights can be taken away from the purchaser in the absence of a statute authorising the deprivation.

While a Court-purchaser succeeds to all the rights and privileges of the debtor in relation to the property purchased, he equally becomes liable to all the obligations created by the latter in favour of third parties in respect of that property.— 8 T. L. R., *6.

Ref.—4 T. L. J., 117.

3. A sale by Court of Tarwad property in execution of a decree against the Karanavan, being held not merely on behalf of the Karanavan individually, but on his behalf as representative of the Tarwad, absence of Seshakar's consent cannot invalidate the sale, as in the case of a private sale by the Karanavan. The sale is made on behalf of all those whom the decree would bind in the absence of any allegation of fraud, &c. There is no analogy between a sale in execution of a decree and a private sale. In the one, the purchaser derives his title through the vendor, and, in the other, he acquires a title by operation of law adversely to the judgment-debtor.—

4. The uniform practice of the Courts has all along been to determine the interest conveyed by a sale in execution of a money decree, with reference to the powers of the judgment-debtor to bind the family by the contract which is the basis for such decree. There is really no difference in this regard between an ordinary Hindu family in its undivided condition and a Malabar Tarwad.

5. Section 281 applies only to cases where the property has been attached in execution of the decree ; and an attachment before judgment is not such an attachment without a fresh application for execution in the prescribed form, though Section 469 [= Or. XXXVI, r. 11 ] dispenses with the necessity for a re-attachment.—

2 T. L. J., 100.

6. A, in the capacity of judgment-creditor, purchased in Court sale, as a result of chance, certain properties of the same name as purchased by B in the same sale. B sued A, on the mere identity of the name for the declaration of his title to the same. The Courts below dismissed B's claim. It was contended in special appeal that A was estopped from saying that the property purchased by him in the Court sale was a different property bearing a different name.

Held.—(1) As there was no intention on the part of A to deceive B by misrepresentations and no inducement to him to act on such deception, there was no estoppel in the case and that it did not fall within the purview of Section 115 of the Evidence Act.

(2) An execution creditor gives no implied warranty of title to a judgment-debtor to property sold at his instance.

Semble.—The distinction between private and Court sales or sales in invitum is that, in the former, the price is fixed by the vendor and the purchaser alone, while in the latter, the sale must be made by public auction conducted by a public officer, of which notice must be given as directed by the Act and at which the public are entitled to bid. Under the former, the purchaser derives title through the vendor and cannot acquire a better title than that of the vendor. Under the latter, the purchaser, notwithstanding he acquires merely the right, title and interest of the debtor, acquires the same by operation of law adversely to the debtor.— 15 T. L. J., 29.

7. A obtained a decree against B and attached and brought to Court-sale certain properties in which B had only a reversionary interest at the time. Afterwards when the succession opened, B became the full owner and he sold the properties to C. C brought a suit for possession as against A, purchaser in auction.

Held.—The sale in execution of B's interest in the properties being a transfer of an expectancy was null and void, as the transaction was opposed to public policy and interest.— 25 T. L. R., 154.

8. A mortgagor, judgment-debtor, died after decree. of the judgment-debtor in execution, the sale was only voidable. Any step to set it aside must be taken within one year of the sale being confirmed and irregularities, such as bringing in the wrong representative in execution, did not per se vitiate the sale.

(2) The sale not having been sought to be set aside within such time, the plaintiff's title under the purchase had become absolute under Article 8 (a) of the Limitation Regulation.— 26 T. L. R., 70 (= 1 T. L. J., 191**).

9. No member of a judgment-debtor's Tarwad could seek to set aside a court-sale of Tarwad property on any ground whatever unless he brings his suit within one year from the date of the sale.

The nature of the amendment made in Article 8 by Regulation V of 1068 makes it clear that the term, 'to set aside an execution sale', as applied to sales held in execution of decrees against the members of the family of the parties who seek to set them aside should be interpreted as applying to all suits when the validity of such sales comes into question. The object of such an enactment is probably to minimise collusive suits by members of a Tarwad.— 26 T. L. R., 131 (= 1 T. L. J., 195**).

Ref.—4 T. L. J., 178.

10. A sale without the proper representatives being brought on the record is not a nullity. It is operative, though liable to be set aside for due cause. "The Limitation Act protects bona fide purchasers at judicial sales by providing a short limit of time within which suits may be brought to set them aside. If the protection is to be confined to suits which seek no other relief than a declaration that the sale ought to be set aside and is to vanish directly some other relief consequential on the annulment of the sale is sought, the protection is exceedingly small." IV. After Section 284, there was in Regulation II of 1065, the following Section taken from the Indian Code of 1882. It has been omitted here, as in the existing Indian Code:—"285. Indemnity of Judges, &c.—No Judge or other public officer shall be answerable for any error, mis-statement, or omission in any proclamation under Section 284, unless the same has been committed or made dishonestly."

Case Law.

1. A mortgagee leased to the mortgagor the several properties mortgaged to him and obtaining a decree for arrears of rent due, attached the equity of redemption in some of those properties. In the proclamation of sale, the mortgage debt due to the mortgagee was mentioned in one lump. The lower Court refused to grant the mortgagor's prayer that the mortgagee should be ordered to apportion the mortgage amount in proportion to the value of each property separately :

Held.—Because, as a rule, a mortgage is indivisible, the Court cannot, without the mortgagee's consent, apportion the amount on each property according to its value.

Section 284 prescribes the mode in which proclamations of sale should issue and what particulars they should contain, and one of the particulars is the mention of the amount of any encumbrance on the property, if one should exist. The decree-holder had by mentioning the mortgage amount fully complied with the requirements of the Section.— 17 T. L. R., 110.

(= 2 T. L. J., 108).

2. The holding of a sale on a wrong date is a mere irregularity, and will not make the sale a nullity.— 2 S. D., 269.

3. Under a deed of mortgage, the mortgagor became lessee of the property mortgaged, and arrears of rent were declared by the deed to be a charge on the property. The mortgagee-lessor obtained a decree for arrears of rent; and in execution of the decree the property was sold subject to the mortgage amount and purchased by a stranger. The mortgagee obtained a second decree for rent, viz., for arrears that accrued due after date of first suit, in execution proceeded against the property in the hands of the purchaser under the first court-sale. It was contended on behalf of the purchaser that the mortgagee, having omitted at the time of first sale to mention the existence of arrears of rent which were chargeable on the property, could not proceed against the property which was sold free of all charges except the one mentioned by him in the sale proclamation.

Held.—As at the time of first court-sale, the mortgagee failed to mention the existence of any further charge in his favour, the auction-purchaser took the property free of all charges on account of subsequent arrears of rent. The omission by the mortgagee to disclose the existence of other liens on the property must be taken to amount to a waiver on his part of his right to enforce such liens.

The omission of the execution creditor to mention in the sale-proclamation any second or subsequent charge that he may have on the property raises a presumption that the sale in execution, following on the proclamation, was free of the subsequent or second charge.

"The purchaser, if he knew of the mortgage, was entitled to assume, unless notified to the contrary, that the plaintiff was selling the whole interest in the mortgaged property; and if he did not know of the mortgage, that the plaintiff, at all events, had no lien over the property which he was bringing to sale and was not, under the provisions of the Code, bound to search the register to ascertain whether the plaintiff held a lien over the property or not." (22 Bom., 686).— 26 T. L. R., 254 (= 2 T. L. J., 66*).

4. When a Jenmi brings his Kanom property to sale for arrears of Michavarom, due up to a certain date, without declaring that the holding was subject at the time of sale to a further charge in his favour for arrears of a subsequent period, the auction-purchaser takes the property free of all encumbrances on account of subsequent arrears.

The fact that the Jenmi has himself become the purchaser does not make any difference in the law. He is entitled to a personal decree against the tenant for the subsequent arrears up to the date of delivery of possession of the holding purchased in execution.— 29 T. L. R., 102 (= 3 T. L. J., 409*).

5. The decree-holder in a suit attached 800 bags of paddy belonging to the judgment-debtor and in the possession of a stranger on behalf of the judgment-debtor. In the proclamation of sale, the decree-holder stated that the bags contained each 150 lbs. of paddy. The plaintiff purchased them in Court auction and found on measurement the quantity to be less. It was found that there was no fraud on the part of the decree-holder and that the plaintiff had inspected the paddy before purchasing.

Held.— The decree-holder (defendant) was not liable for the loss. The extent and value set forth in the sale proclamation is at best an approximate statement. It was not fraudulently mis-stated. The defendant owed no duty to the plaintiff who was a stranger to him.— 5 T. L. J., 96.

6. The order of the District Judge was —The proclamation may be issued subject to the determination by the Court on a subsequent date of the actual amount due.

Such an order to issue proclamation should not have been passed before deciding the judgment-debtor's objection as to the correctness of the amount payable under the decree.— 8 T. L. J., 202.

7. A gross under-statement of the value of the property in the proclamation is a material irregularity in publishing and conducting the sale, under Section 308, C. P. C., [Or. XXI, r. 87], against which the judgment-debtor will be entitled to seek relief under that Section.

"It is true that the mis-statement is something more grave than an ordinary irregularity of procedure; but the fact that it is so and that it was made gratuitously by the decree-holder and the Court does not prevent it from being a material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale, such as to bring the case within the special remedy provided by the above Section. Whatever material fact is stated in the proclamation (and the value of the property is a material fact), must be considered as one of those things 'which the Court considered material for the purchaser to know, and it is enacted in terms (though express enactment is hardly necessary for such an object) that those things shall be stated as fairly and accurately as possible." (20 All., 412).— 9 T. L. J., 271.

8. Before the property was sold, the judgment-debtor complained to the Court that the schedule of proclamation did not correctly specify the value of the property sought to be sold or the number of trees standing thereon.

Held.—Section 284, C. P. C., does not require the executing Court to make an investigation on the application of the judgment-debtor into the question of the value of the property to be sold, to record evidence and to come to a decision on the point. The judgment-debtor has his remedy under Section 308 [= Or. XXI, r. 87] if the property happens to be undersold in consequence of a material mis-representation of its value in the proclamation schedule.— 12 T. L. J., 276.

Ref.—19 T. L. J., 924.

9. The assignee of an auction-purchaser put in a petition praying that item No. 1 described in the sale certificate granted to him as "Kallarkottu Devaswom Pattom Pallathupurayidom Survey No. 472/1A, measuring 38 cents" should be corrected as "Kudiyiruppu, Second Kannaru Survey No. 677/25 in 97 measuring one acre and one cent." This petition was opposed by the decree-holder and was rejected by the Munsiff. The District Judge, on appeal, allowed the correction. The defendant and his assignee appealed.

Held.—The question for decision was whether the prayer of the assignee of the auction-purchaser for correction of the description of item No. 1 property in the sale certificate could be allowed.

The High Court, after finding upon evidence that it was not possible to come to any certain conclusion as to the identity of the property actually sold, held :—

This is not a case where the maxim falsa demonstratio non nocet cum de corpore constat (mere false description does not vitiate if there be sufficient certainty as to the object) applies. The maxim is often stated without the addition of the words cum de corpore constat. But these words are of importance. The maxim applies only to cases in which the false demonstration is superadded to that which was sufficiently certain before.

Section 284 requires that the sale proclamation shall specify, as fairly and accurately as possible, (among other things), the property to be sold, any encumbrance to which the property is liable, and every other thing which it is necessary for the purchaser to know in order to judge of the nature and value of the property, and that the judgment-creditor shall furnish the Court with the particulars above mentioned. The object of the above provisions is clearly to enable the intending purchasers to have an accurate idea of the nature of the property they are going to purchase and to protect the judgment-debtor against this property being sold for an inadequate amount as a result of misdescription. It will open a wide door to fraud if decree-holders could sell properties through Court with misleading descriptions and purchase the same themselves as in the case and afterwards get the sale certificate corrected with material alterations in the description of the property as stated in the proclamation for sale.— 38 T. L. R., 17 (= 12 T. L. J., 278).

Ref.—12 T. L. J., 283.

10. Arrears of rent due in respect of a property sought to be sold should be regarded as an encumbrance which should be mentioned in a sale proclamation, if the right to such arrears is intended to be reserved.— 15 T. L. J., 364.

11. The preponderance of authority is in favour of the view that proceedings under Section 284, C. P. C., are ministerial proceedings, and that an order made in such proceedings is not a decree appealable as such within the meaning of Section 288 [ new Section 40 ].—Obiter.—

12. An order passed under Rule 64 of Order XXI is a judicial order and not a ministerial one.

For such an order to become appealable under Section 40, it must be one which satisfies the definition of a decree under Section 2.

Whether the determination of particulars under Rule 64 of Order XXI will constitute a decree will depend upon the nature of the particulars so determined.

Where the only objection is that the property has been undervalued, an order determining that point is not subject to appeal.— 18 T. L. J., 430.

13. An order passed under Rule 64 of Order XXI settling the details in the proclamation cannot per se be treated as one of a judicial nature; but, if it relates to matters relating to the liability of the properties for being proceeded against under the decree and other kindred ones, it partakes of a judicial character, and unless vacated would conclude the parties so far as such questions are concerned.—

14. Ordinarily, orders under Order XXI, Rule 64, are not appealable, as they are more or less of a quasi-judicial, if not interlocutory, character, though they could not be treated as being strictly ministerial in their nature. But if, however, the orders can be taken to have settled some points relating to the execution of the decree, such as the settling of the boundaries and the determination that certain accredited land should be included in the property to be sold, they would fall within the ambit of Section 40 of the Code, as they necessarily relate to the execution of the decree within the meaning of that Section.

When the application is that the sale of a portion of the property of the judgment-debtor should be postponed till the other properties are sold, an order passed on the application falls under Section 40. This does not belong to the class of orders expressly declared appealable as such under Order XLII, Rule 1. The order appealed against is a decree under Section 2 (2) against which an appeal would clearly lie under Section 76.

The right of marshalling is available in execution proceedings to a judgment-debtor if the equities between the parties justify the application of the same. It is open to a judgment-debtor to claim the same, even if he had failed to set up the same in the suit itself, the transaction, on the strength of which he claims such right, having taken place before the date of the suit. Such a right could be validly set up even if the same had been claimed in the suit itself and refused, as the proper stage at which the same could be set up was during the execution proceedings. What should be looked to in such cases is that the mortgagee's interests are not in any way jeopardized.—

(=19 T. L. J., 491).

15. The appeal was against an order in execution dismissing the objection petition of the judgment-debtors to the proclamation and sale of the properties covered by the decree. The objection-petition stated that the properties had been misdescribed and undervalued and that there was a defect of parties.

65. (1) Every proclamation shall be made and published, as nearly as may be, in the manner prescribed by Rule 52, Sub-Rule (2).

Mode of making proclamation.

(2) Where the Court so directs, such proclamation shall also be published in the Government Gazette or in a local newspaper, or in both, and the costs of such publication shall be deemed to be costs of the sale.

(3) Where property is divided into lots for the purpose of being sold separately, it shall not be necessary to make a separate proclamation for each lot, unless proper notice of the sale cannot, in the opinion of the Court, otherwise be given.

On behalf of the respondent-decree-holder a preliminary objection was raised that no appeal lay. It was contended that the order was of a ministerial and administrative nature and not a judicial one and that, even if it was treated as a judicial one, it could not be considered to be the determination of a question within Section 40 so as to constitute a decree under Section 2 of the Code.

Held.—(1) The order in question was a judicial order. The insistence of issue of notice to the other side and the enabling provision authorising the Court to summon witnesses for examination or production of documents would constitute proceedings under Order XXI, Rule 64, of the Code judicial proceedings in the eye of law.

(2) All orders passed under Order XXI, Rule 64, could not be treated as falling under Section 40. If, however, they decided some questions relating to the execution of the decree, the orders would fall within the ambit of Section 40, and be, therefore, appealable as decrees under Section 2 (2) of the Code. In this view, the order in question, so far as it related to misdescription and defect of parties, fell within the purview of Section 40 of the Code and was appealable. But so far as the question of under-valuation was concerned, the order could not be treated as one falling under Section 40 and was not, therefore, appealable.— 19 T. L. J., 530.

"286. Mode of making proclamation.—The proclamation shall be made in manner prescribed by Section 271, and a copy thereof shall then be fixed up in the Court-house, and in the case of land paying revenue to Government, also in the Tahsildar's office.

"If the Court so direct, such proclamation shall also be published in the Official Gazette and in some local newspaper, and the costs of such publication shall be deemed to be costs of the sale."

II. Sub-Rule (1).—1. The words "as nearly as may be" are inserted "because the provision applies generally to sales of both kinds of property, and in the case of movables, the provisions relating to immovable property cannot be applied in their entirety."— India Gazette dated 21-3-1903, Pt. V.

2. It would be noted that the word "then" which occurred in the first Para of Section 286 above given did not find a place in Section 271—see under Rule 52 Supra.

As the present Rule (66) requires that the proclamation shall be made and published in the manner required by Rule 52, Sub-Rule (2), the word "then" was added in that Rule, as "the sequence of acts is important with reference to the starting point of the period of limitation prescribed in Rule 66."— Ibid.

III. Sub-Rule (2).—The Courts are given "an option not to publish in the Gazette, which is not commonly read by the classes most affected."— Ibid.

Sub-Rule (3).—This incorporates the substance of a leading decision on the subject of the division of a joint property into lots —12 Bom., 368. It was held in that case that where property is divided into a number of small lots, as a means of obtaining a better aggregate price, the law does not require that separate proclamation should be made on each lot.

IV. Section 266 contains the necessary directions as to the publication of a proclamation of sale. The word "proclamation" used in the Section is the advertisement of sale prepared in the manner prescribed in Section 284 [ = Rule 64]. The verb "made" in the first sentence of the Section does not obviously mean "drawn up." Its meaning cannot but be "published." The word "proclaimed" in Section 271 [ = Rule 52 ] means "published." To contend that both the words "proclaimed" and "proclamation" should be understood in one and the same sense is clearly opposed to the context. The Legislature could not have intended to dispense with the affixing of the copy of the proclamation of sale on the spot, which would not only be convenient to many intending purchasers, but also tend to secure better prices for the property sold, by increasing the number of bidders at Court auction. The cause of the repetition in Section 286 of the mode of publishing copies of proclamation of sale in Court and Tahsildar's office is that such publication should be made only after the publication on the spot, whereas in the case of attachment order, the affixing of copies in the Court-house and Tahsildar's office could be done before the property is actually attached. The adverb "then" used in Section 286 in connection with the affixing of copies in the Court and Tahsildar's office clearly supports this view. As a difference in the time of the publication of order of attachment and proclamation of sale in the Court and Tahsildar's office was introduced, the repetition in Section 286 became necessary; but in the case of affixing of copy of the proclamation on the spot which could be done simultaneously with the beat of drum, no such repetition was necessary.—

Case Law.

1. The omission to affix near the property the proclamation of sale held in execution of a decree under Section 286 of the Civil Procedure Code is a material irregularity which vitiates the sale.

The words—"The proclamation shall be made in the manner described by Section 271" in Section 286 were meant to include the affixing to the property as well as the publication by beat of tom-tom. The word "then" following the above phraseology indicates that the affixing in the Court-house and the Tahsildar's Cutcherry is to be in addition and not instead of the affixing at the spot. The Legislature could not have meant to dispense with the procedure in question as it is highly necessary to give intending purchasers full particulars of the property to be sold.— 21 T. L. R., 157.

2. The decree was against three brothers. The sole surviving brother applied, on behalf of himself and the minor son of a deceased brother, to set aside the sale of their property alleging material irregularity, but he withdrew the application subsequently and the Court sanctioned it. On the application of the minor's mother for a review of the order on the ground that the guardian had acted collusively, the Court set aside the sale to the full.

66. Save in the case of property of the kind described in the proviso to Rule 41, no sale hereunder shall, without the consent in writing of the judgment-debtor, take place until after the expiration of at least thirty days in the case of immovable property, and of at least fifteen days in the case of movable property, calculated from the date on which the copy of the proclamation has been affixed on the court-house of the Judge ordering the sale.

Time of sale.

67. (1) The Court may, in its discretion, adjourn any sale hereunder to a specified day and hour, and the officer conducting any such sale may in his discretion adjourn the sale, recording his reasons for such adjournment:

Adjournment or stoppage of sale.

Provided that, where the sale is made in, or within the precincts of, the court-house, no such adjournment shall be made without the leave of the Court.

Held.—There was material irregularity by reason of the inadequacy of the price and the consequent loss, the undervaluation in the proclamation list and the omission to affix the sale proclamation on the spot. The lower Court's order could be upheld only to the extent of the minor's share.— K. P., 260.

3. Held (by a majority).—The making of a sale proclamation on the property of a judgment-debtor is "execution of any process for enforcing the judgment on property" within the meaning of Article 136 of the Limitation Regulation (old).

Per Viraraghava Iyengar, J.—Section 286 says that a proclamation is under the the Code made in the same manner as a warrant of attachment, and if time runs against the judgment-debtor under Article 136 from the date of attachment, it seems to me that there is no sufficient reason for holding that time could not run against him from the date when the proclamation was made under Section 286.— 9 T. C., was effected only on the 12th Kanni 1096, and the application to set aside the ex parte decree was made on the 10th Thulam 1096:

Held.—The application was not barred under Section 136 of the Limitation Regulation (old). It is only after the affixing of the copy in the Tahsildar's office that the "process" can be said to have been executed, which means carried into effect. The publication in the Tahsildar's office was admittedly on the 12th Kanni 1096; and the application was therefore within time.— 37 T. L. R., 290 of the properties deposited in Court the proportionate debt charged upon that property. The Court, in spite of the deposit, sold the very property along with others for the realisation of the remaining portion of the debt. In the appeal preferred by the depositor to cancel the sale as illegal, it was contended by the purchaser that the debt alluded to in Section 288, C. P. C., meant the whole of the decree debt and not a portion of it, that the purchaser not being a representative of any of the parties to the suit, Section 238 [new Section 40] would not apply, and that, therefore, no appeal lay in the case.

Held.—(1) The said deposit came within the meaning of debt under Section 288 and therefore, the sale was illegal. The Section imperatively enjoins the stay of sale if before the lot is knocked down, the debt and costs, &c., are tendered to the officer conducting the sale.

(2) The appeal was maintainable.

Even assuming that no appeal lay, considering the hardship, if not the injustice done to 3rd defendant (the depositor of the proportionate debt) by the gross carelessness of the Judge who had the conduct of the sale in not obeying the strict directions contained in Section 288, this matter can be treated as one falling under the High Court's revisional powers granted by Section 568, C. P. C. [new Section 89] and such order passed as may seem fit.— 16 T. L. R. App., 3.

This sale was impeached on the ground of irregularity which caused the property to be under-sold. The lower Court held that, as the sale took place on the next day after the 7th day, the sale could not be set aside.

Held (on appeal).—(1) There was material irregularity in the publication of the sale.

Section 288 lays down that an adjournment of the sale may be made by the Court for seven days without a fresh proclamation. No sale can take place without a proclamation and the Code allows the proclamation to be omitted only in the case of a sale adjourned for seven days. The omission to advertise a sale is an irregularity of a material nature. The omission to publish a sale by beat of drum has been held to be a material irregularity. When a sale fixed for 20th November was delayed until the 22nd without any order of postponement or a fresh proclamation, it was ruled there was material irregularity.

1. Sub-Rule (1).—The following words, which occurred as the second sentence in the corresponding first Para of Section 291 of the old Regulation, have been omitted :—

"The Court may, in granting such permission, add such conditions as it deems necessary."

In regard to the sentence thus omitted, it may be noted that Section 294 of the Indian Code of 1882 did not contain it. In adopting that Section, the above sentence was also added. The Statement of Objects and Reasons said :—

"48. The object of Section 294 is to prevent the purchase of property by the judgment-creditor at a nominal price. Permission is to be granted, before the property is brought to sale. If it is unconditional, the mischief sought to be removed may be committed under the direct sanction of the Court. It is, therefore, expedient that the Court must have the power of setting aside the sale when it finds that the property was grossly undersold. This can be secured only by empowering the Court to attach such conditions as it may consider necessary, to the permission it may grant."

2. Sub-Rule (2).—The words "subject to the provisions of Section 59" have been substituted for the words "if he so desires."

3. Sub-Rule (3).—The words "whose interests are affected by" have been substituted for the words "interested in."

Case Law.

1. The object of Section 291, C. P. C., is to prevent judgment creditors from buying properties at nominal prices in execution of their own decrees and thereby committing fraud upon the debtors. This will not be completely secured if any member of his family is allowed to purchase the property. The benefit which the Legislature intended to confer on the judgment-debtors would be lost by holding that the restriction laid down by Section 291 does not apply to the undivided members of the creditor's family. The law must be so interpreted as to secure the benevolent object of the Legislature and to prevent the mischief which the law intended to remove.

Where the undivided Seshakaran of the judgment-creditor purchased the property of the judgment-debtor at the court auction:

Held.—The purchase comes within the prohibition under Section 291 of the Civil Procedure Code.— 17 T. L. R. App., 6.

2. No appeal lies from an order passed under Section 291 granting permission to a decree-holder to bid at a sale in execution of his decree. It is not every order under Section 291 that is made appealable under Section 557, Clause (16), [ =new Section 82 and Or. XLII, r. 1 ]; but only orders referred to in Clause (3) of Section 291. Section 288 [new Section 40] is not wide enough to include orders under Section 291.—

3. The plaintiff, who was a decree-holder, advanced money to the defendant for his purchase in his name benami for the plaintiff, of property sold in execution of the decree held by the plaintiff. The plaintiff sued to recover the money he had so advanced to the defendant as the suit to recover the property purchased benami was barred by Section 314, C. P. C, [new Section 58]. The District Judge held that Section 314 was wide enough to bar the plaintiff's suit for recovery of money.

Held.—The suit was not maintainable as the plaintiff, as decree-holder, had also not obtained the sanction of the Court to bid at the sale, thus violating the express provisions of Section 291, C. P. C. He was not entitled to a return of the money from the certified purchaser who had purchased with such funds.

"It is not necessary to decide in this case whether Section 314 alone forbids a suit for the purchase money by a person not a party to the decree who advances money for a benami purchase in the name of another intended to benefit the person paying the money. If this suit were by such a person, we would have felt considerable doubt in coming to the conclusion that this Section forbade his suit for the money."—

(= 5 T. L. J., 90).

4. Section 291, C. P. C., occurs among 'general rules' relating to the sale of property both movable and immovable. Section 295 C. P. C. [ = Or. XXI, r. 75] appears among the rules as to movable property. The conflict between the two Sections can be reconciled only by treating Section 295 as an exception to Section 291.

The rule of construction is that 'whenever there is a particular enactment and a general enactment in the same statute and the latter taken in its most comprehensive sense, would overrule the former, the particular enactment must be operative and the general enactment must be taken to affect only the other part of the statute to which it may properly apply'.

Another rule of construction which leads to the same result is that the later provision overrides the earlier. "Where two coordinate Sections are apparently inconsistent, an effort must be made to reconcile them. If this is impossible, the later will generally override the earlier. But a particular enactment, whenever found, must be construed strictly as against a general provision."

The omission of a decree-holder to obtain the previous permission of the Court to bid at an auction sale of immovable property being only an irregularity, it would be decidedly so in the case of movable property.

5. The respondent, who was the plaintiff in O. S. 38 of 1095, Quilon District Court, obtained a hypothecation decree against the appellants, defendants 1 and 2. Eight items of properties were proclaimed for sale and items 3 to 6 were put up for sale and purchased by the plaintiff's Vakil for the decree amount. The plaintiff had previously filed an application for permission to bid, which also prayed that the purchase-money might be set off against the decree-amount and this had been sanctioned by the Court. Soon after the sale on the same day, the plaintiff's Vakil put in an application stating that he had bid for items 3 to 6 for the decree-amount, but he now understood that the bid was the result of a misunderstanding of his client's instructions which were to bid for items 3 to 8 and prayed that the sale may be set aside. The District Judge set aside the sale.

On appeal it was contended by the appellants, judgment-debtors, that there was no Section of the Civil Procedure Code to justify the setting aside of the sale and that the plaintiff can have no relief either on the ground of mistake as it was only an unilateral one or on the ground of agent exceeding his authority, as this was utmost a case where an agent has done acts or incurred obligations to third persons on behalf of his principal contrary to the secret instructions of the latter, but within his apparent authority, so that it might be said that the principal has by his conduct induced such third persons to believe that such acts and obligations were within the scope of the agent's authority [Section 237, Indian Contract Act, Ill : (a)]. The respondent contended that, no deposit under Section 303 C. P. C. [= Or. XXI, r. 81] having been made, the sale to the plaintiff was not complete and that the petition put in by the plaintiff's Vakil should be regarded not as an application to set aside the sale but as a refusal on the part of the purchaser to complete a sale. It was also contended that the position of a Vakil towards his client is not the same as the position of an agent.

Held (Overruling the respondent's contentions).—(1) The sale was a completed sale. Apart from any express provision of the Civil Procedure Code, there would be a valid contract of sale on the property being knocked down at the auction to the purchaser. Section 291 C. P. C., is one of those general rules relating to the sale and delivery of property in execution which govern the operation both of the rules relating to the sale and delivery of movable properties and the rules relating to the sale and delivery of immovable property. Section 303 C. P. C., is therefore controlled in its operation by Section 291. When a decree-holder applies for permission to bid the property, the Court may, in granting such permission, impose any conditions it chooses, such as that the purchase money be set-off against the decree-debt, and the decree-holder in order to obtain the consent of the Court may suggest certain conditions on which he may be allowed to purchase the property.

As it is admitted that the property was knocked down to the decree-holder and as he has desired that the purchase-money be set-off against the decree-debt, there is a completed transaction. There is nothing in the C. P. C., to show that the decree-holder's desire to have the purchase money and the amount due on the decree set-off

Sale of agricultural produce.

71. (1) Where the property to be sold is agricultural produce, the sale shall be held,—

(b) if such produce has been cut or gathered, at or near the threshing-floor or place for treading out grain or the like or fodder-stack on or in which it is deposited :

Provided that the Court may direct the sale to be held at the nearest place of public resort, if it is of opinion that the produce is thereby likely to sell to greater advantage.

against each other must be expressed only after the purchase.

The act to be done under para 2 of Section 291 is only a ministerial and not a judicial one.

(2) The case of a Vakil is no real exception to the general law of principal and agent.

The question in each case is what is the extent of the agent's implied authority.

Though a Vakil is engaged to conduct or defend a suit for his client along certain lines indicated in the pleadings and has no apparent authority to give up any part of his client's case or to make any admission inconsistent with that case, in the case of the purchase of property, there does not seem any valid reason for distinguishing a Vakil from any other agent authorised to purchase property for his client. There is no reason why the principle underlying Section 237 of the Indian Contract Act should not be applied to the case of a Vakil.

the sale shall be postponed accordingly and shall be then completed, whatever price may be offered for the produce.

Special provisions relating to growing crops.

Under Sub-Rule (2), on the analogy of Section 131 of the same enactment, a discretion is allowed to postpone the sale of agricultural produce where such a course is necessary or desirable to prevent the property from being purchased at an inadequate figure.— India Gazette dated 20-3-1908, Pt. V.

Sale by public auction.

(2) On payment of the purchase-money, the officer or other person holding the sale shall grant a receipt for the same, and the sale shall become absolute.

(3) Where the movable property to be sold is a share in goods belonging to the judgment-debtor and a co-owner, and two or more persons, of whom one is such co-owner, respectively bid the same sum for such property or for any lot, the bidding shall be deemed to be the bidding of the co-owner.

An order refusing to postpone a sale under Section 302 of the Civil Procedure Code is not appealable.

M., though during office hours, the money was not accepted. The money was eventually paid three days after the fifteenth day from the date of auction. The judgment-debtor having applied to set aside the sale, on the ground of its being void :

Held.—There having been a valid tender of the amount due within fifteen days from the date of sale, to the Treasury Officer, who wrongly refused to accept the amount, the omission to pay within 15 days was no fault of the auction purchaser. The sale was valid.— 4 T. L. J., 261.

I. Under Section 305 of Regulation II of 1065 the deposit shall be forfeited to Government. The words "may, if the Court thinks fit,"—have been substituted for the word "shall" which occurred just before the words "be forfeited."

II. The change made in the British Indian Rule, which is reproduced here, was thus explained by the Indian Special Committee:—"The Committee have altered this Rule in order to prevent its being obligatory on the Court to forfeit the deposit in every case. The Rule as it stands at present has caused hardship in certain circumstances, vide the case of Sambasiva Ayyar V. Vydinada Sami (I. L. R., 25 Mad., 535)."

Case Law.

1. When public servants (whether they belong to the execution or judicial branches of the administration) act in good faith on behalf, and in the interest, of Government in the discharge of their duties, the Sirkar is bound to defend them, especially in a case like this where they have taken the advantage resulting from the official act of their servants.

The duties of a Civil Court executing a decree are ministerial. Hence, the order of forfeiture passed under Section 238 of the old Civil Procedure Code, is especially so, as the Court, on plaintiff's default to pay in the remainder of the purchase money, has no option but to carry, on its own motion, the deposit to the credit of Government. No appeal is allowed against this order; and there is nothing in the Code or n any other Regulation barring the ordinary right of action in such cases, the rule that bars suits brought to question judicial acts or proceedings, not clearly applying to orders under Section 238 of the old Civil Procedure Code (Regulation II of 1037).

Where the law appoints a time for any act being done, it is not in the power of the Courts, much less in the power of clerks, to postpone such time and make fresh appointments so as to bind the parties.

The absence of proper arrangements for payments into Court of sums due by parties during the absence of the presiding Judges cannot prejudice the parties nor work a forfeiture of their rights. It was the omission of the Court to make proper arrangements for payments being received that prevented the plaintiff in the case, from making the payment on the due date.—6 T. L. R., 32.

The decree-holder, auction-purchaser, put in a petition 25 days after the auction-sale stating that the decree had been satisfied, and prayed that the sale be cancelled and the amount deposited by him be refunded to him. The application was presented to the latter Court the next day and the balance 75 per cent. of the purchase money was duly deposited. The District Munsiff held that the purchaser forfeited the 25 per cent. of the purchase money for failure to deposit the balance on the due date. On revision:

Held.—Notwithstanding the fact of the territorial readjustment, the Tiruvella Court continued to be a proper Court, though perhaps not the only proper Court in which the application relating to the execution of the decree in question was to be presented, at least till the execution proceedings were formally transferred to the Changanacherry Munsiff's Court. The plaintiff's failure, therefore, to deposit the balance of the purchase money on the due date not having been due to any fault or negligence on his part, the order of the lower Court declaring that the petitioner forfeited the amount of 25 per cent. of the purchase money deposited by him on the date of the Court sale could not be upheld.

4. Section 305 is imperative in its terms, and no Court has jurisdiction to deprive the Government of the benefit which it gets under the Section. The fact that, under Order XXI, Rule 83, a discretion is given to the Court in the matter, cannot affect the interpretation of Section 305.—

= Or. XXI, r. 89]

I. 1. The Section in Regulation II of 1065 corresponding to Rule 86 is 307-A. The Section was taken from the British Indian Amending Act V of 1894 and was added by the amending Regulation II of 1070. The reason for this addition was thus explained in the Statement of Objects and Reasons :—

"It supplies a want now sorely felt by the Courts in connection with the sale of immovable property. As the law now stands, the Courts have no power to refuse the confirmation of a sale made in execution of a decree, even on payment by the judgment-debtor of the whole amount due, together with interest. This Section gives the requisite power to cancel Court-sales on payment to the decree-holder, of the amount due, and to the purchaser, of 5 per cent. of the purchase money as compensation for the loss he sustained by the purchase."

The Section thus added ran as follows :—

"307-A. Application of judgment-debtor to set aside sale on deposit of debt.—Any person whose immovable property has been sold under this Chapter may, at any time within thirty days from the date of sale, apply to have the sale set aside on his depositing in Court—

(a) for payment to the purchaser, a sum equal to five per centum of the purchase-money, and

(b) for payment to the decree-holder, the amount specified in the proclamation of sale as that for the recovery of which the sale was ordered, less any amount which may, since the date of such proclamation of sale, have been received by the decree-holder.

If such deposit is made within the thirty days, the Court shall pass an order setting aside the sale :

Provided that if a person applies under the next following Section to set aside the sale of his immovable property, he shall not be entitled to make an application under this Section.

Nothing in this Section shall be construed to relieve the judgment-debtor from any liability he may be under, in respect of costs and interest not covered by the proclamation of sale."

2. (1). "The object of the Section was to extend the period during which the judgment-debtor may discharge his liability by thirty days beyond the date of sale and is only a modification of the way in which the decree-holder may obtain the fruits of his decree. The privilege, whether regarded as a substantive right or a matter of procedure, is one exclusively belonging to any person whose immovable property has been sold."— 13 T. L. R., 126.

(2) The Legislature evidently intended to give the judgment-debtor a last opportunity to ward off the sale of his property by some arrangement, including a private sale if possible, and such arrangements are usually more beneficial to the owner than a Court-sale.

II. In the original Bill, Rule 89 of the British Indian Code was adopted in toto. That Rule does not contain the two Provisos now found in Sub-Rule (1), and also the words "or after" now occurring before the words "such sale" in the same Sub-Rule. The Notes on Clauses said:—

"There is a change in the language proposed to be made in lieu of Section 307-A of the existing Code. Judicial decisions have laid down that no alienee subsequent to the sale should be permitted to avail himself of the grace allowed by this Section. The judgment-debtor himself, or any one whose interest has been jeopardized by the sale, may be allowed to come within the period of grace and avoid the sale. There is no reason, however, why the judgment-debtor should be given the right to choose a purchaser in defeasance of the rights of the auction purchaser. There being some divergence of views on this matter, however, the proposal is to accept the view restricting the right to the judgment-debtor to reap some benefit for himself only."

III. The words "or after" in Sub-Rule (1) were inserted by the Select Committee "to give express effect to the interpretation of the present Section 307-A by the High Court."

IV. For the omission of the words "at any time within thirty days from the date of sale" which occurred between the words "may" and "apply" in the first Para of the old Section [Sub-Rule (1)], see Article 151 of the Limitation Regulation which provides the same period of limitation.

V. The Select Committee also added the first Proviso to Sub-Rule (1). This corresponds to the second Para of Section 311 which was as follows :—

"No sale of immovable property shall be confirmed until the final result of any appeal preferred against the decree in execution of which the sale was made is known. If such decree be finally reversed on appeal, the sale shall be set aside."

See Note under Rule 89, Infra.

VI. The second Proviso to Sub-Rule (1) was added by the Council on the motion of a Non-official Member who said :—

"The Section is all right if the properties or several items of properties are sold in one lot. But if properties or several items of properties are sold separately, that is, in two or more lots, the Section does not provide for setting aside the sale of one or more of such items.

The object of my amendment is to allow such relief as well. Suppose a Jenmi sues for the recovery of arrears of rent etc., due on a Kanom document which covers several items of property some of which may be outstanding on mortgage, while others have been purchased by others on the date of the suit; the Jenmi while he sues makes such mortgagees and also subsequent purchasers as parties and obtains a decree. The properties are sold separately, i. e., in two or more lots. If any of the defendants, say, the mortgagee or the subsequent purchaser or the decree debtor himself wants to set aside the sale in respect of one or more items of properties sold, he is not allowed under this Rule to do so. On the other hand, considerable difficulty is experienced by the decree-debtors and other persons to whom the property belongs on account of this Rule. Sir, I am aware of the great difficulties experienced by people. Suppose 10 items of property are sold for the decree debt due by a particular defendant. He is unable to raise the whole of the money mentioned in the proclamation and deposit it in Court so that he may be in a position to set aside the sale of one lot of the property sold. Of course, he may lose the other lots of property. At least one lot he may be able to save which he will not be able to do now. Apart from these difficulties, the High Court is inclined to support my position. There is a ruling in 10 T. L. R., page 31, which allows the relief that I plead for in my amendment. That was a case to set aside the sale of one of the several properties that were sold in auction. The learned Judge in reversing the order on appeal said that where properties had been sold in separate lots, an application to set aside the sale on depositing the amount of purchase money of such lots would lie. That was a decision of the District Judge which was confirmed by the High Court who observed that, in consideration of the facts of the case, they were inclined to the conclusion of the District Judge rather than to that of the Munsiff. This ruling has also been followed in 12 T. L. J. page 34 and 13 T. L. J. page 307. In 13 T. L. J., what is said is this. 'In Madhavan Pillai v. Sastavu (10 T. L. J. 31) this Court in a case on all fours with the present held that when, in execution of one decree, property was sold in two or more lots, judgment-debtor or other person whose property had been sold could apply to have the sale set aside as regards one or more lots without having the sale set aside as a whole.'"

The Official Member in charge considered the provision unnecessary, "because, the High Court has been consistently ruling all along that, in the case of a decree-holder, it is open to the judgm ent-debtor to deposit the amount due after giving credit to the amount that has been realised by the auction sale. When a decree-holder purchases property in auction, they say it must be taken that, as soon as each auction sale is knocked down, the decree debt is reduced to that extent; on the basis of that principle they say that it is open to the judgment-debtor to deposit the amount of any item of property that he may seek to set aside, i. e., if five items of properties are sold, the amount of the first three items will be reduced or the amount for the last two items may be reduced and the amount that he purchased for should be taken to have been paid towards the decree amount and therefore the decree amount is reduced to that extent. It may or may not be that the amount is realised only the last day. That being the case, it may not be possible to apply it.

We all know that, when an auction comes to an end, a Judge insists that the whole of the amount should be realised and so it is sold at a higher amount. So that, it is left to the judgment debtor to pick and choose what particular item he should choose and what particular amount he should reject. So in the case of the decree-holder, the rulings of the High Court have been consistent. The existing section has been consistent and there has been no conflict of rulings. If Rule 86 (1), Order 21, is to be amended, it can be done at any time as the Vakils practising in the High Court are to be members of the Rule Committee and it is open to them to revise it in any way they like. Therefore, instead of putting in a Rule which is unworkable, and which is not necessary, I think it may be left to the Rule Committee to amend it if necessary."

After some discussion, the Proviso, which was amended by the addition of some words, was adopted by the House.—

Case Law.

1. In computing the period of limitation prescribed under Section 307-A of the Civil Procedure Code, for an application to set aside a sale, the period during which, the Court was closed must be excluded.—

14 T. L. R. App., 56.

2. When the owner of immovable property applies under Section 307-A to have a sale of the property set aside he is under a liability to deposit a sum equal to five per cent. on the purchase money for payment to the purchaser, even when the land has been purchased by the decree-holder.

The judgment-debtor's right to get the sale cancelled on his depositing the five per cent. is not affected by a mistake committed by the Court itself (the mistake in the case being the non-receipt of the five per cent. on the ground that it was not usual in the case of a purchase by the decree-holder himself).— 15 T. L. R. App., 52.

3. An appeal lay under Clause 16, Section 557, C. P. C., [Section 82 and Or. XLII, r. 1] from orders passed under Section 307-A refusing to set aside the sale of immovable property in execution.

The intention of the Legislature was to confer the right of appeal from orders refusing to set aside or confirming a sale, is clear from the terms of Section 557, and there is no reason why this intention should not be carried out by the Courts. The effect of the amended Section 307-A is to create a fresh ground for setting aside a court sale, at the instance of the party whose immovable property is sold in execution under orders of Court and orders passed under Section 307-A are as much appealable as orders passed under other Sections for setting aside or refusing to set aside a sale. It is the substance rather than the letter of the law which has to be looked to in such cases, and when the decision or order of a Court of a particular import is made expressly appealable, the grounds on which the decision or order is made do not affect the right of appeal.

What the Appellate Courts have to see is whether a decision on a particular subject-matter is made appealable by law, and if so, the Court is bound to entertain the appeal irrespective of the ground on which the order is purported to be made.— 16 T. L. R. App., 1.

4. An application by a purchaser from a judgment-debtor prior to attachment for setting aside a court sale on the terms of his paying the judgment-debt under protest and not unconditionally is not an application under Section 307-A. A deposit to be effectual under the Section must be made in such a manner as to enable the decree-holder to unconditionally apply the deposit in satisfaction of the decree-debt. The fact that the purchaser happened to be the decree-holder does not deprive the latter of his full rights as purchaser.— 16 T. L. R. App. 21.

5. The words "whose property is sold" in Section 307-A do not apply to a mortgagee of the property.

Where a District Judge granted the application of a mortgagee under the said Section for permission to deposit the purchase money for payment to the purchaser:

Held.—The Judge was wrong in granting the prayer.— 17 T. L. R. App., 3.

6. Section 307-A of the Civil Procedure Code refers only to applications made by the judgment-debtors and others who can be said to have ownership of the property sold and does not apply to a mere attaching creditor who has no such ownership.— 18 T. L. R., 126.

7. After the Court-auction and before the confirmation of the sale of an immovable property, the judgment-debtor conveyed it by private sale to a third party who made the deposit in Court under Section 307-A as the agent of the judgment-debtor. The purchaser contended that the sale should not be cancelled, but the District Judge disallowed the contention.

Held.—The District Judge was right, as the deposit was such as to entitle the judgment-debtor to make an application under Section 307-A.— 19 T. L. R., 118.

8. A decree-debtor first applied to set aside an attachment under Section 308 on the ground of irregularity, etc. When the application was pending, he put in another application for setting aside the sale under Section 307-A and deposited the decree amount. He also subsequently withdrew his first application under Section 308. On the contention of the decree-holder that the proviso to Section 307-A precludes the decree-debtor from making the second application, as he had already applied under Section 308:

Held.—The word "applies" in the proviso means not merely presenting an application but also the prosecution of it and the withdrawal of the first application before the disposal of the second removed the bar under the proviso.— 20 T. L. R., 186.

9. An act of limitation being restrictive of the ordinary right to take legal proceedings must, when the language is ambiguous, be construed strictly, i. e., in favour of the right to proceed.

On the 18th Edavom 1079, a property was sold in execution of a decree and on the 19th Mithunam 1079 the defendant applied under Section 307-A, Civil Procedure Code, to have the sale set aside. Calculating the date of sale also, the Munsiff held the application as time-barred and dismissed it. The District Judge reversed the Munsiff's order.

Held (confirming the District Judge's order).—The date of sale should be excluded, and in legal phraseology exclusion and not inclusion seems to be the connotation of the word "from."— 21 T. L. R., 196.

10. A hypothecated his property to B in 1074 and sold it to C in 1075. In 1081, B obtained a decree against A and sold and purchased the property in execution. Before the confirmation of sale, C deposited the decree amount in Court under Section 307-A and put in a petition not to allow the decree-holder to draw the money as he intended filing a fresh suit. This petition was rejected by the lower Court.

Held.—No appeal lay against such order, as the appellants being vendees, prior to decree and not after it, have no locus standi, under Section 307-A, for they are not entitled to come in under Section 238 [new Section 40] read with Section 307-A.

[Any person whose interest in immovable property is bound by the sale may apply under Section 307-A, though he be no party to the suit or to the decree under which the sale took place. The Section explicitly speaks of "any person whose immovable property has been sold under this Chapter", i. e., Chapter XIX relating to the execution of decrees.

Unquestionably, the judgment-debtor may apply, so also any person who has purchased his right, title and interest in the property after decree, because in spite of such purchase the vendee will be bound by the decree in execution, and to the extent of the interest so purchased, he will stand in the shoes of the judgment-debtor].—

11. The petitioner's application praying for issue of Chellan to deposit the purchase-money was sufficient to enable the Court to pass an order under Section 307-A for setting aside the sale, if the deposit had been made within 30 days from the date of the auction sale.

" The essential upon which the action of the Court is to depend is the deposit within thirty days and not the fact of the application being made within that period." (7 B. L. R., 263). This construction of the language of the Section is no doubt rather strained; but having regard to the design of the Legislature in enacting Section 307-A, viz., the relief of judgment-debtor and persons claiming under them on satisfaction of the decree-debt even after execution has proceeded up to sale of property, the most liberal construction of the provision should be adopted.

The fact of there having been no formal application made within 30 days for the cancellation of the sale is not a fatal defect disentitling the appellant to the relief provided by the Section.— 24 T. L. R., 100.

Com.—13 T. L. J., 273.

12. The words "a person whose immovable property has been sold" in Section 307-A, of the Code of Civil Procedure includes also a mortgagee of immovable property. This interpretation is the only correct interpretation in accordance with the spirit and policy of the law enacted in the Section. To interpret the word "person" as meaning only the judgment-debtor would be unduly narrowing the scope of the Section and violating all correct canons of interpretation (F. B.).

Held also (by a Division Bench—Ramachandra Rao and Sankara Menon, JJ.).—The words "whose immovable property has been sold" should be so construed as to include cases where a party acquires an interest in the property after the auction sale and before the expiration of the thirty days.

There is nothing to prevent the judgment-debtor from creating an interest in the property in another till the sale is confirmed. Until confirmation, it is open to the judgment-debtor to transfer his interest so as to entitle the party to whom the interest is transferred to apply under the Section.—

13. In a suit upon a hypothecation bond executed by defendants 2 to 4 in favour of the 1st defendant, the hypotheca was sold in Court auction. At the time of the auction, the property fell to the share of the plaintiff who deposited the decree amount under Section 307-A.

Held.—The payment by the plaintiff was not a voluntary payment and the plaintiff is entitled to recover the amount from the defendants.— 2 S. D., 218.

Overruled.—19 T. L. J., 285.

14. In all cases, the purchaser at Court sale is entitled to notice when applications are presented for setting aside the sale, as he is always highly interested in opposing the application.— 2 S. D., 240.

15. The deposit of the sale proceeds in Court does not constitute "receipt" by the decree-holder within the meaning of the words "less any amount which may, since the date of such proclamation of sale, have been received by the decree-holder" in Clause (b), Section 307-A. The receipt therein contemplated is actual receipt.—

16. Where a person put in a petition for cancelling a Court-sale and the major portion of the petition related to reliefs contemplated under Sections 308 and 310, [= Or. XXI, rr. 87 & 88], but towards the end thereof it was stated that the petitioner was willing to make the deposit as provided for under Section 307-A and to get the sale cancelled:

Held.—The petitioner having once elected to pursue the remedies provided under Sections 308 and 310 could not be allowed to fall back upon Section 307-A. There was also the fact that the offer to deposit the sale amount, was, under no circumstances, unconditional.— 29 T. L. R., 14

Fol.—19 T. L. J., 360.

17. In execution of a decree certain immovable properties of the judgment-debtor were sold in auction and purchased by the petitioner who at once deposited 25 per cent. of the purchase money. Before the expiry of 15 days from the date of sale, the judgment-debtor deposited the decree-amount and 5 per cent. of the purchase money under Section 307-A, and the sale was, therefore, set aside. The purchaser in Court auction then put in a petition for refund of the money deposited by him and for payment to him of 5 per cent. of the purchase money paid into Court by the judgment-debtor. The District Judge rejected the purchaser's claim for refund on the ground that because he did not deposit the balance of the purchase money before the expiry of 15 days from the date of sale, the 25 per cent. that he had deposited was forfeited to Government under Section 305. The prayer for the payment of the 5 per cent. was also disallowed.

Held.—The omission on the part of the purchaser to deposit the balance of the purchase money before the expiry of the prescribed period did not entail forfeiture of his right to refund of the sum deposited by him. As Section 307-A rendered it obligatory on the Court to set aside the sale on the deposit of the judgment-debt and the five per cent. of the purchase-money, there was absolutely no use in the auction-purchaser depositing the balance of the purchase-money before the expiry of 15 days from date of sale.

When the contest in regard to the 5 per cent. of the purchase-money was between the purchaser and judgment-debtor, the equities were in favour of the purchaser as that amount was expressly stated to be "for payment to the purchaser" under Section 307-A of the Code and meant as compensation to him for being deprived of the property purchased by him in Court auction.— 30 T. L. R., 192 (=4 T. L. J., 293).

Dist.—32 T. L. R., 129.

18. A judgment-debtor who deposits the decree amount and 5 per cent. of the purchase-money during the pendency of an appeal preferred by him against the order rejecting his petition and allowing execution to proceed must be deemed to have made the deposit under protest and to such a case Section 307-A, C. P. C., has no application.— 31 T. L. R., 83.

19. Where a judgment-debtor has not, within thirty days from the date of sale, deposited in Court the amounts specified in Section 307-A, but has deposited within the prescribed period a sum calculated by some officer of the Court as the sum to be deposited in respect of such amounts, which was less than the amount that should have been deposited and there is nothing to show there was any mistake of the Court by which the judgment-debtor was induced to deposit an insufficient amount :

Held.—The sale ought not to be set aside.

The mistake in calculation was one committed by the execution clerk and not the mistake of the Court. It is no part of the duties of the execution clerk, either under the Code or under the Circulars of the High Court, to make a calculation of the amount to be deposited under Section 307-A. It was irregular on his part to have made any calculation at all, and if he makes a wrong calculation and the judgment-debtor chooses to rely and act upon it, the latter does so at his peril.— 35 T. L. R., 158.

20. The 1st defendant and one D hypothecated Whiteacre and Blackacre to X ; and afterwards, D alone without mentioning the first charge hypothecated Whiteacre to Y. X then obtained a decree on his bond against the 1st defendant and D and the hypotheca. To this, Y was not a party. Y, then, obtained a decree on his bond against Whitheacre and in execution purchased it himself without mentioning the first charge. To this X was not a party. While X sought to sell Whiteacre and Blackacre in execution of his decree, Y applied for Whiteacre being excluded from the sale, inasmuch as he had in execution of his decree become its purchaser. The application was rejected ; and both the properties were sold in execution of X's decree. Before the confirmation of the sale, the plaintiff (Y's son) deposited the decree amount and had the sale set aside. The suit was for recovering the amount from the 1st defendant personally and from Blackacre and the assets of the deceased D. The primary Court dismissed the suit, holding that Section 69 of the Contract Act governed the case :

Held (on special appeal).—(1) The deposit (and the consequent cancellation of the sale) restored Blackacre to the original owners, namely, the 1st defendant and D and rendered the right of Y over Whiteacre indefeasible, and consequently the right of Y after making the deposit was only to claim contribution from Blackacre which his deposit had saved for the original owners, according to the respective value of the two estates.

(2) Inasmuch as the judgment debtor's personal liability under the decree obtained by X had been wiped out by the Court sale, it could not be said that Y paid the money which 1st defendant and D were bound by law to pay; and hence the principle of Section 69 of the Contract Act could not apply.

(3) On the principle of Section 70 of the Contract Act, the 1st defendant and D would only be bound to make compensation to the extent to which the deposit had benefited them, i. e., in so far as Blackacre had been restored to them.

(4) In any view, the plaintiff was only entitled to claim a share of the money deposited by him in Court.— 36 T. L. R., 16.

21. (1) Provided the strict terms of Section 307-A are complied with, it is not necessary for one who is interested in setting aside the sale of one or more of several lots sold under one proclamation, to ask to have the whole sale set aside.

(2) Amounts which the decree-holder is in a position to set off immediately against the decree amount should be treated as money received by him under the terms of Section 307-A.— 10 T. L. J., 31.

22. A person, in whose favour a sale deed has been executed but not registered before a Court sale of the property covered by such deed of sale, is one whose immovable property has been sold under Section 307-A, if the deed is duly registered subsequent to the Court sale. The operation of a sale deed is from the date of its execution. Even before registration, the purchaser has an equitable interest in the property as would give him a right to save it under Section 307-A.— 10 T. L. J., 133.

23. Deposit, which was conditional when originally made cannot, by the subsequent withdrawal of the condition, become valid as from the date the money was originally paid into Court. The subsequent withdrawal of the condition makes the deposit available to the purchaser and decree-holder only from the date of such withdrawal and the deposit becomes, in this respect, a deposit in conformity with the Section only from such date. Such date alone can be regarded as the date of a valid deposit under the Section.

[A deposit under Section 307-A, in order that it may be a valid deposit, must be unconditional, because the deposit is to be made for payment to the purchaser and the decree-holder. When, therefore, a deposit is made with a condition that the amount shall not be drawn out at once, but shall be retained in Court until a certain event happens, it is not a good deposit under the Section].— 11 T. L. J., 136.

24. On the 30th Kanni 1096, items 1, 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7 in the proclamation schedule were sold in execution of a decree against the counter-petitioner. Items 3, 5, 6 and 7 were purchased by the petitioner and item 4 by the decree-holder who had obtained permission to have the purchase-money for that item set off pro tanto against the judgment-debt due to him. There still remained a small balance of the judgment-debt due to him to be realised and therefore item 1 was next auctioned and the petitioner purchased that also for 7000 Fanams. On the 23rd Thulam 1096, (before the sales had been confirmed), the counter-petitioner applied for the cancellation of the sale of item No. 1 on depositing the balance of the judgment-debt, after deducting therefrom the amount realised by the sale of items 3 to 7, together with the usual commission on the purchase-money paid for item No. 1. This application of the judgment-debtor was resisted by the auction purchaser on the ground that the judgment-debtor would be entitled to the relief claimed only if he deposits the entire judgment-debt or at least that amount less the sum for which the decree-holder himself purchased item No. 4 together with the usual commission on the whole of the purchase-money advanced by the auction-purchaser.

Held.—The purchase-money realised by the sale of item No. 4 may be treated as having been received by the decree-holder, but the amount realised by the sale of the other items stands on a different footing. This money did not become money at the disposal of the decree-holder till the sales were confirmed, and hence cannot be treated as having been received by the decree-holder under Section 307-A.

Therefore the decree-debtor was, in order to obtain the benefit of the Section, bound to deposit the entire judgment-debt less the price paid by the decree-holder for item No. 4.— 12 T. L. J., 34.

(=13 T. L. J., 307).

25. When the sale of one or more of several items sold under one proclamation is sought to be set aside under Section 307-A, the amount that need be deposited under Clause (a) of that Section is only 5 per cent. of the purchase money for the items, the sale of which is sought to be set aside, and not 5 per cent. of the purchase money for all the items.— 38 T. L. R., 148
(= 13 T. L. J., 307).

26. In execution of a decree, properties movable and immovable of the judgment-debtor were sold in Court auction and purchased by the decree-holder. The judgment-debtor put in a petition praying to have the auction sale set aside on deposit of the decree amount and commission.

Held.—The petition is one under Section 307-A, and the auction sale of the immovable property could be set aside. But the sale in respect of the movable property could not be set aside, as it had become absolute under Section 294, C. P. C. [= Or. XXI, r. 74], as soon as the purchase money had been paid.— 38 T. L. R., 211

27. Where in execution of a decree, the decree-holder having brought certain property to sale and purchased it himself, certified subsequent satisfaction of his decree otherwise and applied that the sale be set aside:

Held.—Sale is cancelled on the ground that the satisfaction of the decree certified by the decree-holder resulted automatically in the annulment of the execution sale. A decree-holder by becoming an execution purchaser neither becomes the full owner of the property purchased nor ceases to be the decree-holder altogether. In spite of the Court sale, the judgment-debtor has sufficient interest in the property to apply under Section 307-A and Section 308 [=Or. XXI, r. 87], while the decree-holder-purchaser is not debarred from taking steps to set aside the sale under Section 310 [=Or. XXI, r. 88] or from certifying satisfaction of the decree at any time before the sale is made absolute.

The direction to the Court contained in Section 291 [=Or. XXI, r. 69] is not peremptory as regards the point of time when it should be carried out, inasmuch as it does not use the word 'forthwith' or 'immediately', and is dependant on the eventuality of the sale being confirmed and made absolute.
(=12 T. L. J., 162).

28. Three items of property belonging to defendants 1 and 2 were charged by the decree in the case. The 3rd defendant having obtained a mortgage of item 2 from the 2nd defendant, the 3rd defendant was made a party to the case. Subsequently, in execution of the decree, item No. 3 was sold in Court auction on 3—4—1095. The 3rd defendant deposited the decree amount into Court and applied under Section 307-A, to set aside the auction sale. The auction-purchaser objected on the ground that the 3rd defendant had no locus standi to make such application. The trial Court set aside the auction-sale, but the Appellate Court upheld the objection of the auction purchaser.

Held (in second appeal).—(1) The 3rd defendant cannot be said to be a "person whose immovable property has been sold" within the meaning of Section 307-A, as he had no interest whatever over item No. 3 which had been sold. The Section cannot be so interpreted as to allow any person who has no interest whatever in the properties sold, to apply under that Section.

(2) Even assuming that the 3rd defendant was acting as the agent of the 2nd defendant (as to which there was no evidence in the case), the application could not be regarded as having been made by the 3rd defendant in that capacity, as it was unaccompanied by any writing to show that he was a recognised agent as defined under Section 33 C. P. C. [= Or. III, r. 2] empowered to make an application under Section 32, C. P. C. [= Or. III, r. 1].

(3) The authority under Section 31, C. P. C. (=Or. I, r, 12], must be in writing signed by the party giving it and attested by 2 witnesses and effected before the act is done by the person authorised.—

29. In execution of the decree in O. S. No. 32 of 86, seven items of properties were sold in auction on 10-3-1097. Items 3, 4 and 5 were purchased by the assignee, decree-holder (who was the respondent in these three appeals), for Rs. 30,000 and the remaining four items for Rs. 51,200 by strangers, not parties to these proceedings. Subsequent to the auction sale, the judgment-debtor who is the appellant in A. S. No. 280 sold items 3 and 4 to one Gulam Hussain Jeevaji Sait (appellant in A. S. 238) and item 5 to one Kurien Mathew (appellant in A. S. 243) and on 10-4-97, these 3 appellants deposited in Court Rs. 30,000 the auction amount, Rs. 1,500 commission and Rs. 400 the balance of the decree amount as estimated by them and applied by separate petitions under Section 307-A to have the auction sale of items 3, 4 and 5 set aside.

The amount of Rs. 51,200 fetched by the auction sale of items 1, 2, 6 and 7 was also in Court on 10-4-97 and it was admitted that this amount had been received by the assignee, decree-holder, sometime after 10-4-97.

The question arose whether this amount of Rs. 51,200 came within the meaning of the expression "any amount which may since the date of such proclamation of sale have been received by the decree-holder" in Section 307-A, and as such, the appellants could claim the benefit of the Section and have the sale set aside.

Held.—The words "may have been received" in Section 307-A appear to imply that no impediment existed or could have been placed by any person or by the Court in the exercise of any discretion vested in its preventing the receipt of the money by the decree-holder, and if the money had not been actually received or given credit to by the decree-holder, it was due to the default or otherwise unjustifiable conduct on the part of the decree-holder himself.

This amount of Rs. 51,200 can in no proper sense be treated as money which may have been received by the decree-holder. The Court may not dispose of the application for withdrawal within the 30 days, or it may, in making the order within the 30 days, allow the decree-holder to draw the amount only on certain conditions to be obeyed by the decree-holder, in which cases, there cannot be a substantial compliance with Section 307-A.

The fact that, in this case, the appellants took the risk in taking credit for Rs. 51,200 as a pro tanto satisfaction of the decree and as events subsequently turned out, they acted rightly in taking the risk, the assignee, decree-holder, having subsequently withdrawn this amount, cannot affect the question.

The provisions of Section 307-A are no doubt primarily intended to give relief to persons whose immovable properties have been sold in court auctions and give them an opportunity to save their properties from passing into the hands of others.

The principle underlying Section 307-A is that, in order to enable the judgment-debtor to claim the indulgence available to him under Section 307-A, it is necessary that he must do or have done everything that is necessary to wash off or undo completely the injurious effect of the court sale that had already taken place in regard to his properties. In enacting the provisions of Section 307-A, the Legislature has held the scales even as between the judgment-debtor and the decree-holder, for, if the judgment-debtor wants to have his properties freed from the court sale, it stands to reason that he must put the decree-holder in a position to get the full amount due to him without subjecting him or appearing to subject him to any risk.

It has also to be noted that the auction sale does not become absolute until confirmed ; till then it is a provisional one and as such the decree-holder has no right to receive the auction sale amount until the sale has been confirmed.

If the auction-purchaser intimates in writing to the Court within 30 days from the date of the sale that he does not mean to apply to set aside the auction sale under Section 310 C. P. C. [ =Or. XXI, r. 88 ], and the judgment-debtor also states that he does not mean also to impeach the sale on any of the grounds open to him under the Civil Procedure Code within 30 days of the sale and when the decree-holder has been informed of these facts within the said period of 30 days, there would then be no legal impediment to the decree-holder drawing the deposit amount from Court and in such a case, a Court construing Section 307-A would be justified in holding that the deposit amount should be treated as an amount which may have been received by the decree-holder.— 13 T. L. J., 438.

Ref.—18 T. L. J., 1162.

30. Where the Appellate Court sets aside the original decree and passes a new decree in lieu thereof, an auction-purchase made by the decree-holder in execution of the original decree, which has been set aside, cannot stand.— 15 T. L. J., 272.

31. The whole decree-debt should be deposited in Court before an execution sale is sought to be set aside under Section 307-A. The sale of one of the items is not liable to be set aside on payment into Court of the price for which it was sold and five per centum of such amount.—16 T. L. J., 402.

32. A decree on a hypothecation bond was obtained by the respondent against the defendants in O. S. No. 376 of 1098. This decree was attached by one V. A. in execution of a Small Cause decree in S. C. S. No. 890 of 1097 against respondent. The attaching creditor brought the hypotheca to sale. The decree-holder in 376 of 1098 applied for setting aside the sale on his depositing the decretal amount under the Small Cause decree together with five per cent. commission on the purchase amount and costs incurred in connection with the same. On the question whether such application is competent ;

Held.—(1) Such an application is competent. The hypothecatee of the properties sold is 'a person whose immovable property' has been sold within the meaning of Order XXI, Rule 86. The fact that the hypothecation has merged in the decree and that the sale was held in enforcement of his rights cannot affect his rights so long as the hypothecation rights have not been extinguished.

(2) The amount specified in the proclamation required to be deposited under the Rule must be taken to be the amount which has to be realised by the sale of the particular properties.

87. (1) Where any immovable property has been sold in execution of a decree, the decree-holder, or any person entitled to share in a rateable distribution of assets, or whose interests are affected by the sale, may apply to the Court to set aside the sale on the ground of a material irregularity or fraud in publishing or conducting it :

Application to set aside sale on ground of irregularity or fraud.

Provided that no sale shall be set aside on the ground of irregularity or fraud unless upon the facts proved the Court is satisfied that the applicant has sustained substantial injury by reason of such irregularity or fraud.

(3) Where the whole of the amount that could be claimed by the attaching creditor has already been deposited, the balance of the amount being payable to the applicant himself, such deposit must be held to be a sufficient compliance with the requirements of the Rule.— 44 T. L. R., 367 ( = 18 T. L. J., 1162).

33. A person who, not being himself a party to the decree, protests against the court-sale of property in execution of the decree against the judgment-debtor and gets the sale set aside under Rule 86 of Order XXI, by an application made therefor, free of any protest accompanied by payment of the decretal amount and five per cent. cannot be allowed to claim refund of the amount as having been involuntarily paid.

The provisions of Sub-rule (2) contain in themselves clear indication of the intention of the Legislature that the deposit under the Rule must be unconditional and voluntary, in acquiescence of the liability of the property sold for the decree amount. A person whose property is wrongly sold for a decree against another has other remedies open to him and there is no obligation on him to make any application under Rule 86. But if, with a view to avoid the trouble and inconvenience of a litigation against the purchaser, he elects to make the application under the Rule and deposit the money, he cannot be allowed to go back upon his own act, after securing the benefit of having the sale set aside by reason of the deposit of the money (F. B.).— 19 T. L. J., 285.

34. Where a sale is set aside by a deposit made under Section 307-A, the deposit should be deemed an unconditional one, as otherwise the Court has no jurisdiction to set aside the sale.

Having made an unconditional deposit a judgment-debtor is estopped from contending that he paid an excess amount and he is entitled to be recouped in respect of the same. There is no provision in the Civil Procedure Code for the restitution of any amount deposited under Section 307-A.— 19 T. L. J., 360.

I. The corresponding Section of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows :—

"308. Application to set aside sale of land on ground of irregularity.—The decree-holder, or any person whose immovable property has been sold under this Chapter, may apply to the Court to set aside the sale on the ground of a material irregularity in publishing or conducting it ; but no sale shall be set aside on the ground of irregularity unless the applicant proves to the satisfaction of the Court that he has sustained substantial injury by reason of such irregularity."

II. "The language now proposed to be employed is different from the language of Section 308 C. P. C., but does not effect any radical change. It is extended by enactment, in lieu of judicial decisions now, to include every person who reaps the advantage, in whole or in part, flowing from the sale of property. It is also made clear that persons having any interest in the property and which interest is prejudicially affected by the sale, may apply under the Section, thus avoiding the doubt entertained as to the meaning of the clause 'whose immovable property has been sold.' "—

III. In the Statement of Objects and Reasons for the 1901 amending Bill, it was stated :—"It is proposed to enact the principle of a series of rulings to the effect that a person entitled to share in a rateable distribution of assets is authorised to apply under this provision. Here again, much discussion has arisen on the precise meaning of the expression "any person whose immovable property has been sold," and it is proposed to make it clear that all persons who would, to the extent of their interests, be entitled to sue for cancellation of the sale and recovery of the property, are included."— India Gazette dated 21-12-1901, Pt. V.

IV. In regard to the Proviso, the Indian Special Committee said :—"The Committee have altered the language of the Proviso in order to meet the doubts which have been raised as to the evidence upon which the Court can act. [ Tasadduk Rasul Khan v. Ahmad Husain (I. L. R., 21 Cal., 66) ]."

V. In regard to the words "or fraud" which occur in the new Rule in two places, the Indian Select Committee of 1908 observe :—"The words "or fraud" have been added after the word "irregularity." We think that the existing law as contained in Section 311 of the present Code is defective, the omission in the Section to refer to fraud as a ground for setting aside a sale having led some Courts to hold that an order on an application setting up fraud as a ground for relief is, unlike an order made on an application under Section 311, a decree and open to second appeal. This result, which often involves a considerable prolongation of these proceedings, is in our opinion undesirable. We think that applications for the setting aside of sales should, so far as the procedure applicable to them is concerned, stand on the same footing whether they are based on the ground of irregularity or on the ground of fraud."— India Gazette dated 15-2-1908, Pt. V.

Case Law.

1. If the judgment-creditor buys the property sold in execution of his own decree, without the permission of the Court, there will be material irregularity in the conduct of the sale.— 17 T. L. R. App., 6.

2. In execution of a money decree against X, P the decree-holder attached the eastern half of a purayidom, but for some unaccountable reason, got the whole purayidom including the western half and a chira proclaimed for sale, himself became the purchaser in 1062 and obtained delivery in 1063. Y another creditor of X obtained a decree in 1073 more than 12 years after P's decree and in execution thereof attached the plaint properties. The suit brought by P to set aside the attachment was at first dismissed by the Munsiff on the ground of limitation bar and subsequently, after remand, on the ground that a sale without a prior attachment was void.

Held.—A sale without attachment though irregular is not invalid without proof of substantial injury under Section 308, Civil Procedure Code. The limitation applicable in the case is one year, under Article 8 of the Limitation Schedule (old).

[Omission to attach amounted to no more than a material irregularity which was not sufficient to vitiate the sale unless substantial injury resulted from it. The publication of the attachment is a step leading up to the publication of the sale, the actual proclamation of sale being a notice to the public that the sale is to take place on a particular date. (21 All., 311).

An omission to adopt any one of the various steps to be taken in execution is only a material irregularity and a sale so made is not invalid unless substantial injury to the judgment-debtor is affirmatively shown (21 Cal., 66).

An attachment is a measure resorted to for the protection of the decree-holder and purchaser against intermediate alienations, and after a Court-sale had been confirmed and a sale certificate granted to the purchaser, the sale is not to be considered a nullity merely by reason of the absence of attachment. (18 Cal., 188).

A sale in execution without due notice to the legal representative of the deceased mortgagor is not a nullity, though the irregularity is material. Strangers to a suit are justified in believing that the Court had done that which by the direction of the Code it ought to do. (25 Bom., 387).]

(=7 T. L. J., 867).

3. Where an auction sale is sought to be set aside on the ground of material irregularity, the burden of proving such irregularity lies on the party pleading irregularity. Mere irregularity with no proof of material injury is not sufficient to vitiate sale.

The Court ought to have presumed that the proclamation copies were affixed to the Court-house, Taluk Cutcherry and to the land, instead of throwing the onus of proof on the purchaser. There was no evidence in the case connecting the alleged irregularities with the substantial injury.—

1 S. D., 356.

4. All applications under Section 308 are also applications under Section 238 [new Section 40]; and similarly all applications in execution where fraud is alleged come under Section 238.

A Court sale impeached on the ground of fraud cannot be set aside in the absence of proof that the auction-purchaser was a party to the fraud either primarily or as having purchased with notice of the decree-holder's fraud.— 1 T. L. J., 86.

Fol.—10 T. L. J., 292.
18 T. L. J., 952.

5. A material irregularity in the sale proclamation regarding the number of trees in the property is not necessarily a fraud on the judgment-debtor, unless it can be shown that the auction-purchaser or decree-holder was instrumental in making the misrepresentation.

Material irregularity and fraud are not synonymous terms. The question of fraud is a mixed question of law and fact; the facts being found, the inference whether they constitute fraud is a question of law.

Article 152 of the Limitation Regulation (old) will apply to an application for setting aside a Court sale, only if fraud is established. Applications to set aside a Court sale on the ground of material irregularity which falls short of fraud are covered by Section 308, C. P. C., and the period of limitation for such applications is that prescribed by Article 138.— 3 T. L. J., 74.

6. A judgment-debtor seeking to set aside an execution sale of immovables on the ground of under-valuation in the sale proclamation is estopped from setting up that plea, if he allows the sale to be completed, having been aware throughout of the alleged irregularity.

The properties probably fetched less than they were actually worth Their valuation might have erred on the side of exaggeration; but the appellant was estopped by his conduct in setting up the plea of understatement in the sale proclamation. He obtained three successive adjournments to pay up the decretal amount. He failed to do so, and not once during this time did he impeach the value stated in the proclamation. On the other hand, it was shown that he consented to have the property sold on the original proclamation, if he defaulted to pay off the decree-debt,—

(= 19 T. L. J., 491).

7. In execution of a decree on a hypothecation bond executed by one C. V. deceased, obtained against her sons, as her representatives, immovable properties were sold in Court auction. V. P. the daughter of C. V., alleging that she was the exclusive owner of the properties sold, having inherited it on the death of her mother to the exclusion of her brother, and also alleging that the sale was brought about as the result of collusion between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor, applied to set aside the sale under Section 308, C. P. C., on the ground that there was material irregularity in publishing and conducting the sale. The application was opposed on the ground, inter alia, that the applicant could not have recourse to Section 308, C. P. C.

Held.—The application was not sustainable as the applicant on her own showing, could successfully maintain a separate suit to protect her rights.— 5 T. L. J., 44.

8. The mortgagee of certain properties sold in Court auction applied to set aside the sale on the ground that he had a mortgage right which was not shown in the sale proclamation. The Court ordered that to the extent of the mortgage interest, the sale would not be confirmed. On appeal:

Held.—The order of the Court below was wrong. The applicant having obtained the mortgage before the properties were placed under attachment, he was not a person whose immovable properties had been sold and the application was not maintainable.

It is not every person having an interest in the properties sold in Court auction that has the right of applying under Section 308, C. P. C., to set aside the sale. It is only a person whose immovable property has been sold under Chapter XIX of the C. P. C. that has the right of applying under Section 308. One who claims, not through, but adversely to the judgment-debtor, does not come under Section 308. A person claiming by title paramount to the judgment-debtor is not within the meaning of the words "any person" in the Section, inasmuch as his title to the property is not affected by the sale, whether it were regular or irregular, and therefore cannot apply to the Court to set aside the sale.

The mortgagee of the property sold in execution who takes a mortgage prior to the attachment in execution does not come within the meaning of the words "person whose immovable property has been sold under this Chapter."—

(= 5 T. L. J., 55).

9. A decree made the interest of each of the defendants in the hypothecated property liable only for his share of the decree-debt. The Court, however, put up the interests of all the defendants solidly without any discrimination and without any severance, charging thereby the interests of defendants 1 and 2 with a great deal more than what under the terms of the decree they were bound to pay.

Held.—The procedure was illegal and obviously led to injustice inasmuch as it prevented defendants 1 and 2 from freeing their interests from liability to sale by payment of their share of the decree-amount. Further, after the sale, they could not get the sale set aside except by paying up the whole amount due under the decree.—

9 T. L. J., 267.

10. Where a material irregularity is proved to have occurred in the conduct of a Court sale, and it is shown that the price realised is grossly inadequate, it may be inferred that the low price was occasioned by the irregularity.

Misdescription as regards the boundaries, muri and survey number is material irregularity. The auction-price was also much below the real value.

"There must be evidence showing that substantial injury was a necessary result of the irregularity complained of. No doubt there is no direct evidence in the strict sense of the term that the inadequate price was caused by the irregularity, still there is evidence from which the inference necessarily arises that the irregularity was the cause of the injury." (24 Cal., 291).—

9 T. L. J., 308.

11. The decree provided that, for a certain amount, the properties of one of the judgment-debtors should be proceeded against, and for another amount another judgment-debtor and certain other properties should be liable. The sale in execution was conducted as if all the properties sold were jointly and severally liable for the whole decree amount.

Held.—Such a course is not only a most material irregularity in the conduct of the sale, but vitiates the sale altogether.

The word "conducting" appearing in Section 308 C. P. C. is wide enough to cover a case where a sale has taken place or has been conducted in opposition to the terms of the decree.

Even assuming that the petition objecting to the sale should have been filed under Section 238 [new Section 40], there is authority that an application made under Section 308 may be treated as one under Section 238.— 10 T. L. J., 292.

12. An application by the judgment-debtor to set aside the execution sale on the ground of the fraud of the decree-holder, auction-purchaser, comes within the scope of Section 238 C. P. C. [new Section 40].—

(=11 T. L. J., 438).

Ref.—18 T. L. J., 952.

13. Certain properties were proclaimed for sale in pursuance of a decree. The judgment-debtor applied for two months' time to pay up the decree amount and consented to have the properties sold without a fresh proclamation in the event of his not making the payment within that period. The application was granted and the sale was adjourned accordingly. On the adjourned date the judgment-debtor applied for further time. This application was refused, and the sale was held on the original application. The judgment-debtor thereupon applied to have the sale set aside on the ground of irregularities in the proclamation of sale. In neither of his petitions was any reference made to either misdescription of the property or under-statement of its value in the proclamation.

Held.—The sale could not be set aside. Granting that the alleged irregularities existed, the judgment-debtor, who should be presumed to have known them, ought to have taken objection to the sale on that ground before it was held. Not having done so, he should be held to have waived his objections.

"It would be very difficult indeed to conduct proceedings in execution of decrees by attachment and sale of property if the judgment-debtor could lie by and afterwards take advantage of any misdescription of the property attached and about to be sold, which he knew well, but of which the execution-creditor or decree-holder might be perfectly ignorant—that they should take no notice of that, allow the sale to proceed, and then come forward and say the whole proceedings were vitiated." Such belated objections cannot be allowed. (12 Mad. 19).— 13 T. L. J., 126.

( = 19 T. L. J., 491).

14. Per Sesha Aiyar, J.—In a case where a party, instead of applying under Section 238 of the C. P. C., [new Section 40], wrongly brought a suit, the plaint can be treated as an application under Section 238, when no question of limitation arises.

Understatement of value in a sale proclamation may afford a good ground for an application under Section 308.

Such irregularity, though it may not always amount to fraud, may do so on the facts and circumstances of a particular case.

Fraud must be reserved for that which is dishonest or morally wrong.

If the conduct of the decree-holder in connection with the sale can hardly be consistent with good faith and if the obvious effect of his act would be to mislead possible bidders and prevent them from offering a reasonable price, the under-statement of value amounts to fraud.

"Fraud, in the contemplation of a Civil Court of Justice, may be said to include properly all acts, omissions and concealments which involve a breach of legal or equitable duty, trust or confidence, justly reposed, and are injurious to another, or by which an undue or unconscientious advantage is taken of another."

Per Pulpu Pillai, J.—Where the plaint not only prayed for setting aside the auction-sale but also asked for other reliefs against defendants other than the auction-purchaser and the nature of the reliefs is undoubtedly such that they can be claimed only in a regular suit, it cannot be converted into an application under Section 238 C. P. C.

An under-statement of value by itself is not sufficient to justify an inference of fraud. If that were the law, few execution sales would be secure.

Erroneous statements in proclamation schedules are not incompatible with good faith on the part of the decree-holder and do not per se suggest or lead to the inference that he had committed a deliberate wrong to injure anybody.

Any person who is anxious or cares to bid at a Court-sale generally makes himself acquainted with the particulars, value and nature of the property before he does so and is not in the least influenced by the statements in proclamation schedules.

Per Chief Justice.—A mistake as to price in the proclamation of sale of the value of the properties brought to sale, is an irregularity and may amount to material irregularity in many cases ; but it does not necessarily follow that an auction-sale had, in pursuance of that proclamation, is vitiated by fraud.

To amount to fraud, there must be evidence to show that the under-statement of value prevented or scared away intending bidders.— 13 T. L. J., 469.

15. A misstatement of the approximate value of the properties to be sold in a sale proclamation is, no doubt, a material irregularity. But in order that that may be a ground for annulling the sale, it should be shown that an inadequate price was obtained by the under-valuation. Where the amount realised by the sale is adequate though the valuation is inadequate, there can be no substantial injury, and the sale cannot be set aside. It was not shown, in the case, that the price was inadequate.

The judgment-debtor will be estopped from raising the contention, as he has allowed the sale to be completed having been throughout aware of the irregularity.

It is doubtful whether a want of strict observance of the hour prescribed by Civil

16. The right conferred under Order XXI, Rule 87, is exercisable by a person whose interests are prejudicially affected by the sale, even though such interests do not relate to the property covered by the sale.

The creation of a right to apply for the cancellation of a sale under the Rule in favour of persons whose interests are affected by the sale does not by itself make out that such interests should relate to the subject-matter of the sale. There is no warrant to make the same inapplicable to cases where the interests, though not relating to the property, have been vitally affected by the sale.

The first two classes of cases provided for in Rule 87 have reference to those who are entitled to enforce their rights against the judgment-debtors in the suit, while the third category of persons enumerated in the Rule covers those who, though not entitled to the enforcement of such rights, are prejudicially affected by the sale. The prejudice need not necessarily be by reason of any right in relation to the property.— 44 T. L. R., 299 (= 18 T. L. J., 709).

17. The owner of some of the properties hypothecated is not competent under Section 308 to object to the sale of property which is not his. The expression "person whose immovable property has been sold" occurring in the Section does not include such a person.— 18 T. L. J., 891.

18. Section 308 does not apply to cases where fraud is set up, although under Rule 87 of Or. XXI, cases of fraud in the publication and conduct of the sale have been brought within the ambit of this provision. Under the old Code, cases where fraud has been alleged would have to be dealt with under Section 238 [new Section 40]. Even under the new Code, applications for the cancellation of the sale on the ground of fraud in matters other than the publication and conduct of the sale have to be dealt with under Section 40.

The period of limitation allowable in applications where fraud is alleged is three years under Article 152 of the Limitation Regulation [=Article 165 new]. The wording of Article 138 of the Limitation Regulation (old) was different from the corresponding Article in the British Indian Act in that in the latter provision the expression "irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale" did not find a place. When the period of limitation prescribed under Article 138 of the Limitation Regulation (old) had already expired and no reasons are shown for the delay, interference could be had only if the plea of fraud is made out.

Though inadequacy of the price and undervaluation in the proclamation cannot by themselves constitute fraud, the same taken along with the omission to have a proper notice of proclamation served on the defendant and to have the sale duly proclaimed and conducted on the property, would clearly constitute fraud.

Under the Civil Procedure Code of 1065, the party has a right to challenge the correctness of a remand order passed under Section 533 thereof [=Or. XL, r. 22] in the appeal filed against the fresh decree, even though he had not exercised the right to appeal against such order of remand provided under Section 557, Clause (28) of the Code [=Section 82, Or. XLII, r. 1]. This right has been specifically negatived by Section 83, Clause (2) of the Code of 1100; but the refusal of this right has been expressly made applicable only in cases of remand orders passed after the Code of 1100 came into force.— 18 T. L. J., 952.

proclamation, two conditions have to be satisfied. The offer to submit to a sale without a fresh proclamation should have been made with a knowledge of the defect in the proclamation and the offer must have been accepted in toto.

Where the judgment-debtor asks for six months' time to pay up the decree amount and agrees in that event to the sale being held without a fresh proclamation, the second condition above mentioned is not satisfied when only six weeks' time is granted.— 18 T. L. J., 963.

20. The defendant applied to have the sale of his properties in execution set aside on the ground of material irregularity. The question for decision was whether the matter was res judicata by a previous order of the executing Court rejecting a petition presented by the defendant on the date of the sale objecting to the sale on the very same grounds as were urged in his present application.

Held.—The matter was not res judicata by the previous order. It was impossible to read into that order, which consisted of the one word "rejected", a judicial adjudication finally determining any matter in dispute between the parties. It had to be treated merely as an interlocutory order. It was passed without any enquiry. The Court evidently did not want to stop the sale on account of the belated application of the judgment-debtor and was inclined to leave the parties take their chances on the sale. The right of the judgment-debtor to pursue his remedies under Section 308 was not affected by that order.— 19 T. L. J., 411.

"310. Application to set aside sale on ground of judgment-debtor having no saleable interest.—The purchaser at any such sale may apply to the Court to set aside the sale, on the ground that the person whose property purported to be sold had no saleable interest therein, and the Court may make such order as it thinks fit : Provided that no order to set aside a sale shall be made, unless the judgment-debtor and the decree-holder have had opportunity of being heard against such order."

1. "309. Effect of objection being disallowed and of its being allowed.—If no such application as is mentioned in the last preceding Section be made, or if such application be made and the objection be disallowed, the Court shall pass an order confirming the sale as regards the parties to the suit and the purchaser.

If such application be made, and if the objection be allowed, the Court shall pass an order setting aside the sale.

No suit to set aside, on the ground of such irregularity, an order passed under this Section shall be brought by the party against whom such order has been made.

2. "311, Para 1.—Confirmation of sale.—No sale of immovable property in execution of a decree shall become absolute until it has been confirmed by the Court."

3. For Proviso to Section 310, see last Rule.

II. For the second Para of Section 311, see under Rule 86 Supra. The Indian Code of 1882, Section 314, had no second Para. It was an addition made in the Regulation, "the object being to prevent the hardship felt by the judgment-debtors whose property is sold pending an appeal. According to the law now administered the reversal of the decree does not affect the sale. The importance attached to immovable property by the people of this country and the absence of any valid ground for holding a sale good, even after the reversal of the decree in execution of which it was made, are sufficient reasons for the amendment which simply postpones the confirmation of the sale, pending the disposal of the appeal and declares the sale invalid on the reversal of the decree. It, in no way, interferes with the right of the creditor to carry on the execution of the decree in any manner he thinks proper."—

III. The words in Section 309—"as regards the parties to the suit and the purchaser" have been omitted, following the Indian Code "probably because they were thought to be unnecessary. If so, the meaning of the Section would be that the order of confirmation operates against all those whose interests are bound by the sale; and such persons are therefore barred by Section 309 from instituting a separate suit to set aside the sale on the ground of irregularity."— 6 T. 1. Under the povisions of Section 241 (Regulation II of 1037), the Courts should pass an order confirming the sale.

When the Court thinks there are sufficient grounds for granting an application for a review, notice of such application should be given under Section 362 (Regulation II of 1037) to the opposite party. If the Court decides to grant the review, an order granting the application with the reasons for granting the same should be recorded.

[Section 241 referred to says that the sale, if not objected to for irregularity or if the objection is disallowed, shall become absolute. It also provides that the order made to set aside the sale shall be final, if the objection be allowed. If the objection be disallowed, the order confirming the sale shall be open to appeal. Section 362 says that the order of the Court for granting or refusing review is final.]— 1 T. L. R., 49.

2. A mortgaged certain property consisting of four items to B. B sued and obtained a decree for money against A and the property. C (plaintiff) purchased the same. A then applied under Section 240 of the Civil Procedure Code (old) to have the sale of the two items of the property set aside, on the ground that they did not belong to him. The original Court dismissed the application as one not falling under Section 240 of the Code, but the Zillah Judge, in appeal, allowed it. D (defendant) who held a decree against A, thereon attached the two items of property, brought them to sale and purchased them himself. C consequently, sued to have a declaration that the second sale was invalid as against him. The lower Courts upheld the plea of the defence based on the cancellation of the first sale to the extent of the two items forming the property in dispute.

Held.—As no material irregularity in publishing or conducting the first sale was asserted or proved, as required by Section 240 the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain and hear the application made by A to have the sale set aside. The District Judge's order should be treated as one of no legal force, as a mere nullity.

The ground on which the application was based was that the property (in suit) sold in execution of the decree was the property of a third party. The decree specifically directed the sale of this property for the satisfaction of the debt. Under the circumstances, the judgment-debtor had no right to make the application. He could not ask the Court to go behind the decree and adjudicate upon the propriety of having passed such a decree. The debtor had, therefore, no locus standi to make the application.— 7 T. L. R., 167.

3. Certain immovable property belonging to the plaintiff was sold in execution of an ex parte decree obtained against him. It was alleged that he had no notice of the suit, nor of the attachment and sale, and that the ex parte decree and execution proceedings were fraudulent. He sued to recover the property so sold.

Held.—The Civil Procedure Code contains special provisions for cancellation of sales on the ground of material irregularity and consequent damage, on the application of the party interested; provides for appeals against the orders passed; and prohibits the institution of regular suits by parties to the proceedings, to contest the sales. The plaintiff, in the case, did not adopt the procedure laid down. He was not entitled to contest the sale in the suit on the ground on which he could have obtained relief from the executing Court.— 10 T. L. R., 4.

4. The Court has no option under Section 309 except to confirm a Court sale, if no application has been made to set it aside.

A review of a confirmation order can be entertained only on the ground that the confirmation took place before the expiry of the time fixed for an application to set aside the sale in ignorance of an order setting it aside or pending an application to set it aside or other like grounds and not on the ground that it is invalid for irregularity. The holding of a sale on a wrong date is a mere irregularity and will not make the sale a nullity.— 2 S. D., 269.

5. Suit by a junior member of a Marumakkathayam Tarwad to set aside a court sale of Tarwad property in execution of a decree obtained against the Tarwad on the ground among others of irregularity in the conduct of the sale. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit while the Court of first appeal decreed the suit. In second appeal, it was contended for the appellant (the contesting defendant in the Court below) that no separate suit lay, as plaintiff could have applied under Section 308 C. P. C. [= Or. XXI r. 87] to set aside the sale on the ground of irregularity.

Held.—(1) No separate suit lay.

Plaintiff being one whose interests were bound by the sale, the decree having been validly obtained against the Tarwad of which the plaintiff was a member, he was barred under Section 309 C. P. C., from instituting a separate suit to set aside the sale on the ground of irregularity.

Assuming that a separate suit was maintainable, it was not established that, by reason of the irregularity (assuming that under-valuation in the proclamation was an irregularity in publishing the sale), substantial loss resulted to the plaintiff. There was no evidence that the property was undersold. The purchaser pays only for the title he gets at the sale. What the Commissioner has valued was not the title but the property. Secondly, assuming that the property was undersold, this result could not, in the circumstances, be reasonably connected as effect and cause with the undervaluation in the proclamation. An irregularity which was so trivial as to have escaped the notice of the plaintiff until the time of argument in the Court of Appeal, could not be regarded as the one which prevented the bidders from going beyond the price for which the property was ultimately knocked down to first defendant.

(2) The order of confirmation under Section 309 C. P. C. operates against all those whose interests are bound by the sale.

(3) The junior members of a Marumakkathayam Tarwad though not actually parties on record in a suit against the Karanavan are nevertheless 'parties to the suit' within the meaning of Section 309 C. P. C.

6. An application presented under Section 308 C. P. C., [ = Or. XXI, r. 87 ] was dismissed for default by the lower Court. In appeal against the order of dismissal, it was contended for the respondents, auction-purchasers, that no appeal lay against the order in question as it was really one passed under Section 97 [ = Or. IX, r. 8 ], and not under Section 309 C. P. C. and as Section 557, Cl. (16), [ = new Section 82 & Or. XLII, r. 1 ], which permitted appeals under Section 309 did not apply where the lower Court dismissed for default an application under Section 308.

Held.—An order dismissing a petition presented under Section 308, would fall under Section 309, of the C. P. C., even though the order was not passed on the merits and the order of the lower Court was therefore appealable.— 35 T. L. R. 75.

7. "The purchaser takes the property subject to the burden attached to it. If the encumbrances turn out to be invalid, the vendor has nothing to complain of; he has got what he bargained for; his indemnity is complete. He cannot pick up the burden of which the land is relieved and seize it as his own property. The notion that, after the completion of the purchase, the purchaser is in some way a trustee for the vendor of the amount by which the existence of encumbrances or supposed encumbrances has led to a diminution of the price, and liable therefore to account to the vendor for anything that remains of that amount after the encumbrances are satisfied or disposed of, is without foundation. After the purchase is completed, the vendor has no claim to participate in any benefit which the purchaser may derive from his purchase (F. B.).— 39 T. L. R., 165

The same principle should be applied in awarding interest under this Section, as in awarding interest in a decree, as the repayment may be enforced in the same manner as is provided for the execution of decrees. or when it is found that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property which purported to be sold and the purchaser is for that reason deprived of it,

Held,—(1) The plaintiff was entitled to no relief as the plaint did not allege that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest at all in the property in which case alone a suit would lie by the auction-purchaser for refund of money.

2. Under Section 313, it was the duty of the Court which had confirmed a sale to grant a sale certificate stating the property sold and the name of the person declared to be the purchaser, and an application by the purchaser was not a condition precedent for the issue of a sale certificate. It follows from this view that there could be no period of limitation for an appplication by the purchaser, as this would merely amount to a reminder to the Court that there was something which the Court should do. In a sense, the application may be regarded as a step in aid of the execution as without a sale certificate, the purchaser could not obtain possession. The decree-holder, therefore, was entitled to apply for the delivery of property sold in court-auction, within three years from the date of application to grant a sale certificate.— 18 T. L. II. Section 315 is an instance of cumulative remedies furnished by the Code of Civil Procedure. A person who purchases immovable properties in Court auction has the right of enforcing his sale certificate and obtaining possession of the properties by means of a petition under Section 315. This summary remedy is a statutory one given to him under the Code. The existence of such a prompt and speedy remedy does not deprive him of the right which he has in law of instituting a suit on the sale certificate for getting possession of the sale property. If the purchaser of immovable properties in Court auction puts in a petition under Section 315 for getting possession of the properties and fails in his attempt to obtain possession, he is not precluded from bringing a suit on the sale certificate (F.B.).— 29 T. On appeal, the District Judge in confirming the Munsiff's order also held that the application was barred as it was presented more than three years after the issue of the sale certificate.

Held.—The application fell within Section 238 [new Section 40] and the question was none the less a question under Section 238 because it also fell under Section 315.

Sections 315 and 316, C. P. C., specially provide for the delivery of possession to the auction-purchaser, on his application, of the property purchased by him, after the issue of a sale certificate. The view of the lower Court that the auction-purchaser should seek possession by a regular suit was clearly wrong.— 20 T. L. R., 151.

P. C., even though he could have obtained actual possession under Section 315, inasmuch as the proceedings in execution ended with the delivery of formal possession, and there was nothing for the execution Court to do in the matter.— 29 T. Since under Section 315, it is necessary for the decree-holder to provide himself with the sale certificate before he applies for delivery of possession, it cannot but be held that, in applying for the issue of the sale certificate, the plaintiff was taking a step in aid of his application for obtaining possession; and since the application for delivery by a decree-holder-auction-purchaser—is itself to be regarded as an application for execution, the application for the sale certificate must be held to be a step in aid of execution.— 36 T. II. 1. The usual way in which the "Jenmom right" of disputed property (which means either a mortgagor's or land-lord's right) is delivered to the judgment-creditor is by symbolical and not actual delivery under Section 316, C. P. C.—

16 T. L. R. App., *8.

2. Delivery under Section 316 could properly be made only in the case of their being tenants or other persons entitled to occupy the land in occupation (10 Mad., 53).

29 T. L. R., *166.

3. As between the judgment-creditor or his assigns on the one side and the judgment-debtor or his heirs on the other, symbolical possession is as good as actual possession to give the (judgment-creditor's) purchaser or his assigns the right to bring a suit for possession within twelve years from the date of such symbolical possession.

"Symbolical delivery of possession was good against the defendant and if he still continued in actual possession, he might be turned out by separate suit within twelve years from dispossession. As against third persons, formal possession was of course of no avail" (25 Bom., 275).—

26 T. L. R., *239.

4. Delivery of symbolical possession even though erroneously made, i. e., made under circumstances which do not make Section 316 applicable, operates to give the person so put in possession a fresh cause of action and to place the judgment-debtor in the position of a trespasser. Consequently a suit by the assignee-decree-holder purchaser for actual possession of the properties purchased is not barred under Section 238 [new Section 40], and symbolical possession delivered in circumstances to which Section 316 is not applicable, is not a nullity (17 M. L. J., 599).—

29 T. L. R., *166.

(1) Where the holder of a decree for the possession of immovable property or the purchaser of any such property sold in execution of a decree is resisted or obstructed by any person in obtaining possession of the property, he may make an application to the Court complaining of such resistance or obstruction.

of a decree obtained by him for enforcing his charge, cannot have the effect of determining the lease even though the lessee has been impleaded in the suit as the person in possession. The purchaser has acquired the property only subject to such possessory rights as had been created by the hypothecator before the date of suit and the occupation which such purchaser can get is only formal possession under Section 316 of the C. P. C.— 13 T. L. J., 346.

2. Criminal Courts should not lightly brush aside the records relating to delivery of possession in execution of decrees of Civil Courts. The omission to give due weight to such records will have the effect of unnecessarily driving aggrieved parties to Court even with respect to matters which had been once settled by the Civil Courts.— 18 T. L. J., 1287.

3. The symbolical delivery contemplated by the Civil Procedure Code has reference to a case of a person other than the purchaser in possession and not to those where the purchaser himself is in occupation of the property. Hence, a formal symbolical delivery of possession through Court cannot be considered to be imperative in such cases.— 19 T. L. J., 998.

"317. Procedure in case of obstruction to execution of decree.—If, in the execution of a decree for the possession of property, the officer charged with the execution of the warrant is resisted or obstructed by any person, the decree-holder may complain to the Court at any time within one month from the time of such resistance or obstruction.

The Court shall fix a day for investigating the complaint, and shall summon the party against whom the complaint is made to answer the same."

"323. Resisting or obstructing purchaser in obtaining possession of immovable property.—If the purchaser of any immovable property sold in execution of a decree be resisted or obstructed by the judgment-debtor or any one on his behalf in obtaining possession of the property, the provisions of this Chapter relating to resistance or obstruction to a decree-holder in obtaining possession of the property adjudged to him shall be applicable."

1. In a suit based on lease, parties in possession other than those whom the plaintiff has brought as defendants, should not be brought in as additional parties and the question of title should, as a rule, not be gone into as against such new parties. The introduction of new parties not only changes the nature of the litigation, but also affects the pecuniary jurisdiction of Courts, especially in a case like this where the value of title exceeds the Munsiff's jurisdiction.

If after a decree on the lease alone, plaintiff finds that the property is not in defendant's hands, his remedy is by following the procedure laid down in Sections 317, 320 and 321 [=Rules 94, 96, 97 and 98].—

The petition put in under Sections 323 & 324 [=Or. XXI, rr.97 and 98] of the Code could not be construed as one relating to a question arising out of execution as contemplated by Section 238 [new Section 40].

When the decree was satisfied and the execution proceedings closed, the High Court was not at liberty under Section 568 of the Code [new Section 89] to enter into a question of evidence as to whether the property sold fell within the purview of Section 7-A [new Section 8].

Per Chief Justice.—If the lands sold are really Crown lands, the proceedings taken will not bind the Crown, though as between the parties to the decree, the decree must be enforced.— 13 T. L. R., 157.

3. An appeal does not lie against an order under Section 323, Civil Procedure Code, rejecting the application of an auction-purchaser who is not the decree-holder, to remove the obstruction caused by the judgment-debtor to the delivery of possession of the property purchased by him at an auction-sale.

Per Sadasiva Aiyer, C. J.—Section 323, C. P. C., says that "the provisions of the Chapter" (Chapter XIX) relating to resistance or obstruction to a decree-holder in obtaining possession shall be applicable." Those provisions are contained in Section 318 [see new Section 60], and that merely says "the Court shall inquire" and pass such orders as it thinks fit. An order under Section 323 is not made appealable by Section 557 [=Section 82 and Or. XLII, r. 1] of the C. P. C. If it is appealable at all, it must be under Section 238 [new Section 40]. But it has never been held that orders in possession proceedings taken by a purchaser who was not the decree-holder fall under Section 238.

The Courts have extended Section 238 to its farthest limit when they said that the application of the court auction-purchaser, if he was also the decree-holder, to eject the judgment-debtor or his representative or a purchaser pendete lite or after decree from the judgment-debtor, came under Section 238, and it is impossible to stretch it as to include proceedings for possession taken by a Court auction-purchaser who is not the decree-holder and who has his remedy by suit for possession, the question whether possession should or should not be given to the purchaser who is not the decree-holder having no conceivable effect on the "execution, satisfaction or discharge of the decree."

If the purchaser is a representative in interest of the judgment debtor, the question of possession has arisen in the case between the judgment-debtor's representative and the judgment-debtor, and such a question is clearly not within Section 238, but ought to be tried in a separate suit, if the

4. The holders of a decree for surrender of certain properties applied for execution of the decree and got an order for delivery of possession. The Amin deputed to execute the warrant reported on 4-10-1090 stating that there was resistance to the delivery. Thereupon, the decree-holders applied to the Court to have the obstruction removed on 5-10-1090, but the application was dismissed on the ground that the Section of the Code under which it was purported to be made was not stated therein. Subsequently, another application for execution was made on which delivery of possession was again ordered. The Amin reporting obstruction a second time on 11-12-1090, the decree-holders repeated their application to remove it on 12-12-1090.

It was contended that this second application for removal of the obstruction was barred inasmuch as there was a prior obstruction by the same party more than a month before it.

Held (Overruling the contention).—The question was whether the decree-holder's right to complain of the last obstruction was in any way affected by the circumstance that there was a previous obstruction by the same party more than a month before the date of the present complaint? There is no provision of law which barred such right. Section 317 of the Civil Procedure Code gave one month's time within which to make the complaint, and the starting point was fixed as the date of "such obstruction," which evidently [illegible] "the obstruction which formed the [illegible]matter of the complaint." I. Section 320 of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows :—

" 320. Procedure in case of obstruction by claimant in good faith, other than judgment-debtor.—If the resistance or obstruction has been occasioned by any person other than the judgment-debtor claiming in good faith to be in possession of the property on his own account or on account of some person other than the judgment-debtor, the claim shall be numbered and registered as a suit between the decree-holder as plaintiff and the claimant as defendant ; and the Court shall, without prejudice to any proceedings to which the claimant may be liable under the Penal Code or any other law for the punishment of such resistance or obstruction, proceed to investigate the claim in the same manner and with the like power as if a suit for the property had been instituted by the decree-holder against the claimant under the provisions of Chapter V; and shall pass such order as it thinks fit for executing or staying execution of the decree.

Every such order shall have the same force as a decree, and shall be subject to the same conditions as to appeal or otherwise."

1. The direction of law to treat a claim petition as a plaint is applicable only where decree-holder complains to the Court, and the Court is satisfied that the execution of the decree is obstructed by a claimant other than the judgment-debtor or any one claiming through him. A petition put in by a party resisting execution cannot be treated as his opponent's plaint.— 3 T. L. R., 57.

2. (1) The application contemplated by Sections 320 and 321 (Sections 213 and 214, old Code) when ordered to be registered as a suit by the Court to which it is made, should be registered in the Court which has jurisdiction to try the suit.

(2) The fact that an application under either of these Sections has to go to a superior Court on account of the value of the property embraced by it being higher than the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Court to which the application was made, does not make any difference in the liability to pay court-fees.

The words "the Court" used in these Sections clearly mean the Court the execution of whose warrant of delivery is resisted, or by the execution of whose warrant a third party is dispossessed.— 7 T. L. R., 129.

3. In execution of a decree, the Court commissioner proceeded to value the improvements effected on the plaint property. Plaintiff who was no party to the previous suit, thereupon, presented a petition under Section 213 of the C. P. C., (old) requiring the property to be excluded from execution and his possession to be confirmed, as it was not liable to attachment under the decree which was being executed.

The Munsiff thereon passed on order directing plaintiff's claim to be filed as a regular suit.

Held.—The Munsiff was wrong in filing the suit as a claim preferred under Section 213 of the C. P. C., as the provision of that Section is to the effect that where the obstruction, (to execution of decree) is by a bonafide claimant not ousted from possession, the claim—i. e., the complaint of obstruction to the execution of the Court process—should be numbered and registered as a suit between the decree-holder as plaintiff and the claimant as defendant; and if the Court was satisfied that the obstruction by plaintiff was bona fide, it should have allowed the decree-holder to proceed in the summary manner prescribed by the above Section.— 8 T. L. R., 39.

4. The general principles of law are that no man should be deprived of the property in his possession without the authority of a decree of competent Court duly obtained against him; and those who seek to disturb present possession must prove their title to do so.

In cases where the holder of a decree dispossesses those who are not parties to his decree but are in possession of the property concerned, the latter are entitled to restoration of the property on proving their possession unless the decree-holder proves as against them, a better title. A person so dispossessed and suing for restoration of the property cannot claim mesne profits, as such a claim is beyond the scope of the provisions of Sections 213 and 214 (Regulation II of 1037), the mesne profits to be recovered by a regular suit.— 9 T. L. R., 46.

5. A and B (the appellants) appealed against the District Judge's order disallowing, without trial, the objections raised by them to the delivery of property to C and D (the decree-holders) in execution of decree, and claimed the property under court sales held subsequent to the date of the decree.

Held.—(1) The objection was one which ought to have been disposed of under Section 320 of the Civil Procedure Code after the claim was numbered and registered as a suit between C and D (the decree-holders) as plaintiffs and A and B (the objectors) as defendants.

(2) The omission of the lower Court to number and register a claim as a suit is tantamount to a rejection of the plaint, and the order of the lower Court was therefore appealable.

The decision come to by the lower Court, without following the procedure laid down by law could not be supported and the case must be remanded to the lower Court for trial and disposal in the manner prescribed in Section 320.— 13 T. L. R., 76.

6. Plaintiffs claiming plaint property as belonging to their family, executed a mortgage of it to first defendant, and suing for redemption, obtained a decree. The defendants 2 to 7 obstructed execution of that decree, and the Court following the directions given under Section 320, numbered the claim of the defendants 2 to 7 as a suit between the decree-holders as plaintiffs and the claimants as defendants and disposed of it on the merits. Plaintiffs then sued under the mortgage deed for balance of consideration unpaid or for recovery of plaint property. In special appeal:

Held.—The appeal failed. The plaintiff's case alone has to be looked into. The plaintiff has to make out a case for himself, and Section 320 does not relieve him from the onus of proof. His case is based on the mortgage deed and the decree obtained upon it. The mortgage was found fraudulent and the decree obtained in collusion with first defendant.— 1 S. D., 295.

7. Section 320 of the C. P. C., which provides for claims advanced by strangers not parties to the decree during execution

97. (1) Where any person other than the judgment-debtor is dispossessed of immovable property by the holder of a decree for the possession of such property, or where such property has been sold in execution of a decree, by the purchaser thereof, he may make an application to the Court complaining of such dispossession.

Dispossession by decree-holder or purchaser.

(2) The Court shall fix a day for investigating the matter and shall summon the party against whom the application is made to appear and answer the same.

proceedings is also applicable to such claims urged during restitution proceedings under Section 552 [new Section 108].— 3 S. D., 20.

8. When once a claim under Section 320, C. P. C., has been ordered to be registered as a suit, it is not necessary that the decree-holder should file a new plaint. Section 320 says that the Court shall proceed to investigate the claim of the obstructor in the same manner and with the like powers as if a suit for the property had been instituted by the decree-holder against the claimant. The omission on the part of the decree-holder to state the particulars regarding the obstructor's possession and how and when that possession was derived, after the claim was filed, cannot have the effect of disentitling the decree-holder to a trial of the claim set up by the objecting petitioner.— 3 S. D., 75.

9. Proceedings in execution is suspended during the pendency of the suit under Section 320, and the application for execution presented after the disposal of the suit under that Section has been held to be one to revive the prior application (24 Bom., 345).— 28 T. L. R., 151 (=3 T. L. J., 128).

10. Prima facie if it be proved or admitted that a person resisting execution is in possession of the property, the decree-holder should show that such possession is under the judgment-debtor and should not be allowed to rely on the decree in his favour. The circumstances of each case will determine whether the burden thus cast on the decree-holder is light or heavy. 14 T. L. J., 26.

11. No appeal lies against an order passed under Section 324 [Or. XXI, r. 96]. The order is conclusive subject to the result of the suit that may be filed for vacating it. The corresponding Sections of the old Regulation were as follow:—

"321. Procedure in case of person dispossessed of property disputing right of decree-holder to be put into possession.—If any person other than the judgment-debtor is dispossessed of any property in execution of a decree, and such person disputes the right of the decree-holder to dispossess him of such property under the decree, on the ground that the property was bona fide in his possession on his own account or on account of some person other than the judgment-debtor, and that it was not comprised in the decree, or that, if it was comprised in the decree, he was not a party to the suit in which the decree was passed, he may apply to the Court.

If, after examining the applicant, it appears to the Court that there is probable cause for making the application, the Court shall proceed to investigate the matter in dispute; and if it finds that the ground mentioned in the first paragraph of this Section exists, it shall make an order that the applicant recover possession of the property, and, if it does not find as aforesaid, it shall dismiss the application.

In hearing applications under this Section, the Court shall confine itself to the grounds of dispute above specified."

"324. Obstruction by claimant other than judgment-debtor.—If the purchaser of any such property is resisted or obstructed by any person other than the judgment-debtor claiming in good faith a right to the present possession thereof, or if, in delivering possession thereof, any such person is dispossessed, the Court, on the complaint of the purchaser or the person so dispossessed, shall inquire into the matter of the resistance, obstruction or dispossession, as the case may be, and pass such order thereon as it thinks fit.

The party against whom such order is passed may institute a suit to establish the right which he claims to the present possession of the property; but, subject to the result of such suit, if any, the order shall be final."

Case Law.

1. To entitle a person to the benefit of the summary mode of procedure allowed by Section 214 (Regulation II of 1037), he should have been dispossessed of the property he claims in the course of the execution of the decree.— 3 T. L. R., 40.

2. Under the last Clause of Section 253 (Regulation II of 1037), an order becomes final unless the party against whom it is passed gets it cancelled by a regular suit instituted within a year from the date thereof.

3. When a person in possession of property which has been sold in execution as being the property of another sues to establish his title to such property, the burden of proof lies not upon him but upon the person who claims as purchaser at the auction sale; and on failure of proof of title in the latter or in the judgment-debtor plaintiff is entitled to a declaration of his right to the property as against the defendant.—

4. Standing crop is immovable property: and, where a purchaser in auction of standing crops, removes it during pendency of claim investigation relating thereto, the Court is competent, under Section 324, to direct the purchaser to pay to the successful claimant the value of the crops removed.— 12 T. L. R., 27.

[See the General Clauses Regulation for definition of immovable property and also the change introduced by the new Rule.]

5. A person dispossessed of his property under a decree to which he was no party has a right to recover it on the mere proof of his possession; but there is a difference between a claim made under Section 321 and a regular suit. In the former, the Court has simply to ascertain whether the claimant was bona fide in possession of his own account or on account of some person other than the judgment-debtor and restore him to possession if he was; while in the latter, although the plaintiff may rest his case on his possession, the defendant is not debarred from proving his title which if he can establish as against the plaintiff's possession, he is entitled to succeed.—

14 T. L. R., 225.

6. Where a suit for the cancellation of a claim order under Section 324, was admittedly brought more than one year after the date of the order and it was contended that the five days' delay was due to the wrong entry of the date in the copy of the order by the Court's officer.

Held.—The delay excusable under Section 5 of the Limitation Regulation related only to appeals and applications and not to suits, and none of the other exceptions relating to suits was applicable to the case and therefore the suit was barred.—

7. While a property was under attachment in execution of 1st defendant's decree of the Alleppey Zillah Court, it was purchased in auction by plaintiff in execution of a decree of the Thiruvalla Munsiff's Court. Subsequently 1st defendant also purchased in auction the same property, and, when he applied for delivery of possession under his sale certificate, plaintiff resisted that application by a petition and, before the disposal of the petition, he filed the present suit for a declaration of his title and of the invalidity of 1st defendant's purchase as also for recovery of possession, should he be deprived of it by 1st defendant. The Munsiff, holding that plaintiff's sale became indefeasible as it was not set aside within one year, allowed the suit; while the District Judge dismissed it on the ground that 1st defendant's possession under the sale could not be disturbed, as plaintiff had not sought to set aside the order dismissing his objections under Section 324, and that order had become final by efflux of time.

Held.—(1) The sale by the inferior Court not being ipso facto null and void but only voidable and as it has not been sought to be cancelled within one year under Article 8 of the Limitation Regulation, it has become indefeasible by lapse of time.

(2) Since it is open to the person dispossessed to file a suit for relief without resorting to the summary procedure provided for in Section 324, the fact that he put in a petition in answer to the auction purchaser's complaint about obstruction does not prevent him from filing his suit at once.

(3) Where the Court expressed no opinion as to a question of title raised by a claimant under Section 324, a regular suit by the claimant to establish title is not governed by Article 7 of the Limitation Regulation and is not barred if not brought within one year from the date of the order. The contention therefore that the plaintiff's suit is not sustainable as he has not brought a suit to set aside the order under Section 324 and that the defendant's title has become perfected on account of the lapse of more than a year from the date of the order in plaintiff's petition is not tenable.—

1 S. D., 344.

9. Section 320 of the C. P. C., applies only to proceedings in execution of a decree for the possession of property. Where there is no such decree and a stranger to the decree obstructs to possession being given to the auction-purchaser, Section 324 is the one that applies.

An order under Section 324 is not appealable, the aggrieved party's remedy being by a separate suit.— 3 S. D., 276.

10. Revision petitions do not lie against orders passed under Section 321 relating to dispossession in execution of decrees and under Section 324 relating to obstruction or dispossession in enforcement of sale certificates which are declared by the respective Sections to be final. In such cases, the Court will have regard to the intention of the Legislature that promptness and certainty should be in some measure accepted instead of judicial perfection.—

11. An auction-purchaser was obstructed in his obtaining possession of the property he purchased, by one not a party to the suit. The auction-purchaser complained to the Court under Section 324 C. P. C., and the Court passed an order against him on the ground that the obstructor was, and was entitled to be, in possession of the property. The auction-purchaser moved the High Court in revision against this order. It was contended, inter alia, for the respondent that, as the order passed under Section 324 was declared to be final, subject to be questioned only by a separate suit no motion for revision was sustainable, and as the lower Court having taken evidence and come to a finding on a question, it had not failed to exercise jurisdiction vested in it by law, that on this ground also, no revision petition lay.

Held (Overruling these contentions).—The order was open to revision.

In cases where the law invests the orders of the lower Courts with the attribute of finality, i. e., finality till they are set aside by a regular suit, it behoves the lower Courts to carefully weigh all the facts before them, before passing orders, even though the proceedings may be of a somewhat summary nature and it is also necessary that such orders should strictly satisfy the requirements of the Section which gives them the character of a conditional or temporary finality.

Where, therefore, in an enquiry under Section 324, the lower Court without touching upon or referring to the evidence in the case and without considering the several circumstances of the case as also the question of good faith which is an important matter to be considered under Section 324 came to the conclusion that the petitioner was in occupation of the disputed buildings and garden:

Held.—As the order of the lower Court did not satisfy the requirements of Section 324 and as the lower Court failed to exercise in a proper manner the power vested in it by Section 324, the character of finality could not attach to the order which could therefore be interfered with in revision.—

(=3 T. L. J., 439).

12. Section 324 relates to questions of possession and not of title. A suit based on title, brought to set aside an order under Section 324 is governed by Article 121 of the Limitation Regulation, which allows a period of twelve years from the date of the order and not by Section 7 of that Regulation.— 29 T. L. R., 203.

13. Plaintiff-respondent obtained a decree for recovery of possession of certain property which belonged to Government but was in the enjoyment of the contesting defendant-appellant and others. After date of decree but before delivery of possession to plaintiff, defendant got a lease of the property from Government. Plaintiff subsequently obtained delivery through Court. Defendant applied, on the strength of his lease, for redelivery in execution, but his application was dismissed by the execution Court. On appeal:

Held.—Section 321 was inapplicable as the application was not by a person other than the judgment-debtor. The lease obtained from Government did not give the applicant a different capacity, as a judgment-debtor was none the less a judgment-debtor even though he may have acquired an interest in the property, subject-matter of the suit, subsequent to the date of the decree.

Further, even if Section 321 was held to be applicable, the appeal was incompetent as no appeal lay against orders under that Section.— 30 T. L. R., 205 (= 4 T. L. J., 329).

14. In a suit for declaration of the plaintiff's right to present possession of the property within the meaning of the last paragraph of Section 324, C. P. C., the Court-fee payable is Rs. 10.

It was contended that, besides the prayer for setting aside the summary order passed against the plaintiff in execution proceedings, the plaint also contained a prayer for a declaration that the property should not be delivered in pursuance of such order. This was not a prayer for an injunction and need not be separately valued. It was only an amplification of the prayer to set aside the summary order, and upon that prayer being granted, the other result necessarily followed. The right of the appellant to sue for the establishment of his right rested on the second praragraph of Section 324 which recognises a suit like the present as the only mode of obtaining review of the order passed under that Section and Article 8, Clause 3, of Schedule II of the Court Fees Regulation relates just to actions of this description.— 36 T. L. R., 8 (= 9 T. L. J., 316).

15. The appellant had obtained against his Kanom tenant a decree for arrears of Michavarom and other dues and in execution thereof purchased the Kanom holding at Court-sale. On applying to obtain delivery through Court, his application was resisted by the respondent who, in execution of a hypothecation decree obtained by him against the same tenant several years prior to the appellant's suit, had purchased the Kanom holding during the pendency of the appellant's suit and had obtained possession of the holding through Court subsequent to the decree in the appellant's suit. The appellant moved the lower Court for removal of the obstruction. The lower Court holding that the respondent was in possession in his own right and that he was not a party to the suit instituted by the appellant, dismissed the application for removal of obstruction.

The appellant having preferred a revision petition to the High Court against the order, a Division Bench held that the order of the lower Court fell under Section 238, C. P. C., [new Section 40], and directed the conversion of the revision petition into a regular appeal. The appeal, coming on for hearing before another Division Bench, was referred to a Full Bench for disposal in view of the difficulties surrounding the case:

Held.—(1) As the obstructor in good faith claimed a right to the present possession of the property not on behalf of the judgment-debtor, the auction-purchaser's application for the removal of the obstruction to the delivery of the property fell under Section 324.

An order passed under that Section being final subject only to the result of a regular suit instituted by the party aggrieved, no appeal lay against such order.

Treating the application as a revision petition, this is not a case in which the High Court should interfere in the exercise of its powers of revision, in view of the fact that it is open to the petitioner to seek his redress by means of a regular suit.

(2) Though the obstruction may be said to be one relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of a decree, the obstructor cannot be regarded as the representative of the judgment-debtor within

Rules not applicable to transferee lite pendente.

99. Nothing in Rules 96 and 98 shall apply to resistance or obstruction in execution of a decree for the possession of immovable property by a person to whom the judgment-debtor has transferred the property after the institution of the suit in which the decree was passed or to the dispossession of any such person.

Orders conclusive subject to regular suit.

100. Any party not being a judgment-debtor against whom an order is made under Rule 95, Rule 96 or Rule 98 may institute a suit to establish the right which he claims to the present possession of the property; but, subject to the result of such suit (if any), the order shall be conclusive.

" The party against whom an order is passed under this Section may institute a suit to establish the right which he claims to the present possession of the property ; but subject to the result of such suit, if any, the order shall be final."

1. The last Para of Section 321 says that the suit must be "to establish the right to present possession," and not the right claimed to the property in dispute as in the case of a claim dismissed under Section 280 [=Or. # ORDER XXII.

Death, Marriage and Insolvency of Parties.

No abatement by party's death, if right to sue survives.

1. The death of a plaintiff or defendant shall not cause the suit to abate if the right to sue survives.

Or. XXII : Case Law.

The provisions of Order XXII and the time prescribed under Article 161 of the Limitation Regulation relating to the impleading of the legal representatives of a deceased plaintiff can have no application to cases where a corporation either aggregate or sole, is the plaintiff. On a careful reading of Rules 1, 3 and 4 of this Order, the only provisions in the Code relating to abatement, it is doubtful whether the civil death of any party has been in the contemplation of the Legislature. A corporation is a fictitious body invested by law with the attributes of a person having a corporate name by which he can sue or be sued and hold properties, but enjoy immortal existence by reason of the perpetual succession of its members. This would indicate that the change in its members or officers would not affect its rights to sue or be sued, such rights having to be regarded by the general law in force relating to Companies and the special rules embodied in its Articles, &c.

If there has been any change in the personnel the party alleging the competency of the person on record to represent the Company should appraise the Court of the same whereupon a notice will have to be issued to the person concerned. On the Court being satisfied as to the competency of the plea, the Court should fix a time for the competent person coming in, requiring the person already on record to arrange for the same. If default is made to comply with this direction, the Court ought to proceed under Order XVII, Rule 3.

The subscription and verification of a plaint under Order XXIX, Rule 1, cannot constitute the person signing, the plaintiff in the case. It is the corporation which is the plaintiff.— 45 T. L. R., 47 (=19 T. L. J., 264).

I. Section 346 of Regulation II of 1065, which is reproduced here, had the following four Illustrations appended to it. The Section with the Illustrations was the same as Section 361 of the Indian Code of 1882 :-

Illustrations.

"(a) A covenants with B and C to pay an annuity to B during C's life. B and C sue A to compel payment. B dies before the decree. The right to use survives to C, and the suit does not abate.

(b) In the same case, all the parties die before decree. The right to sue survives to the representative of the survivor of B and C, and he may continue the suit against A's representative.

(c) A sues B for libel. A dies. The right to sue does not survive, and the suit abates.

(d) A, a member of a Hindu joint family under the Mitakshara law, institutes a suit for partition of the family property. A dies leaving B, a minor son, his heir. The right to sue survives to B, and the suit does not abate."

II. The Indian Select Committee of 1903 ommtted Illustrations (a) and (b) "as founded upon an antiquated decision [Anderson V. Martindale (1801), 1 East 497] which is not very intelligible to practitioners in this country.

"Illustration (d) is correct only under the Dayabhaga system and the word 'minor' has been omitted as not of the essence of the example."— India Gazette dated 21-3-1903, Pt. V.

III. The two Illustrations thus retained were omitted by the Indian Special Committee who said :—"The Select Committee struck out two of the four Illustrations to Section 361 and the Committee think the remaining Illustrations may also be deleted as they are too obvious to serve any useful purpose."

Case Law.

1. The principle of abatement embodied in Section 346 does apply to proceedings up to the decree of the Appellate Court.— 14 T. L. R., 156.

2. When in the course of a suit by the plaintiff (a Mahomedan woman) against the defendant, her brother, for recovery of certain properties, the plaintiff died leaving her husband, three sisters and two brothers besides the defendant as heirs and the two brothers (other than the defendant) and two sisters alone applied to be impleaded as heirs of the plaintiff :

Held.—(1) The right to sue did not survive to the petitioners as their cause of action against the defendant was substantially different from that of the deceased plaintiff. The "right to sue" means the right to bring a suit asserting a right to the same relief which the deceased plaintiff asserted at the time of the said plaintiff's death.

(2) The petitioners, not having brought on record all the representatives of the deceased plaintiff, could not proceed with the suit.— 11 T. L. J., 411.

3. The abatement of the appeal by the death of one of the respondents cannot affect the prosecution of the appeal against the other respondents when the right of appeal survives against them.— 14 T. L. J., 267.

4. The maternal grandfather of a minor applied for the appointment of himself or his elder son as guardian of the minor, the parties being Hindus governed by the Mithakshara Law. The lower Court rejected the application as it was not shown that the minor had any separate property, and as no guardian could be appointed for his undivided share in the joint family properties. The grand-father appealed to the High Court. Pending the appeal, he died. The petitioner, his eldest son, applied for being brought on the record, so that he might prosecute the appeal. The counter-petitioner who was the manager of the family to which the minor belonged objected on the ground that the application of the grand-father was a purely personal one which had abated with his death.

Held—As the application of the grand-father was based on a character common to himself and the petitioner, the right to prosecute the appeal survived to the petitioner, and the appeal did not, therefore, abate.— 40 T. L. R., 161 (= 15 T. L. J., 49).

5. An elephant was attached for a decree against the second defendant. The plaintiff put in a claim petition on the ground that, long before the date of the attachment, the elephant had ceased to be the property of the second defendant and had become the plaintiff's property. The execution Court dismissed his claim. The present suit was for a declaration that the elephant was the property of the plaintiff on the date of the attachment and was hence not liable to be attached for the second defendant's debt and for a cancellation of the order of the execution Court dismissing the plaintiff's claim. Pending the suit, it was represented to the Court that the elephant was dead, and the Court, without more, dismissed the suit.

Held.—It was difficult to understand the rationale of the lower Court's judgment. It looked almost as if the lower Court

2. Where there are more plaintiffs or defendants than one, and any of them dies, and where the right to sue survives to the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs alone, or against the surviving defendant or defendants alone, the Court shall cause an entry to that effect to be made on the record, and the suit shall proceed at the instance of the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs or against the surviving defendant or defendants.

Procedure in case of death of one of several plaintiffs or of sole plaintiff.

3. (1) Where one of two or more plaintiffs dies and the right to sue does not survive to the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs alone, or a sole plaintiff or sole surviving plaintiff dies and the right to sue survives, the Court, on an application made in that behalf, shall cause the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff to be made a party and shall proceed with the suit.

(2) Where within the time limited by law no application is made under Sub-rule (1), the suit shall abate so far as the deceased plaintiff is concerned, and, on the application of the defendant, the Court may award to him the costs which he may have incurred in defending the suit, to be recovered from the estate of the deceased plaintiff.

thought that, with the death of the elephant, the suit abated. But the result was impossible because the elephant was not a party to the suit either as plaintiff or as defendant. The death of the elephant did not make the question of the ownership of the elephant while it was alive "untriable". Nor did it make the trial quite infructuous. The decree of the lower Court was reversed and the suit remanded for trial on the merits.— 19 T. L. J., 320.

I. The three Sections of Regulation II of 1065, whose provisions have been amalgamated, amended and enacted in this Rule, were as follow:—

"348. Procedure where one of several plaintiffs dies and right to sue does not survive to surviving plaintiffs alone.—If there are more plaintiffs than one, and any of them dies, and if the right to sue does not survive to the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs alone, but survives to him or them and the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff jointly, the Court may cause the legal representative, if any, of the deceased plaintiff to be made a party, and shall thereupon cause an entry to that effect to be made on the record and proceed with the suit."

"349. Procedure in case of death of sole or sole surviving plaintiff.—In case of the death of a sole plaintiff or sole surviving plaintiff, the legal representative of the deceased may, where the right to sue survives, apply to the Court to have his name entered on the record in place of the deceased plaintiff, and the Court shall thereupon enter his name and proceed with the suit."

"350. Abatement where no application by representative of deceased plaintiff.—If, within the time limited by law, no such application be made to the Court by any person claiming to be the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff, the Court may pass an order that the suit shall abate, and shall, on the application of the defendant, award to the defendant the costs which he may have incurred in defending the suit, to be recovered from the estate of the deceased plaintiff; or the Court may, if it think proper, on the application of the defendant, and upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit, pass such other order as it thinks fit for bringing in the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff, or for proceeding with the suit in order to a final determination of the matter in dispute, or for both those purp[illegible]s.

Explanation—A certificate of heirship, or a certificate to collect debts, does not of itself constitute the person holding it the legal representative of the deceased. But when the person holding any such certificate obtains thereby property belonging to the deceased, he may be treated as a legal representative liable in respect of such property."

II. See Rule 12 Infra,

Case Law.

1. During the pendency of an appeal against a decision which was against the interest of his Tarwad, the appellant died and a junior member of the same Tarwad applied within the statutory period for sanction to prosecute the appeal and make the Karanavan a respondent if he was unwilling to be made an appellant. The Karanavan appeared before the Court and refused to prosecute the appeal. The District Judge held that the appeal had abated as the Karanavan failed to apply in time.

Held.—As the Munsiff's decree was against the interests of the Tarwad which the law enables every member to protect, the Judge's order was wrong. The said junior member should be allowed to prosecute the appeal after making the Karanavan a respondent if he is unwilling to be made a co-appellant.— 17 T. L. R., 15.

2. Where in a suit the second plaintiff died and the eighth defendant, after nine months had elapsed, put in a petition apparently under Clause 1 of Section 350, C. P. C. before the lower Court praying that an order be passed declaring the suit to have abated and the defendant be awarded his costs and the Court passed an order to the effect that the petition was to be recorded and would be considered at the disposal of the suit:

Held.—The lower Court had not expressed any opinion upon the question whether the right to sue survived, and as the matter was still open, it was not for the Appellate Court to discuss it. The appeal preferred against the said order of the lower Court was premature.— 1 S. D., 337.

3. A person who claims as the senior member of his family to continue a suit for damages instituted by a deceased plaintiff on behalf of his family, need not produce a succession certificate before he can claim a decree in his favour.

The legal representative whose presence on the record is contemplated by Sections 349 and 350, C. P. C., is not necessarily the holder of a certificate under the Succession Certificate Regulation IX of 1090 (See Explanation to Section 350, C. P. C.). The question, therefore, as to who the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff is, for the purpose of Chapter XXI, C. P. C. [Old —The Death, Marriage and Insolvency of Parties], must be decided by the Court in which the suit is pending, unless action is taken under Section 351, C. P. C. [= Or. XXII, r. 5] (F. B.).—33 T. L. R., 59 (= 7 T. L. J., 105).

4. One L sued for recovery of her father's one-fifth share of the plaint properties, alleging she was the heir of her deceased father. During the pendency of the suit, she died, and the primary Court, in ignorance of her death, dismissed the suit on the ground that neither the plaintiff nor the defendants were present. Plaintiff, as heir of his deceased wife L, brought the present suit for recovery of one-fifth share of the plaint properties on foot of a gift-deed executed in favour of his wife by her father. The defendants contended, inter alia, that the order dismissing L's suit was an order of abatement under Section 350 and operated as a bar to the present suit. The primary Court decreed for plaintiff. The lower appellate Court, however, reversed the decree of the original Court holding that the decision in the former suit was an order of abatement under Section 350 and that, under Section 355 of the Code [=Or. XXII, r. 9], the present suit was not maintainable, as in its view, the cause of action in the present suit was identical with the cause of action in the former suit, the cause of action in either suit being the defendant's refusal to surrender L's share of the properties. In special appeal, it was contended for plaintiff-special appellant—that the order dismissing the former suit should have been regarded as one passed under Section 92, C. P. C. [= Or. IX, r. 8].

Held.—The order dismissing L's suit should be regarded as an order of abatement under Section 350, C. P. C.

The two suits were based on different causes of action and the former suit was not a bar to the present suit.

Section 39 [= Or. II, r. 2] does not say that every suit shall include every cause of action, or every claim which the party has, but every suit shall include the whole of the claim arising out of the same cause of action—meaning the cause of action for which the suit is brought.

The Section is directed to securing the exhaustion of relief in respect of a cause of action, and not to the inclusion in one and the same action of different causes of action, even though they arise from the same transactions.

Cause of action has no relation whatever to the defence which may be set up by a defendant, nor does it depend upon the character of the relief prayed for by the plaintiff. It refers entirely to the grounds set forth in the plaint as the cause of action, or, in other words, to the media upon which the plaintiff asks the Court to arrive at a conclusion in his favour.— 35 T. L. R., 80.

5. On the death of P. who originally instituted the suit, the appellant applied to be brought on the record as the legal representative of the deceased. The application was, after due notice, allowed and the appellant was added as the second plaintiff. The question was whether the appellant could claim a decree in his favour, as the legal representative of the deceased plaintiff, without the production of a certificate under Regulation IX of 1090 (Succession Certificate).

Held.—The Regulation does not apply. A person who is brought on the record, as the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff, can claim to have a decree passed in his favour, without the production of a certificate under the Regulation.

Section 351 C. P. C. [= Or. XXII, r. 5] lays down the procedure to be followed by the Courts, should any dispute arise as to who is the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff; and it provides that the suit may be either stayed until the question has been determined in another suit; or that the Court may itself decide the dispute by an order made in the suit. The person who is thus brought on the record can claim to have a decree passed in his favour as the legal representative of the deceased, inasmuch as in the eye of the law he continues the existence of the deceased. Moreover, Section 348 C. P. C., imperatively requires the Court to proceed with the suit after the legal representative has been placed on the record. The Explanation to Section 350 also suggests this conclusion.—

8 T. L. J., 413.

6. In the appeal, the plaintiff-appellant, a childless Nanjanad Vellala woman, prayed for having the amount awarded to her by the lower Court as Nangudama enhanced. During the pendency of the appeal, the appellant died. Her daughter's son thereupon applied to be impleaded as her representative and to be allowed to prosecute the appeal.

Held.—The application was not maintainable under Sections 349 and 551, of the C. P. C., inasmuch as the "right to sue" did not survive. The expression "right to sue" meant the right to bring a suit asserting a right to the same relief which the deceased plaintiff has asserted at the time of the death. In the case under consideration, it could not be said that, if the plaintiff had died before the institution of the suit, her representative could have brought a suit for the recovery of the Nangudama which she would have been entitled to recover from her husband's estate. The claim for Nangudama was only a personal claim which ceased to be enforceable except when the same had been perfected by a judgment. So far as the claim for enhanced Nangudama was concerned, the plaintiff's suit had to be considered to have been dismissed; in other words, it had to be considered not to have been perfected by a judgment.—

(= 13 T. L. J., 190).

7. "For convenience and speedy disposal of suits, the Court can act summarily in recognising any person who seems to have a prima facie title as legal representative for conducting or defending the suit in place of a deceased plaintiff or defendant, and if the suit is bona fide conducted or defended by the party so admitted, it binds the deceased's estate and all his heirs. If this were not so, it would in no few cases be practically impossible to secure a complete representation of the party dying pending a suit, and it would be especially so, in the case of a Mahomedan party."—

Procedure in case of death of one of several defendants or of sole defendant.

4. (1) Where one of two or more defendants dies and the right to sue does not survive against the surviving defendant or defendants alone, or a sole defendant or sole surviving defendant dies and the right to sue survives, the Court, on an application made in that behalf, shall cause the legal representative of the deceased defendant to be made a party and shall proceed with the suit.

(3) Where within the time limited by law no application is made under Sub-rule (1), the suit shall abate as against the deceased defendant.

Or. XXII, r. 4 [=S. 352 = Or. XXII, r. 4]

I. The corresponding Section of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows :—

" 352. Procedure in case of death of one of several defendants, or of sole or sole surviving defendant.—If there be more defendants than one, and any of them die before decree and the right to sue does not survive against the surviving defendant or defendants alone, and also in case of the death of a sole defendant, or sole surviving defendant where the right to sue survives, the plaintiff may make an application to the Court, specifying the name, description and place of abode of any person whom he alleges to be the legal representative of the deceased defendant, and whom he desires to be made the defendant in his stead,

The Court shall thereupon enter the name of such representative on the record in the place of such defendant, and shall issue a summons to such representative to appear on a day to be therein mentioned to defend the suit ; and the case shall thereupon proceed in the same manner as if such representative had originally been made a defendant and had been a party to the former proceedings in the suit :

Provided that the person so made defendant may object that he is not the legal representative of the deceased defendant, or may make any defence appropriate to his character as such representative.

When the plaintiff fails to make such application within the period prescribed therefor, the suit shall abate, unless he satisfies the Court that he had sufficient cause for not making the application within such period.

The legal representative of a deceased defendant may apply to have himself made a defendant in place of the deceased defendant, and the provisions of this Section, so far as they are applicable, shall apply to the application and to the proceedings and consequences ensuing thereon."

II. See Rule 12 Infra.

III. For Form of Summons to legal representative of a deceased defendant, see Appendix E, Form No. 5.

Case Law.

1. An application to bring in the legal representative of a deceased person as party may be made within sixty days from the date of the death of the deceased person; and a suit cannot be dismissed before the lapse of these sixty days for failure to bring in the deceased's representative as a party on the record.— 13 T. L. R., 126.

2. As soon as it is proved that a defendant was dead at the time the plaint was filed, the Court ought to refuse to proceed further in the suit and should leave it to the plaintiff to begin de novo against the person against whom alone he can legally move.

A purchaser of properties had agreed to pay a portion of the purchase-money to a creditor of the vendor; but the creditor having declined to accept payment from the purchaser, the vendor paid the money due to the creditor. In a suit brought for recovery of the unpaid portion of the purchase-money from the purchaser who was dead at the time the plaint was filed:

Held,—The suit should have been thrown out. The lower Court was wrong in having allowed the plaintiff to substitute another in the place of the defendant and continue his action.

The Sections of the Civil Procedure Code relating to the bringing in of legal representatives of deceased parties are applicable only where the death takes place pending the suit and not where, even before suit, the party supposed to be impleaded had died — 2? T. L. R., 200.

Affirmed,—17 T. L. J., 158.

3. An application by the plaintiff to bring in the legal representative of a deceased defendant who died pending the suit is one falling under Section 352, and should be made within sixty days as provided by Art. 147 of the Limitation Regulation, unless sufficient cause was shown for the delay.— 22 T. L. R., 266.

4. Section 352, C. P. C., which applies to the case of the death of a respondent, seems to leave the selection of deceased's legal representative to the choice of plaintiff or appellant. The Section may be construed as giving no right to the appellant that any particular person shall not be a respondent, though it gives him the right to determine his own respondent.— 1 S. D., 204.

5. Where in a suit the plaintiff's application to bring in the representatives of his brother the fifth defendant was made 4½ months after the death of the latter and the lower Court allowed the application holding that Section 355 or 356 [=r. 9 or 10] applied and the limitation was three years:

Held,—The limitation was only 60 days.

On the evidence, there was no sufficient cause for the delay.— K. P., 273.

6. In a suit for redemption the defendant, mortgagee, died. His son who was already a defendant in the case falsely represented to the plaintiff that he was the devisee under his father's will, and the plaintiff therefore did not apply to implead the legal representatives till long after the period prescribed for making the application had expired.

Held.—These circumstances amounted to "sufficient cause" for not making the application in time.

It is difficult and undesirable to attempt to define precisely the meaning of the words "sufficient cause" or "sufficient reason."

To do so would be to crystallise into a rigid definition that judicial power and discretion which the Legislature has for the best of all reasons left undetermined and unfettered.

The words "sufficient cause" in Section 5 of the Limitation Act should receive a liberal construction so as to advance substantial justice when no negligence or inaction nor want of bona fides is imputable to the appellant or applicant for review.— 1 T. L. J., 397.

7. Where the liability of the defendants is joint and several, the death of one of the defendants without his representatives being brought on record cannot exonerate the other defendants from liability.— 13 T. L. J., 43.

8. Where the Munsiff made an order to the effect that the suit abated owing to the failure of the plaintiff to implead the legal representative of the deceased defendant in time:

Held.—The Munsiff had jurisdiction under the penultimate paragraph of Section 552 to vacate the order of abatement made in consequence of the plaintiff's apparent laches.— 13 T. L. J., 392.

9. Where after the filing of an appeal, the legal representative of a deceased respondent is impleaded during the course of one proceeding in the appeal, this impleading is valid and sufficient for all the subsequent proceedings therein.—14 T. L. J., 381.

10. During the progress of a partition suit in the District Court, a defendant died. The plaintiff made an application under Section 352 of the C. P. C., to implead the legal representatives of the deceased defendant, but the application was dismissed as time-barred. The plaintiff thereupon made a second application under Section 28 [=Or. I, rr. 8 (2), 10 (2) & (3) and 11]. The District Court without proceeding under either of the two above-mentioned Sections impleaded the legal representatives of the deceased defendant in the exercise of its inherent powers, stating that in a particular suit all the parties should be before the Court.

Held.—The order of the District Court was wrong. Though the Court has inherent powers to correct its own mistakes, it had no powers to correct the mistakes of the parties. Inherent powers of the Court were not to be invoked in order to relieve a party from the consequences of his own mistake or to enable him to evade the law of limitation. As the time allowed by law for impleading the legal representatives of the deceased defendant had expired before the application to implead was put in, the lower Court should not have gone to the rescue of the plaintiff by invoking its inherent powers.— 15 T. L. J., 371.

11. Order XXII, Rule 4, relates only to applications to bring in legal representatives on record of defendants who were alive at the date of the suit but died subsequently. It does not apply to cases where a defendant had died before the date of the suit; and the Court will have no jurisdiction under such circumstances to allow the plaintiff to substitute another in the place of the defendant and continue his action. The provisions of Rule 10 of Order I expressly conferring powers of substitution only in cases of the institution of suits bona fide in the name of the wrong plaintiff, appear to warrant this view.—17 T. L. J., 158.

12. Ignorance of the factum of the death of a defendant, if pleaded bona fide, would per se constitute 'sufficient cause' within the meaning of Section 352, and be a valid excuse for delays in such applications. What Courts have to do in such cases is to consider this plea along with the attendant circumstances, and to refuse such application if it is made out that the applicant has been guilty of negligence or laches, or if the delay has been made mala fide. Where no negligence in action or want of bona fides, is imputable to the applicant, the delay should always be condoned.

The old Code did not make abatement of suits, on the expiry of the prescribed time imperative in the case of death of defendant. Under the new Code abatements have been made imperative upon the expiry of the prescribed time, in the case of the death of plaintiffs and defendants and the provisions relating to cancellation of orders of abatements made applicable in both the above cases.— 18 T. L. J., 1088.

not really representatives of the Tarwad, though bona fide thought to be so, were added as parties to the suit and a decree was obtained. The question was raised as to whether the decree was binding on the real Karanavan of the Tarwad.

I. The corresponding Section of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows :—

"351. Procedure in case of dispute as to representative of deceased plaintiff.—If any dispute arise as to who is the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff, the Court may either stay the suit until the fact has been determined in another suit, or decide at or before the hearing of the suit who shall be admitted to be such legal representative for the purpose of prosecuting the suit."

II. The Proviso to the Rule was added by the Select Committee.

III. The Notes on Clauses say :—"This Rule proposes to enact that the question of who is legal representative should be decided in the suit itself, and does not give the option, now in force, to stay the suit till such question is decided in a fresh suit. An indefinite stay of suit for the purpose of ascertaining the right legal representative is to be deprecated, while the question could be as easily tried in the suit itself."

Case Law.

1. One S, a member of the Cutch-Memon community, who was plaintiff in 3 suits and defendant in the 4th, died leaving behind him a widow, two minor sons and a daughter by her, 3 other minor sons by another widow and a brother. The brother set up that Hindu law was applicable to the community and that he and his brother being undivided he should be made along with the minor sons the legal representative of the deceased and also the next friend or guardian of the minors. The widow set up that Mahomedan Law was applicable and that she, her daughter and her 2 minor sons should be made the legal representatives with herself as their next friend or guardian. She denied the rights of the other sons. The District Judge made the brother with the 5 sons legal representatives, but appointed him and the widow together as next friends or guardians ad litem.

Held (by Sadasiva Iyer, C. J., Muttunayagom Pillai, J., concurring).—(1) For convenience and speedy disposal of suits any person having a prima facie title can be made a legal representative for the purposes of the suit and only for that purpose, though such person may be only one of several legal representatives or may not be the true legal representative. A person prosecuting or defending a suit as the legal representative of a deceased party will of course be accountable to others who like himself are also the legal representatives of the deceased or to be the true legal representatives as the case may be. It all depends upon the balance of convenience whether to leave the rival claimants to determine their priority by a separate suit, or to appoint one of them as representative.

(2) The language of Section 351 does not mean that the Court is bound to select one set only of the rival claimants as the person or persons who shall be admitted to be such legal representatives for the purpose of prosecuting the suit. In order to prevent the defendant from objecting that the true representative has not been brought in, both the claimants can be made legal representatives for the purpose only of continuing the suit if that course is not inconvenient.

(3) As for the matter of guardianship, although no appeal lies against an order appointing next friends or guardians ad litem, yet the High Court as a Court of Revision could interfere.

(4) As both the brother and the widow claim each a share as heir of the deceased, their interests are opposed to those of the minor sons and hence they could not be appointed guardians of the minors.—

2. In a suit between A and B, A died after filing a special appeal and C applied to the High Court to be made the legal representative of the deceased. B denied C's right to represent A, and on a special issue remitted by the High Court, the lower Courts concurrently found in favour of C and the High Court, on the strength of this finding, brought C on record and allowed him to prosecute the special appeal.

Held.—Such an order did not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit where the question as to who was the heir of A arose for decision.

When the Court before which a particular suit is pending takes upon itself the duty of deciding at or before the hearing, the dispute as to who is the legal representative, such decision is, under Section 351, Civil Procedure Code, for the purpose of finding out merely "who shall be admitted to be such legal representative for the purpose of prosecuting the suit." The Legislature advisedly thus restricted the operative force of decisions of the kind above stated apparently on the ground that the proceedings which culminate in them are more or less of a summary nature and therefore, the weight ordinarily attaching to decisions on questions of fact which are brought in issue between the parties and which are fought out by them in suits and in proceedings which are not merely of an interlocutory or summary nature, but in which the orders passed are appealable and are given the force of decrees, should not be given to such summary decisions.—

3. When the 1st Munsiff allowed the counter-petitioner's prayer to represent the deceased plaintiff in the suit, the petitioner appealed against that order and his claim to represent the deceased was recognised by the 2nd on remand. In the interval, the counter-petitioner apparently colluded with the defendant and got the suit struck off by the 1st Munsiff. Thereupon, the petitioner appealed against the latter order which was dismissed while his right of appeal was admitted.

No abatement by reason of death after hearing.

6. Notwithstanding anything contained in the foregoing Rules, whether the cause of action survives or not, there shall be no abatement by reason of the death of either party between the conclusion of the hearing and the pronouncing of the judgment, but judgment may in such case be pronounced notwithstanding the death and shall have the same force and effect as if it had been pronounced before the death took place.

Suit not abated by marriage of female party.

7. (1) The marriage of a female plaintiff or defendant shall not cause the suit to abate, but the suit may notwithstanding be proceeded with to judgment, and, where the decree is against a female defendant, it may be executed against her alone.

(2) Where the husband is by law liable for the debts of his wife, the decree may, with the permission of the Court, be executed against the husband also; and in case of judgment for the wife, execution of the decree may, with such permission, be issued upon the application of the husband, where the husband is by law entitled to the subject-matter of the decree.

Held (remanding the case to the lower Appellate Court for decision on the merits). —The 1st Munsiff's order striking off the case was a nullity as it was done at the request of a party who did not represent the deceased.— K. P., 307.

4. Where a question arises as to whether any person is or is not the legal representative of a deceased party, it is the duty of the Court to decide the question. When the question arises before an Appellate Court, the case may be remanded to a subordinate Court; and this would ordinarily be the correct procedure where the question as to which of the two contesting parties is the legal representative depends on the decision of a disputed question of fact, as regards which evidence is necessary.—

Case Law.

1. A District Judge dismissed a pauper suit on the ground that the plaintiff who is a resident of Travancore failed to furnish security for the costs of the defendants as directed by the Court.

Held.—The order of the Judge was illegal as there is no law for authorising an original Court to direct the furnishing of security for defendant's costs as a condition precedent to the trial of the suit, except it be Section 365 which, however, applies only to cases where the plaintiff resides out of Travancore and is not possessed of sufficient immovable property in Travancore. The object of the provisions contained in Chapter XXI [Of the death, marriage and insolvency of parties] was to prevent the abatement of suits by any occurrences of the sort therein alluded to after the institution of a suit, and to lay down the conditions on which a suit may be proceeded with to trial after such occurrences pendente lite and Section 354 which occurs in that Chapter was not intended to be applied to a pauper plaintiff who was permitted by the Court in the first instance to conduct his suit as a pauper.

A suitor would not be permitted by a Court to file his plaint in forma pauperis unless it is satisfied that his allegations disclose a good cause of action fit to be tried and that he has not the means of paying the requisite Court fees, and it would ordinarily defeat the intention of the law if a pauper were called to find security for the defendant's costs.— 15 T. Held.—The District Judge was right in granting the review.

The Judge was right in cancelling his former order as there was no evidence to show that the plaintiff was not a resident of Travancore and as the poverty of a plaintiff was no reason for calling upon him to furnish security for the costs of the opposite party.

If pauper plaintiffs were, simply because they are paupers, required to furnish security, it would nullify the good intentions of the Government who have made special provision to assist such persons in recovering their just claims.—

prevents him or those claiming under him from suing again on the same cause of action.

A right itself cannot constitute a cause of action. To succeed, every plaintiff must show not only a right but also some other fact rendering the interference of the Court necessary, e. g., some interference with that right by the defendant.

To ascertain the cause of action in a suit, one must look only to the plaint and should not consider the contentions in the written statement at all. The cause of action consists in the whole bundle of facts which the plaintiff has to prove in order to succeed. One of these facts by itself does not constitute the cause of action.

Neither the fact that the acts complained of are similar nor the fact that the reliefs claimed are similar will make the causes of action in two suits the same.

"The cause of action has no relation whatever to the defence which may be set up by the defendant, nor does it depend upon the character of the relief prayed for by the plaintiff. It refers entirely to the grounds set forth in the plaint as the cause of action, or, in other words, to the media upon which the plaintiff asks the Court to arrive at a conclusion in his favour."—

1. There is no provision of law which forbids the original parties to a litigation from conducting their part of the litigation. That the transfer of the rights of the parties pending a litigation does not entitle the transferees to take the place of the transferors on the record is clear from the language of Section 356 which requires that the transferee should obtain special leave of the Court to carry on the proceedings. A transfer of property which is the subject of a pending litigation is not, strictly speaking, an absolute alienation, as its validity depends on the result of the litigation. The transferor cannot, therefore, be said to have lost all his interest in the litigation. If he appeals, the Judge is competent to consider the whole case.— 10 T. L. R., 46.

2. The language of Section 381 of the C. P. C. [=Or. 3. A preliminary decree was passed for partition and an assignee of the decree applied for execution. The decree-holder impugned the assignment as unsupported by consideration and fraudulent. The judgment-debtor also opposed the application. The lower Court held that the assignee was entitled to execute the decree, as the deed of assignment was admitted by the decree-holder and as no question of its validity could be gone into in execution. On appeal:

Held,—The suit terminates not by the preliminary decree but only by the final decree. Till that decree is passed the suit is pending, the preliminary decree constituting only a stage in the trial of the suit. The proceedings that may have to be taken to enable a final decree partitioning the properties by metes and bounds to be passed are therefore proceedings in the suit and not proceedings in execution.

The application of the assignee was not really an application under Order XXI, Rule 14, but one under Order XXII, Rule 10, which empowers the Court in its discretion to allow an assignee pendente lite of the right in suit to intervene and assume the further conduct of the suit.— 19 T. L. J., 5.

4. Where the assignee of a preliminary decree applies for execution of such decree, the application is not one in execution, and hence Order XXI, Rule 14, does not apply. The application comes under Order XXII, Rule 10, which empowers the Court in its discretion to allow an assignee pendente lite of the right in suit to intervene and assume the further conduct of the suit. ## ORDER XXIII.

Withdrawal and Adjustment of Suits.

Withdrawal of suit or abandonment of part of claim.

1. (1) At any time after the institution of a suit, the plaintiff may, as against all or any of the defendants, withdraw his suit or abandon part of his claim.

(2) Where the Court is satisfied—

(a) that a suit must fail by reason of some formal defect, or

(b) that there are other sufficient grounds for allowing the plaintiff to institute a fresh suit for the subject-matter of a suit or part of a claim, it may, on such terms as it thinks fit, grant the plaintiff permission to withdraw from such suit or abandon such part of a claim with liberty to institute a fresh suit in respect of the subject-matter of such suit or such part of a claim.

(3) Where the plaintiff withdraws from a suit, or abandons part of a claim, without the permission referred to in Sub-rule (2), he shall be liable for such costs as the Court may award and shall be precluded from instituting any fresh suit in respect of such subject-matter or such part of the claim.

(4) Nothing in this Rule shall be deemed to authorise the Court to permit one of several plaintiffs to withdraw without the consent of the others.

Or. XXIII, r. 1 [=S. 357=Or. XXIII, r. 1]

I. The corresponding Section of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows:—

"357. Power to allow plaintiff to withdraw with liberty to bring fresh suit.—If, at any time after the institution of the suit, the Court is satisfied on the application of the plaintiff (a) that the suit must fail by reason of some formal defect, or, (b) that there are sufficient grounds for permitting him to withdraw from the suit or to abandon part of his claim with liberty to bring a fresh suit for the subject-matter of the suit or in respect of the part so abandoned, the Court may grant such permission on such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit.

If the plaintiff withdraw from the suit, or abandon part of his claim, without such permission, he shall be liable for such costs as the Court may award, and shall be precluded from bringing a fresh suit for the same matter or in respect of the same part.

Nothing in this Section shall be deemed to authorise the Court to permit one of several plaintiffs to withdraw without the consent of the others."

II. 1. Sub-rule (1) contemplates a withdrawal of the suit and Sub-rule (2) a withdrawal from the suit. If a party desires to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit, he must apply to the Court under Sub-rule (2) for permission so to withdraw. If he does not desire to withdraw from the suit, with liberty to bring a fresh suit, then he can under Sub-rule (1) withdraw the suit of his own motion, and for this, the Court's order is not necessary. 32 Bom., 345.

2. Sub-rule (1) merely affirms the right of a plaintiff to withdraw a suit in whole or in part against all or any of the defendants, and is added to make the rule a complete enunciation of the law relating to the withdrawal of and from suits.

Case Law.

1. The plaintiff has the right to withdraw his suit unconditionally without the sanction of the Court. The only consequence of withdrawing a suit, without the permission of the Court is to debar the plaintiff from bringing a fresh suit with respect to the same cause of action. A formal order of the Court striking the case off the file is not, therefore, legally necessary to put an end to the suit when it is withdrawn, as in the case, unconditionally.—

Ref.—19 T. L. J., 303.

2. The plaintiff, lessor, sued defendant, holder of a registered lease for one year of certain Kandukrishi lands, for arrears of rent for six years and recovery of land, the tenant having held over. As the plaintiff did not produce Government sanction for institution of the suit, the Munsiff dismissed it. Subsequently a fresh suit was brought with Government sanction, which also the Munsiff dismissed under Section 357 C. P. C.

Held.—The want of Government sanction being a formal defect, the dismissal of the suit under Section 357 did not operate as a bar to a fresh suit on the same cause of action. "When a suit has failed through a formal defect, and the merits have not been so pronounced on, as to constitute a legal relation resting on the act of the Court, another suit is not, by the English Law, barred. The rule is consonant to justice and agrees with the law as set forth in the Code of Civil Procedure" (3 Bom., 223).— 24 T. L. R., 127.

3. Where a suit is instituted on behalf of a Malabar Tarwad to cancel an alienation by the Karanavan and to recover property on behalf of the Tarwad, it is not competent for the plaintiffs (some only of the members of the Tarwad) to withdraw the suit when the other members of the Tarwad oppose the withdrawal on the ground that the withdrawal is prejudicial to the interests of the Tarwad.—

Ref.—16 T. L. J., 71.

4. In a suit of 1059, the plaintiff's ancestor as trustee of a Devaswom sued for arrears of rent of 1056 to 1058. That suit was withdrawn without the leave of the Court to institute a fresh suit. In the present suit for arrears of rent of 1076 to 1078 as also for the recovery of the property, it was contended that the present suit brought as it was on the same title as in the former case was barred by the provisions of Section 357.

Held.—(1) The present suit was not for the same matter as the former suit, the cause of action being different.

(2) Even if the cause of action was the same, the subsequent suit was maintainable.

(3) The withdrawal of a suit without leave could not be put on a higher footing than a dismissal of that particular claim.—

5. A suit was withdrawn without permission being obtained to file another as mentioned in the second paragraph of Section 357.

Held.—Orders passed on such withdrawals are not appealable.

Such orders are not decrees.

The special appeal itself could not be treated as a revision petition, as the second appeal was against the decision of the District Court that no appeal lay. Different grounds would be necessary if revision was sought.— 7 T. L. J., 6.

6. The plaintiff as the direct nephew of defendants 1 and 2 sued to set aside a mortgage of Tarwad property granted by them to 3rd defendant on the ground that the mortgage was not supported by consideration and necessity. The defendants denied the status of the plaintiff as a member of the Tarwad and contended that the mortgage was supported by consideration and necessity. The suit was tried on the merits and dismissed by the trial Court. An appeal was preferred to the District Court, and while it was pending, the appellant-plaintiff applied for leave to withdraw from the suit with permission to institute a fresh suit for declaration of his title to the Tarwad of defendants 1 and 2. The application was allowed on the grounds that the appellant's title to the properties was not sufficiently investigated in the suit and that it would be unfair to the appellant that his title to the properties worth a lakh of rupees should be disposed of in a suit which was valued at 700 Fs. The validity of this order was challenged in revision by the respondent-defendant. The objections taken to the order were first, that the Appellate Court had no jurisdiction to make the order under Section 357 inasmuch as the expression "sufficient grounds" occurring in the second Clause of the Section must be analogous to the "formal defects" mentioned in the previous Clause; and secondly, that assuming that it had the jurisdiction, it did not exercise a wise discretion in making the order, in the circumstances of the case.

Held.—As the words "sufficient grounds" occur in a Clause which is independent of the Clause relating to "formal defects", there is nothing in Section 357 C. P. C., to show that the natural meaning of the words "sufficient grounds" is intended to be restricted by the words "formal defects", in the preceding Clause. Therefore, the grounds that are deemed sufficient for granting an application for leave to withdraw from the suit, need not be analogous to the "formal defects" mentioned in Clause (a).

Interpretation ejusdem generis should be resorted to only when the provisions of an enactment are not clear.

The Section requires proof of sufficient grounds before leave to withdraw can be given. Sufficient grounds cannot certainly mean any ground. In determining whether there are sufficient grounds for giving permission to withdraw from the suit, the nature of the grounds alleged and the stage at which the application was made have to be considered. The apprehension that the counter-petitioner may lose his appeal in the Appellate Court would not be a sufficient ground for allowing him to withdraw from the suit.

When a suit has been finally tried on the merits, even the trial Court ought to be very slow in allowing it to be withdrawn with liberty to institute a fresh suit and an Appellate Court should rarely if at all accord such permission.

Section 357 (b) requires the plaintiff who applies for permission to withdraw from a suit, to satisfy the Court that there are sufficient grounds for permitting him to withdraw therefrom. The permission is not to be given as a matter of course. The Court ought to make a serious enquiry as to whether there exist sufficient grounds for giving leave to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with permission to re-agitate the same matter.— 40 T. L. R., 56

7. The provisions of Order XXIII, Rule 1, draw a clear distinction between withdrawal of suits and abandonment of part of claim and withdrawals from suits and abandonment of claims or part thereof with liberty to bring fresh suits.

The permission of the Court referred to in Sub-Rule (2) of Rule 2 has not been made a condition precedent to the granting of the withdrawal of the plaintiff's suit against all or any of the defendants or abandonment of his claim against them. Under Sub-Rule 1, the plaintiff is enabled to do so irrespective of the Court's sanction. It is only in cases where such withdrawal or abandonment is proposed to be made with a reservation to re-agitate the same matter in a subsequent suit that leave of the Court is made essential and Sub-Rule (2) exonerates the cases in which such permission should be granted.

Thus, under Sub-Rule (2) of Rule 1 of Order XXIII, the plaintiff is competent without the leave of the Court to withdraw his suit as against all or any of the defendants or abandon the whole or part of the claim against them. The inconvenience that the defendants concerned, affected by such withdrawal, would be subject to, will have to be taken into account in the order relating to costs.

Even when the matter has been decided in the original Court and the matter is pending in appeal, the Appellate Court has the right to exercise the powers conferred on the original Courts under Rule 1 of Order XXIII. The circumstance that the plaintiff is the respondent in the Appellate Court cannot affect the above right.

Appeals are in essence only continuations of the proceedings in the trial Courts. The appeal must be deemed to be a stage of the suit within the meaning of the Rule, and the plaintiff in the suit allowed to make applications under the various Sub-rules in this Rule. Under Section 85, Clause (2), the Appellate Court is invested with the same powers and declared competent to perform as nearly as may be, the same duties as are conferred or imposed by the Code on Courts of original jurisdiction in respect of suits instituted therein.

It is doubtful whether, in the face of the express provisions of Sub-Rule (3) of Rule 1, a suit can be taken to have terminated ipso facto on the presentation of an application for withdrawal now.— 19 T. L. J., 303.

Ref.—19 T. L. J., 1024.

8. Both under Section 357 of the old Code and under Order XXIII, Rule 1, the plaintiff has a right to withdraw his suit with or without a prayer for permission to file a fresh suit upon the same cause of action. There is no warrant for holding that there could be no withdrawal unless coupled with an application to file a fresh suit. The Sections clearly show that the Legislature itself recognised withdrawals by the plaintiff without a prayer for such leave.

An order striking off the suit on an application for withdrawal under Order XXIII, Rule 1 or Section 357 without permission to file a fresh suit cannot be construed as a refusal of the claim made in the plaint and cannot operate as res judicata with respect to a subsequent action in which the identical question comes up for determination, by applying the provisions of Explanation V of Section 10. There could not be a hearing and determination of any issue, question or matter within the meaning of Section 10, and the application of the principle of constructive res judicata embodied in Explanation V cannot be considered justifiable.

Section 357 or Order XXIII, Rule 1, only provides that withdrawal without leave could operate as a bar to the same plaintiff filing a fresh suit upon the identical cause of action.— 19 T. L. J., 673.

Limitation law not affected by first suit.

2. In any fresh suit instituted on permission granted under the last preceding Rule, the plaintiff shall be bound by the law of limitation in the same manner as if the first suit had not been instituted.

Compromise of suit.

3. Where it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that a suit has been adjusted wholly or in part by any lawful agreement or compromise, or where the defendant satisfies the plaintiff in respect of the whole or any part of the subject-matter of the suit, the Court shall order such agreement, compromise or satisfaction to be recorded, and shall pass a decree in accordance therewith so far as it relates to the suit.

I. The corresponding Section of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows :—

"359. Compromise of suits.—If a suit be adjusted wholly or in part by any lawful agreement or compromise, or if the defendant satisfy the plaintiff in respect to the whole or any part of the matter of the suit, such agreement, compromise or satisfaction shall be recorded, and the Court shall pass a decree in accordance therewith so far as it relates to the suit, and such decree shall be final, so far as relates to so much of the subject-matter of the suit as is dealt with by the agreement, compromise or satisfaction."

II. In regard to Rule 3, the Notes on Clauses say :—

"An express provision is made for passing an order to record an adjustment, so that in cases of dispute as to the fact or nature of an adjustment, the matter may be taken in appeal. At present, a 'consent' decree is allowed by judicial decisions to be taken in appeal, if, in fact, there was no consent. An appeal against a 'consent' decree is anomalous."

See Section 76 Supra.

III. The Indian Special Committee observed:—"The Committee have considered it expedient to alter the language of Section 375 so as to recognise the powers of a Court to enquire into and to record a disputed compromise."

IV. It is advisable that Courts when drawing up decrees on compromises take care merely to record those provisions of the compromise which have nothing to do with the litigation and to pass a definite clearly worded decree in respect of the questions in dispute (Per Sadasiva Iyer, C. J.).— 3 S. D., 173.

Case Law.

1. The suit was to enforce the terms of a Razinamah filed in a previous suit whereunder the parties therein came to certain terms in respect of certain immovable property (the subject-matter of that litigation) and withdrew from the suit.

Held,—(1) As the Razinamah related to the transfer of immovable property and no decree was passed thereupon, it was inadmissible in evidence unless registered.

[The parties who executed it did not ask the Court to pass a decree on it, but withdrew from the suit and prayed the Court to strike it off its file, so that the Razinamah was allowed to stand as a transaction separate from the decree, giving the parties to it a right to enforce its conditions by a separate suit. The Razinamah ought therefore to have been registered before the present suit was instituted.]

(2) The admission of a document requiring registration but not registered may entitle a party to a decree, though the document be not produced in evidence; but in such cases, the admission must leave nothing to be proved aliunde in respect of the material parts of the document.

(3) The suit being based on an executed agreement, the parties could not in appeal be allowed to convert it into an executory contract.— 11 T. L. R., 99.

2. In a suit for recovery of land, the parties agreed to abide by oath, but instead of carrying out the oath agreement, they came to compromise in the presence of the commissioner deputed to see the oath taken. The terms of the agreement of compromise were noted down by the commissioner and the parties signed the paper. This agreement was produced in Court; but no decree was passed on it, the suit having been dismissed. The plaintiff in that suit then sued to enforce the terms of the agreement of compromise.

Held.—(1) The agreement relating as it did to immovable property was compulsorily registrable under Section 9 of the Registration Regulation, and being unregistered, was inadmissible in evidence under Section 31 of the same Regulation.

(2) The suit being on a written agreement, could not be treated as one based on a verbal agreement.

The suit was consequently unsustainable. 11 T. L. R., 200.

3. The Legislature appears to have used the words 'recorded' and 'filed' in the Civil Procedure Code. These words appear to mean simply that the papers may be placed on the record. The wording of Section 359 shows that after a petition of compromise is recorded the Court shall pass a decree in terms of it. The use of the expression 'recorded' in this Section seems to show that it does not signify any judicial order giving effect to the compromise. Such order has to follow after the petition is recorded.— 23 T. L. R., 142.

4. When a lawful compromise is effected by the parties, the Court is bound to pass a decree in accordance therewith. Section 359 of the Code is imperative and the Court has no option or discretion in the matter.— 1 S. D., 292.

5. A prior suit for redemption was brought by the plaintiffs against the defendants, and the parties compromised the case by putting in a razi petition which stated, inter alia, that the defendants had paid to the plaintiffs a sum of 425 Fanams in ready cash, that for that sum and the prior mortgage amount of 2,000 Fanams, the defendants were to be given a mortgage over the properties and that a new mortgage deed embodying these terms was soon to be executed. In pursuance of the compromise petition, the suit was struck off the file. The new mortgage deed contemplated by the petition was, however, not executed. The plaintiffs on the strength of the compromise petition brought the suit for redemption of the properties. The defendants contended that the suit was premature inasmuch as the compromise petition conferred on them a right to hold for 12 years from the date of the petition.

The District Munsiff dismissed the suit holding that the compromise petition, being unregistered, was inadmissible in evidence, that the plaintiffs having withdrawn the former suit by the compromise petition, Section 357 [= Or. XXIII, r. 1], para 2, was a bar to the suit, that the compromise petition, according to its correct interpretation, conferred on the defendants a Kuzhikanom right for a period of 12 years and hence the suit was premature.

Held (by a Division Bench—Krishnan Nair, C. J., and Hunt, J.).—(1) The compromise petition was not compulsorily registrable as it did not create any right in immovable property, but created only a right to obtain another document which would create a right in immovable property, and as such it fell within Exception 4 to Section 10 of the Registration Regulation.

Again, the provisions of the Registration Regulation do not apply to proper judicial proceedings whether consisting of pleadings filed by parties or orders made by the Court. A compromise petition is a pleading filed by the parties and can be sued on although not registered.

(2) The petition of compromise was not a withdrawal petition, but a compromise petition under Section 359. There was no question of any bar to the present suit by reason of the provisions of Section 357.

(3) The provision in the compromise petition that the defendants would be paid at the time of redemption the value of improvements for the trees that would be planted after the date of the razi made it a Kuzhikkanom document and conferred on the defendants a right to hold for 12 years from the date of the compromise petition.—

6. In a suit for recovery of arrears of salary, the parties filed a compromise petition stating that the suit had been adjusted. Subsequently the plaintiff filed a petition objecting to the passing of a decree on the terms of the compromise stating that he had been deceived by the defendant into signing the compromise petition. The lower Court on receipt of the petition ordered that the case be proceeded with on the merits and eventually gave a decree for plaintiff.

Held.—The lower Court was bound to satisfy itself as to whether there had been an adjustment of the suit by a lawful agreement or compromise before calling upon the parties to adduce evidence on the merits of the case. If there had been such adjustment, the Court was bound to pass a decree in accordance therewith as stated in Section 359 of the Civil Procedure Code. The case should have been disposed of on the merits only if no such lawful adjustment was found to have taken place.—

7. All terms which form the consideration for the adjustment of the matter in dispute, whether they form part of the subject-matter of the suit or not, do become related to the suit and can be embodied in the decree.

A compromise entered into by a Karanavan in his representative capacity and embodied in a decree is binding on all the members of his Tarwad, except where it is proved to have been obtained by fraud. That what he did was prejudicial to the Tarwad may be a ground for getting the compromise set aside, but is insufficient to warrant the inference that he did not act on behalf of the Tarwad.—

8. Where the parties to a suit enter into a compromise consisting of terms which partly relate to matters lying outside the scope of the controversy as disclosed by their allegations and counter-allegations, such compromise, if submitted to the Judge for consideration and incorporation is deemed appropriate in the decree, does not require registration, whether all its terms are so incorporated or whether they are merely referred to in the decree (F. B.).—

9. A compromise agreement provided (1) that the plaintiff should be entitled to realise from the defendant, the plaint amount with interest thereon at the rate of 9 annas per mensem on Rs. 100 from the date of the plaint, (2) that the plaintiff should have the right to take out execution for the said amount only if the defendant failed to pay it before the 30th Kumbhom 1090 and (3) that should the defendant make default the plaintiff should have the option to realise by execution the plaint amount with interest thereon from the date of plaint at the rate of 12 per cent. per year. The above agreement was set out in the decree which then proceeded to order as follows:—"Decreed as per the above razi."

Held.—As the District Judge could not have legally allowed more than the rate in the document under Section 7 of Regulation I of 1010, it cannot be presumed that the Court has really done what it cannot have legally done. It cannot therefore be said that the decree really embodied the alternative provision for the higher rate of interest.— 36 T. L. R., 183 (= 10 T. L. J., 181).

10. A judgment by consent can operate as res judicata. In order that a decree based on a compromise may operate as res judicata, the terms of the compromise have to be embodied in the decree or made the basis of such decree.

There is nothing in Section 359, C. P. C., to restrict the relief granted by the compromise to what is prayed for in the plaint. The compromise is binding not only in respect of the property involved in the suit but it is binding and valid with reference to all the properties dealt with in the compromise and the decree which followed it.—
14 T. L. J., 488.

11. At the hearing of a suit, the parties filed a compromise petition in Court and asked for a decree in terms of the compromise. The Court, in decreeing the suit accordingly made a modification by cutting down the future interest to six per cent. per annum instead of allowing it at twelve per cent. as agreed to in the petition of compromise. On an appeal preferred by the plaintiff against this portion of the decree:

Held.—The decree of the lower Court in so far as it was objected to could not be supported.

Under Section 359, the Court has (in a case like this) first of all to enquire whether the suit is adjusted in whole or in part by any lawful agreement or compromise. If it finds that the whole suit or a portion thereof has not been adjusted by a lawful agreement or compromise, it would be the Court's duty to refuse to proceed upon the compromise petition. But if it finds that the agreement or compromise set up is lawful, the Court is bound under the Section to record the agreement or compromise and pass a decree thereon, in so far as it relates to the suit. To that extent the Section is peremptory, and leaves no discretion to the Court.

After accepting the compromise as a lawful adjustment of the suit in whole or in part, it is not open to the Court to introduce into the decree that is passed thereon modifications based on its own view of the justice of the case. To permit the Court to do so would be virtually to force upon the parties a new arrangement made by the Court in substitution for the one that the parties have entered into for themselves, and for this there is no justification either on principle or on the terms in which the Section is enacted.

Probably the rate of future interest was interfered with under the impression that the Court was at liberty to reduce it by virtue of the discretion vested in it under Section 204 of the Code [new Section 31]. But the language of Section 359 lends no countenance to the view that it should be read subject to Section 204. Such a view would also defeat the object which the Legislature had in view in enacting the Section, which was to enable parties to adjust their own differences without the help of the Court, subject to certain safeguards which the Legislature had enacted in the Section itself. Subject to such safeguards, the Section makes the agreement of the parties decisive as regards the terms on which the decree should be passed, and no interference by the Court with the agreement is contemplated.—

Ref.—17 T. L. J., 295.

12. A compromise decree provided that the defendant should pay the plaintiff on or before 30-1-1100, Fs. 530 with interest at 12 per cent. from date of plaint, failing which the plaintiff was to have the right to realise in execution the plaint amount with interest and costs. The defendant did not make the payment on or before 30-1-1100 ; but on 31-1-1100 deposited in Court Fs. 530 without the stipulated interest. The plaintiff thereupon applied in execution for the recovery of the plaint amount as per the terms of the compromise decree. It was contended for the defendant that the alternative provision in the compromise decree was by way of penalty and should be relieved against.

Held.—In execution of the decree, the Court had no jurisdiction to relieve against the provisions of the decree and the decree-holder was entitled to the larger sum mentioned in the decree and to realise it in execution.

No Court has power to change the terms of a compromise and introduce into the decree modifications based on its own view of the justice of the case. Much less has the Court power to vary the terms of the agreement between the parties after the same has been accepted by the Court and made the basis of the decree.—

Rel.—19 T. L. J., 752.

13. The appeals preferred were against the orders of the lower Court in two applications under the Guardians and Wards Regulation.

The contention of the appellant, based on Section 105, that when the parties filed the compromise petition, the Court was bound to accept it and pass an order in accordance with it was unsustainable.

The lower Court was right in not accepting the compromise petition blindly and in considering for itself whether it contained, taken as a whole, the best arrangement that could be made for the management of the minor's affairs. No doubt proceedings under the Guardian and Wards Regulation are among those to which the Civil Procedure Code is made applicable by Section 105 of the Code. But that does not mean that every provision in the Code is, without any discrimination, to be applied to them. The Section itself provides a safeguard in the qualification "as far as it can be made applicable". Whenever any particular provision is sought to be applied, it will have to be determined whether, having regard to the nature of the proceedings, it is a provision that can with advantage be applied. If the provision, for instance, would be inconsistent with the nature and purpose of the proceedings, then certainly it is not intended to apply to them and the Courts are bound to refuse to apply it. The proceedings under the Guardian and Wards Regulation, at whosesoever instance they may be started, are intended to secure the interests of the minor. The other persons who may figure as petitioners or counter-petitioners in the proceedings have no interest in them apart from the minor's interest. In other words, those proceedings have not for any part of their object the adjudication of any private rights of such parties. There is no occasion therefore for the parties to those proceedings to adjust their disputes, relieve the Court of its duty to adjudicate upon them and call upon it merely to record such adjustment. The analogy of a compromise of their disputes by the parties to a suit breaks down when applied to proceedings under the Guardian and Wards Regulation. It is the Court's duty to make proper arrangements for the conduct of the affairs of the minor, and that duty it cannot abdicate or delegate to others. A compromise may be dealt with as an arrangement suggested by the parties, as, in their opinion, fitted to serve the interests of the minors best. The Court may consider it and if it finds that that is the best arrangement that can be made in the interests of the minor, it may adopt the arrangement and pass an order accordingly.

(2) The contention of the appellant that the Court should either have accepted or rejected the compromise petition in toto had to prevail. The Court may, independently of the compromise, arrive at some of the arrangements agreed to by the parties to the compromise. But it cannot accept the compromise as such in part and repudiate the rest of it. In other words, the Court, if it found the compromise as such not acceptable in the interests of the minor, should have ignored it and proceeded upon its enquiry into the matter, as if no such compromise had come to its notice and passed its orders on the result of that enquiry.—

18 T. L. J., 359.

14. Under Order XXIII, Rule 3, the Court has to enquire whether an agreement of compromise sought to be recorded is lawful and whether the same has, as a matter of fact, been consented to by the parties. If the compromise has been found to have been lawfully entered into by them, the Court will have to record the compromise, and pass a decree in terms thereof. In recording the compromise, the Court has necessarily to enquire into the question whether the same has been entered into by the parties, and no adjustment could be permitted without the determination of the question.

Where the parties are at issue as regards certain terms of the adjustment, though the adjustment itself is admitted, the Court cannot strike off the suit and direct the terms on which the parties are at dispute to be made the subject-matter of a separate suit.

A striking off of the suit under Section 359 (old) and under Order XXIII, Rule 3, would be permissible only after a decision of the question of the nature of the adjustment upon which the parties are at issue.

Section 43 of Regulation II of 1065 applies to joinder of causes of action in the plaint and not cases of this nature.—

After the agreement has been accepted by the Court, it shall not be competent to any of the parties to withdraw therefrom without the leave of the Court. This Rule has no counterpart in the British Indian Code, and it reproduces Section 360 of Regulation II of 1065. The Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the 1065 Bill explained the necessity for the provision thus:—"As there is no law in Travancore, as in British India, specially providing for disposal of suits by oaths of the parties (see Indian Oaths' Act), it is thought desirable to make the necessary provision by adding a Section. The Section, as drafted, is strictly in conformity with the existing practice of the Courts founded upon the Regulations of 1010."—

3. The suit which was on a pro-note was defended on behalf of the defendant by a Muktear who was empowered under the deed to sue for and recover moneys due to his principal. He and plaintiff agreed to a settlement by oath which, however, did no take place, as the day first fixed was found to be unsuitable, and as afterwards the second Muktear took exception to the first Muktear's power to enter into oath agreement. The lower Court went into the merits of the case and dismissed the suit.

It was argued in appeal that the first Muktear had power, and the lower Court should have dealt with the case under Section 360, C. P. C.

A Muktear has no authority to enter into an oath agreement on behalf of his principal, if the deed does not expressly authorise the agent to enter into compromises or oath agreements. Under Section 188 of the Contract Act, the power of an agent who has authority to do an act is limited to the doing of every lawful thing which is necessary to do such act. It cannot be said with any reason that entering into an agreement for oath was necessary for carrying out the power given to the agent to sue for and recovering moneys due, to his principal.— 2 S. 4. The parties filed an oath agreement before the lower Appellate Court to settle the matters in dispute between them by oath to be taken by the plaintiff and to be seen by the defendant. The agreement contained a clause to the effect that in case the oath fell through owing to the default of neither party, they would go for the oath a second time. The oath fell through owing to no default of either party. The Court took a statement from the Vakils on both sides to the effect that they had no objection to the Court's disposing of the case on the merits.

Held.—As the Vakils had no special authorization to give such a statement, in derogation of the provision for a repetition of the oath contained in the agreement of the parties themselves, the oath should be administered a second time.

It was clear that the parties have not withdrawn from, or refused to perform the oath agreement, in which case alone, the Court has the power to decide the case against him or pass such order as it deems fit under Section 360. It would be against public policy to allow solemn agreements for oath to be lightly set aside for no reason whatever. The policy of Section 360 and the spirit of the ruling in 1 T. L. R., 110 clearly require the Court to insist on the parties acting up to such agreements.—

(c) A owes B Rs. 100, and is willing to pay him that sum without suit. B claims Rs. 150 and sues A for that amount. On the plaint being filed A pays Rs. 100 into Court and disputes only his liability to pay the remaining Rs. 50. B accepts the Rs. 100 in full satisfaction of his claim. The Court should order him to pay A's costs.

ORDER XXV.

Security for Costs.

When security for costs may be required from plaintiff.

1. (1) Where, at any stage of a suit, it appears to the Court that a sole plaintiff is, or (when there are more plaintiffs than one) that all the plaintiffs are, residing out of Travancore, and that such plaintiff does not, or that no one of such plaintiffs does, possess any sufficient immovable property within Travancore other than the property in suit, the Court may, either of its own motion or on the application of any defendant, order the plaintiff or plaintiffs, within a time fixed by it, to give security for the payment of all costs incurred and likely to be incurred by any defendant.

Residence out of Travancore.

(2) Whoever leaves Travancore under such circumstances as to afford reasonable probability that he will not be forthcoming whenever he may be called upon to pay costs shall be deemed to be residing out of Travancore within the meaning of Sub-rule (1).

I. Section 365 of the old Regulation which corresponds to Sub-Rule (1) of Rule 1 was as follows :—

"365. When security for costs may be required from plaintiff at any stage of suit. —If, at the institution or at any subsequent stage of a suit, it appears to the Court that a sole plaintiff is, or (when there are more plaintiffs than one) that all the plaintiffs are, residing out of Travancore, and that such plaintiff does not, or that no one of such plaintiffs does, possess any sufficient immovable property within Travancore independent of the property in suit, the Court may, either of its own motion or on the application of any defendant, order the plaintiff or plaintiffs, within a time to be fixed by the order, to give security for the payment of all costs incurred and likely to be incurred by any defendant."

II. Sub-Rule (2) is the same as Section 367 of the old Regulation.

III. In the British Indian Code, there is also the following Sub-Rule :—"(3) On the application of any defendant in a suit for the payment of money, in which the plaintiff is a woman, the Court may at any stage of the suit make a like order if it is satisfied that such plaintiff does not possess any sufficient immovable property within British India."

A provision similar to the above was inserted in the original Bill ; and the Notes on Clauses said :—

"This is a new provision enabling the trial Court to get security for costs in the case of a female plaintiff, when she is not possessed of sufficient immovable properties in Travancore. As a woman is exempt from arrest, such a provision is desirable."

The Select Committee deleted this Sub-Rule.

IV. The object of the Rule is to provide for the protection of defendants in cases where, in the event of success, they may have difficulty in realising their costs from

Effect of failure to urnish security.

2. (1) In the event of such security not being furnished within the time fixed, the Court shall make an order dismissing the suit unless the plaintiff or plaintiffs are permitted to withdraw therefrom.

(2) Where a suit is dismissed under this Rule, the plaintiff may apply for an order to set the dismissal aside, and, if it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from furnishing the security within the time allowed, the Court shall set aside the dismissal upon such terms as to security, costs or otherwise as it thinks fit, and shall appoint a day for proceeding with the suit.

(3) The dismissal shall not be set aside unless notice of such application has been served on the defendant.

I. "The existing provision that an application under the corresponding Section should be made within 30 days of the dismissal is omitted. The time so allowed is far too short to afford any relief, and the omission of such provision would give an applicant three years' time to make his application."— Notes on Clauses,

II. 1. The first paragraph of the old Section corresponding to Sub-Rule (1) was:—"In the event of such security......within the time so fixed, the Court shall dismiss the suit......to withdraw therefrom under the provisions of Section 357." [Section 357=Or. XXIII, r. 1.]

2. In Sub-Rule (2) corresponding to the second Paragraph of Section 366, the word "security" before the words "costs or otherwise," is an addition.

3. The third Paragraph of the old Section 366 was as follows:—"The dismissal shall not be set aside unless the plaintiff has served the defendant with notice in writing of his application."

4. Section 366 had also the following last Paragraph:—

"The provisions of this Code and of the Limitation Regulation with respect to an application for an order under Section 98, shall, so far as they can be made applicable, apply to an application for an order and to an order for setting aside a dismissal under this Section."

Commissions.

Commissions to examine witnesses.

Cases in which Court may issue commission to examine witness.

2. An order for the issue of a commission for the examination of a witness may be made by the Court either of its own motion or on the application, supported by affidavit or otherwise, of any party to the suit or of the witness to be examined.

Where witness resides within Court's jurisdiction.

3 A commission for the examination of a person who resides within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the same may be issued to any person whom the Court thinks fit to execute it.

Persons for whose examination commission may issue.

(3) The Court on issuing any commission under this Rule shall direct whether the commission shall be returned to itself or to any subordinate Court.

Commission or request to examine witness not within Travancore.

any pleader or other person.........may appoint". These words were in the Indian Code of 1882.

II. For Form of commission to examine absent witness, see Appendix I, Form No 7.

Case Law.

(1) The examination on commission under Order XXVI, Rule 4, may be by interrogatories or otherwise. The issue of a commission for the examination of a witness living beyond the limits fixed by law is a matter of right and not within the discretion of the Court. The word "may" occurring in the Section means "is given authority to." The examination by commission under Rule 4 would necessarily be in one of the forms recognised by law and an indication of how such examination should be conducted is contained in Rule 1. It is improper to construe the examination contemplated in Rule 4 as restricting to the mode thereof in the absence of words in the Rule itself warranting such a restriction.

Examination of witnesses on commission may be on open commission as the party may desire. Even if interrogatories are filed, cross-interrogatories will have to be called for and in the light of the same supplementary interrogatories will have to be required to be filed moving for the examination of the witness concerned. The Court may, in appropriate cases, supplement the examination by allowing the witness to be asked further questions by the parties or their pleaders treating the examination as open commission to that extent. These matters have to be decided by the Court and the wishes of the parties in the matter could not be interfered with by the Court unless the grant of the application is considered to result in an abuse of the process of the Court.

6. Every Court receiving a commission for the examination of any person shall examine him or cause him to be examined pursuant thereto.

Court to examine witness pursuant to commission.

7. Where a commission has been duly executed, it shall be returned, together with the evidence taken under it, to the Court from which it was issued, unless the order for issuing the commission has otherwise directed, in which case, the commission shall be returned in terms of such order; and the commission and the return thereto and the evidence taken under it shall (subject to the provisions of the next following Rule) form part of the record of the suit.

Return of commission with depositions of witnesses.

8. Evidence taken under a commission shall not be read as evidence in the suit without the consent of the party against whom the same is offered, unless—

When depositions may be read in evidence.

(a) the person who gave the evidence is beyond the jurisdiction of the Court, or dead or unable from sickness or infirmity to attend to be personally examined, or exempted from personal appearance in Court, or is a civil or military officer of the Government who cannot, in the opinion of the Court, attend without detriment to the public service, or

Commissions for local investigations.

Commissions to make local investigations.

9. In any suit in which the Court deems a local investigation to be requisite or proper for the purpose of elucidating any matter in dispute or of ascertaining the market-value of any property, or the amount of any mesne profits or damages or annual net profits, the Court may issue a commission to such person as it thinks fit, directing him to make such investigation and to report thereon to the Court :

Provided that, where the Government have made Rules as to the persons to whom such commission shall be issued, the Court shall be bound by such Rules.

In Clause (a) of Section 375 of Regulation II of 1065, the words "or is a civil or military officer.........to the public service" did not occur.

Or. XXVI, r. 9 [= S. 377 = Or. XXVI, r. 9]

I. In the corresponding Section of Regulation II of 1065, the words "or proceeding" occurred after the words "In any suit" at the beginning of the Section: and the words "and the same cannot be conveniently conducted by the Judge in person;" occurred after the words "annual net profits." Those words have been deleted in the amending provision on grounds of expediency.— 17 T. L. J., 345.

See Section 105 Supra.

II. The Proviso is new.

III. See Rule 17 of Order XVIII regarding the power of a Judge to make a local investigation.

IV. For Form of Commission for local investigation, see Appendix I, Form No. 9.

Case Law.

1. The Zillah Judge was wrong in law in rejecting as inadmissible the report of the commissioner deputed to make a local enquiry. In such cases, the report of a competent and trustworthy commissioner, embodying the result of his local investigation would, ordinarily, be the best material from which the questions as to the amount of pattom, &c., of a land, can be satisfactorily determined by a Court acquainted with local usage and customs.— 3 T. L. R., 4.

2. The report of a commissioner is not in itself legal evidence. It must, as other documents, be proved by independent evidence.— 3 T. L. R., 27.

3. The Civil Procedure Code does not recognise Thadasthars. Their duty is simply to assist the commissioner appointed by the Court to value properties, and neither the Court nor the commissioner is bound to accept their opinions.— 14 T. L. R., 93.

4. An order to issue a fresh commission is only an interlocutory order, and so no appeal lies against it.— 2 S. D., 69.

5. A party's mere asking for the issue of another commission, without any attempt to show any flaw in the report already submitted, would not justify the Court in protracting the case by issuing another commission.— 2 S. D., 135.

6. When a commissioner appointed for a local investigation makes a report it is not competent for a Court, unless it annuls the proceedings of the first enquiry to depute a second commissioner for the same purpose. "Ordinarily when the report of a commissioner is objected to, the Court should hear the objections in open Court and decide with the aid of such evidence as it may take whether valuation should be varied and if so in what direction. There may be cases in which the commissioner had so totally misconceived duties so as to render his report and valuation useless as a basis for a decision. In such cases, no doubt a new commissioner may be appointed. This would mean that the old report and valuation were superseded. But to regard the reports and valuation of the three commissioners as available data from which the option of the District Munsiff to choose any one of them is to be exercised is opposed to every principle governing Courts in such matters. It means that the Court abdicates its function of deciding the matter on hearing the objection and reserves to itself the privilege of selecting one of the reports as its decision. It certainly encourages a haphazard and careless selection of commissioners. It subjects parties to unnecessary and avoidable expense and encumbers the records with useless papers. * The filing of objections to a report is no ground for appointing another commissioner, and in all cases where a second commissioner is appointed to do the same work, the reason for adapting such a course must be recorded in writing to enable the appellate Court to see whether the judicial discretion has been properly exercised." (45 Mad., 79). The issue of fresh commissions without recording the reasons for the same, as pointed out above, must be characterised as illegal.— 42 T. L. R., 429 (=16 T. L. J., 288).

7. Article 153 of the Civil Courts Guide does not prohibit the disposal of objections to commissioner's report along with other matters involved in the suit or appeal by its final judgment in appropriate cases.— 17 T. L. J., 688.

8. The plaintiff whose application for the issue of a commission to assess the waste committed by the mortgagee on the property had been rejected on his failure to deposit the commissioner's batta, is not estopped from making any further application for the same purpose. Every application of the kind has to be granted or rejected on its own merits, and there is no estoppel arising from the dismissal of a prior application of a similar nature.— 43 T. L. R., 28.

9. Though it was conceded by either side that inspection was held by the Munsiff on some date, there was nothing on record to show that any inspection was held nor any notes of inspection recorded by the Munsiff.

Held.—Considering the slips and mistakes that are liable to be committed during the inspection by incomplete observation or other similar defects which could not be pointed out to the presiding Officer conducting such inspection in the absence of a record made by him, the commitment to writing of whatever facts noticed by him during the visit is imperative and should be insisted on.

The object of local investigation that could be made by the presiding Officer is for understanding the evidence adduced

I. The first Para of Section 381 of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows:—

"381. Commission to make partition of non-revenue paying immovable property.—In any suit in which the partition of immovable property appears to the Court to be necessary, the Court, after ascertaining the several parties interested in such property and their several rights therein, may issue a commission to such persons as it thinks fit to make a partition according to such rights."

See under next Rule.

Or. XXVI, r. 14 [=S. 381, Paras 2-4 =Or. XXVI. r. 14]

I. Paras 2 and 3 of Section 381 of the old Regulation, which correspond to Sub-Rules (1) to (3) were as follow:—

Procedure of commissioners.—The commissioners shall ascertain and inspect the property, and shall divide the same into as many shares as may be directed by the order under which the commission issues, and shall allot such shares to the parties, and may, if authorized thereto by the said order, award sums to be paid for the purpose of equalizing the value of the shares.

The commissioners shall then prepare and sign a report, or (if they cannot agree) separate reports, appointing the share of each party, and distinguishing each share (if so directed by the said order) by metes and bounds. Such report or reports shall be annexed to the commission and transmitted to the Court; and the Court, after hearing any objections which the parties may make to the report or reports, shall either quash the same and issue a new commission, or (where the commissioners agree in their report) pass a decree in accordance therewith."

Under the old Section, the Court must either accept or reject in toto the report of the commissioner. It had no power to modify the report.

II. Sub-Rule (4) does not find a place in the British Indian Code. It corresponds to Para 4 of the old Section 381. The old Para was as follows:—

"If it appears to the Court that the property, by reason of its nature or of the number of the parties interested therein, or of any other circumstance, cannot conveniently be divided, the Court may, if it thinks fit, on the request of any of the parties interested and notwithstanding the dissent of any others of them, pass a decree for the sale of the property and for the distribution of the proceeds among the parties according to their respective rights in the property."

In the Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the Bill which became Regulation II of 1065, it was stated that the "Clause was found necessary in regard to the peculiar tenures of landed property in this country."— S. O & R., Para 58.

Case Law.

1. The proceedings contemplated in Section 381 of the Civil Procedure Code are proceedings in a suit before the passing of the decree in order to enable the Court in that suit to determine exactly the terms of that decree.

Where, in execution of a decree for partition of immovable properties, the District Judge ordered their sale and the division of the sale proceeds on account of the inconvenience that would be caused by the division of the properties themselves:

Held.—The objection regarding the inconvenience should have been taken before the passing of the decree. The District Judge was wrong in ordering the sale of the properties. A partition should be made according to the terms of the decree.—

Diss.—15 T. L. J., 518.

2. Notice calling for objections to a commissioner's report about partition of immovable properties under Section 381 should be personally served on the opposite party.

The alienations made by parties since the partition by the commissioner and prior to the confirmation of the commissioner's report are alienations pendente lite and are subject to the decree or order to be eventually passed.— 16 T. L. R., 29.

3. An order to issue a fresh commission is only an interlocutory order, and no appeal lies against it.— 2 S. D., 69.

4. In partition suits, the first decree is only a preliminary decree, and the final decree is the decree passed under Section 381, Para 4, of the C. P. C.—
1 T. L. J., 249.

Ref.— 11 T. L. J., 24.
Not Fol.—18 T. L. J., 515.

5. Where two commissioners were appointed by the Court to make a partition of properties, and, on the death of one of the commissioners, the survivor effected the partition and submitted a report.

Held.—One of the commissioners was by himself incompetent to proceed with the execution of the order issued to two, and therefore, the report made by one alone of the commissioners after the death of the other was invalid and could not be acted upon.— 3 T. L. J., 73.

6. The question whether it is inconvenient to divide the joint family property by metes and bounds can be ascertained only when proceedings are taken for partition of the property under Section 381, C. P. C. If the Court should then find that it is inconvenient to divide the property, it should proceed as directed in the last paragraph of Section 381.— 15 T. L. J., 306.

7. The house, the subject-matter of dispute in the appeal was directed by a decree for partition to be sold, and the proceeds to be distributed among the parties according to their shares. It was under Section 381 that the Court directed the sale. Section 307-A [ = Or. XXI, r. 86 ] did not apply to the case.

Expenses of Commission to be paid into Court.

15. Before issuing any commission under this Order, the Court may order such sum (if any) as it thinks reasonable for the expenses of the commission to be, within a time to be fixed, paid into Court by the party at whose instance or for whose benefit the commission is issued Powers of Commissioners.

16. Any Commissioner appointed under this Order may, unless otherwise directed by the order of appointment,—

(a) examine the parties themselves and any witness whom they or any of them may produce, and any other person whom the Commissioner thinks proper to call upon to give evidence in the matter referred to him ;

(b) call for and examine documents and other things relevant to the subject of inquiry ;

(c) at any reasonable time enter upon or into any land or building mentioned in the order.

Attendance and examination of witnesses before Commissioner.

17. (1) The provisions of this Code relating to the summoning, attendance and examination of witnesses, and to the remuneration of, and penalties to be imposed upon, witnesses, shall apply to persons required to give evidence or to produce documents under this Order, whether the commission in execution of which they are so required has been issued by a Court situate within or by a Court situate beyond the limits of Travancore, and for the purposes of this Rule the Commissioner shall be deemed to be a Civil Court.

It is therefore as part of the preliminary decree for partition that the house was sold, and not in execution of an ordinary decree for money. Proceedings under Section 381, for effecting a partition are proceedings in the suit itself and not proceedings in execution of a decree.

An application for the appointment of a commissioner under Section 381 is not a matter coming within the scope of Section 238 [new Section 40], and no appeal lay from an order on such an application.—

(2) A Commissioner may apply to any Court (not being the High Court) within the local limits of whose jurisdiction a witness resides for the issue of any process which he may find it necessary to issue to or against such witness, and such Court may, in its discretion, issue such process as it considers reasonable and proper.

(3) When the Commissioner is not a judge of a Civil Court, he shall not be competent to impose penalties; but such penalties may be imposed on the application of such Commissioner by the Court which issued the commission.

Parties to appear before Commissioner.

18. (1) Where a commission is issued under this Order, the Court shall direct that the parties to the suit shall appear before the Commissioner in person or by their agents or pleaders.

(2) Where all or any of the parties do not so appear, the Commissioner may proceed in their absence.

I. 1. Sub-Rule (1) reproduces Paras 1 and 2 of Section 384 of the old Regulation.

2. Sub-Rule (2) is taken from the British Indian Code, and enables the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction a witness resides to issue a summons for his examination on the application of the commissioner.

3. Sub-Rule (3) formed the Proviso to the old Section 384. It does not occur in the British Indian Code. In the Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the Bill which became Regulation II of 1065, it was explained that "as it was deemed undesirable to empower a commissioner other than a Court of Justice to impose penalties, a proviso to that effect had been added."— S. O & R. Para 59.

II. See Appendix I, Form No. 7, for Form of commission to examine absent witness.

Case Law.

(1) Section 385, C. P. C., must be read along with Sections 377 and 378 [= rr. 9 & 10], and an omission to issue notice to the parties under Section 385 would not justify the reception of the report of the commissioner in evidence under Section 378.

The omission to issue notice could not be regarded as a mere irregularity to be taken into account in determining the evidentiary value of the report. Even in cases where the presiding officers of Court conducted a local inspection for testing the accuracy and value of the evidence let in, the desirability of doing the same in the presence of the parties has always been insisted upon. Though there is no express provision of law as regards such requirements so far as the Civil and Criminal Courts of this State are concerned, it has been an established practice, here as well as in other jurisdictions, to allow such local inspections by the presiding officers themselves 'to understand

ORDER XXVII.

Suits by or against the Government or Public Officers in their official capacity.

Suits by or against Government.

1. In any suit by or against the Dewan of Travancore, the plaint or written statement shall be signed by such person as the Government may, by general or special order, appoint in this behalf, and shall be verified by any person whom the Government may so appoint and who is acquainted with the facts of the case.

Persons authorised to act for Government.

the better the evidence which is laid before them', taking care however that such inspections are held in the presence of the parties or their pleaders, and an accurate record of the observations made by them is also duly prepared. If the presence of the parties is considered imperative in the case of local inspections conducted by the presiding Officers themselves, it would be anomalous to hold that their delegates have greater powers in such matters. Even on grounds of expediency, the presence of the parties at local investigations should be required, as it will then only be possible for them to avoid any miscarriage of justice by erroneous impressions based on facts observed during the inspection which could be satisfactorily explained away.

(2) When a finding is based solely upon evidence furnished by a report made without issue of notice to parties, it is a case of an error in the application of a rule of evidence which would justify interference by the High Court in second appeal. Reading Sections 558 and 554 [new Sections 79 and 80], the question is whether, in the absence of direct evidence, a particular inference or conclusion from a certain set of facts is one of law and not merely of facts. It has been held that errors in law, including errors in appreciating or applying the rules of evidence or the judicial methods of weighing evidence are matters which justify interference.— 17 T. Case Law.

Under the Land Acquisition Regulation III of 1097, a Land Acquisition Officer is a Court having all the powers of a Civil Court under the Civil Procedure Code, and is thus competent to entertain applications for review of the award made by him.

As it is the Sirkar that is interested in seeing that no more than the proper value of the land acquired is adjudged to the owners, the Sirkar is the party aggrieved, within the meaning of Section 569, C. P. C. [new Section 88] by an excessive award,

4. The Government pleader in any Court, or such other person as the Government may for any Court appoint in this behalf, shall be the agent of the Government for the purpose of receiving processes against the Dewan of Travancore issued by such Court.

Agent for Government to receive process.

5. The Court, in fixing the day for the Dewan of Travancore to answer to the plaint, shall allow a reasonable time for the issue of instructions to the Government pleader to appear and answer on behalf of the said Dewan of Travancore, and may extend the time at its discretion.

Fixing of day for appearance on behalf of Government.

Under the Civil Procedure Code, suits by or against Government should be instituted by or against the Dewan, though persons being ex officio or otherwise authorised to act for Government are deemed to be recognised agents entitled to make applications and do acts, &c., on behalf of Government.

As the Deputy Tahsildar in the case was neither ex officio nor otherwise authorised to act for Government, the application for review presented by him against the excessive award was not made in accordance with law and was wrongly entertained by the Land Acquisition Officer, and the modification of the award on the basis of such review was bad (F. (1) Where the Government undertakes the defence of a suit against a public officer, the Government pleader, upon being furnished with authority to appear and answer the plaint, shall apply to the Court, and upon such application the Court shall cause a note of his authority to be entered in the register of civil suits.

(2) Where no application under Sub-rule (1) is made by the Government pleader on or before the day fixed in the notice for the defendant to appear and answer, the case shall proceed as in a suit between private parties:

Provided that the defendant shall not be liable to arrest, nor his property to attachment, otherwise than in execution of a decree.

ORDER XXVIII.

Suits by or against Military men.

Officers or soldiers who cannot obtain leave may authorise any person to sue or defend for them.

1. (1) Where any officer or soldier actually serving the Government in a military capacity is a party to a suit, and cannot obtain leave of absence for the purpose of prosecuting or defending the suit in person, he may authorize any person to sue or defend in his stead.

(2) The authority shall be in writing and shall be signed by the officer or soldier in the presence of (a) his commanding officer, or the next subordinate officer, if the party is himself the commanding officer, or (b) where the officer or soldier is serving in military staff employment, the head or other superior officer of the office in which he is employed. Such commanding or other officer shall countersign the authority, which shall be filed in Court.

Or. XXVII, r. 8 [= Ss. 411 & 412 = Or. XXVII, r. 8]

(3) When so filed, the countersignature shall be sufficient proof that the authority was duly executed, and that the officer or soldier by whom it was granted could not obtain leave of absence for the purpose of prosecuting or defending the suit in person.

Explanation.—In this Order, the expression "commanding officer" means the officer in actual command for the time being of any regiment, corps, detachment or depot to which the officer or soldier belongs.

Person so authorised may act personally or appoint pleader.

2. Any person authorised by an officer or a soldier to prosecute or defend a suit in his stead may prosecute or defend it in person in the same manner as the officer or soldier could do if present; or he may appoint a pleader to prosecute or defend the suit on behalf of such officer or soldier.

Service on person so authorised, or on his pleader, to be good service.

3. Processes served upon any person authorised by an officer or a soldier under Rule 1 or upon any pleader appointed as aforesaid by such person shall be as effectual as if they had been served on the party in person.

Execution against officer or soldier serving in military capacity.

4. (1) Where, in the execution of a decree, a warrant of arrest or other process is to be executed against an officer or soldier actually serving the Government in a military capacity, the officer charged with the execution of such warrant or other process shall deliver the same to the commanding officer.

(2) The commanding officer shall back the warrant or other process with his signature, and in the case of a warrant for arrest, if the person named therein is within the limits of his command, shall cause him to be arrested and delivered to the officer so charged.

ORDER XXIX.

Suits by or against Corporations.

Subscription and verification of pleading.

1. In suits by or against a corporation, any pleading may be signed and verified on behalf of the corporation by the secretary or by any director or other principal officer of the corporation who is able to depose to the facts of the case.

Or. XXIX, r. 1 [=S. 415 =Or. XXIX, r. 1]

I. The corresponding Section of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows:—

"415. Subscription and verification of plaint.—In suits by a Corporation or by a Company authorized to sue and be sued in the name of an officer or of a trustee, the plaint may be subscribed and verified on behalf of the Corporation or Company by any director, secretary or other principal officer of the Corporation or Company, who is able to depose to the facts of the case."

II. The heading of Chapter XXVIII, corresponding to Order XXIX is:—"Suits by and against Corporations and Companies." Agreeably to the British Indian Code, all references to companies authorised to sue and be sued in the name of an officer or of a trustee, have been omitted. Such companies, the Indian Special Committee explained, "must be very few, if, indeed any exist, and they do not appear to the Committee to call for special treatment."

Case Law.

1. Plaintiffs, who were appointed Kizhi and Pattola respectively of a Samuham by the President of its managing committee, without consulting any members thereof, sued to recover a sum of money due to the Samuham under a bond. The contention of defendants was that the plaintiffs were incompetent to sue on behalf of the Samuham.

Held.—The Kizhi and Pattola being only servants of the institution, could not be accepted as its legal representatives authorized to sue under Section 415 of the Civil Procedure Code, unless expressly constituted as such by the members. Section 417 [=Or. XXXI, r. 1] applies to suits concerning property vested in a trustee, executor or administrator. The person suing under this Section must be a duly appointed trustee and have the property vested in him as such. In other words, a trustee under this Section is one expressly constituted a trustee for the purposes of representing the beneficiary in suits.

The Kizhi and Pattola being themselves members of the Samuham, may sue on its behalf, but subject to the provisions of Section 26 [=Or. I, r. 8 (1)]. In such case, the Court of first instance should give notice to all the members of the Samuham, before trying the suit.— 12 T. L. R., 145.

2. Where a District Judge ruled differing from the Munsiff, that the plaintiff, the Pattola of a Samooham, is competent to sue for recovery of property on behalf of the Samooham:

Held.—The relative position of Pattola and Samooham being that of servant and master, the former could not sue on behalf of the latter without their authority, express or implied, it being a procedure wholly unauthorised by law.

Even if there be an admission on the defendant's part as to the plaintiff's authority or competency to sue, the plaintiff could not maintain the suit on the face of the decided unwillingness of the Samoohakars to sue.

Inasmuch as the plaintiff persistently prosecuted the suit despite the objections of the Samoohakars, the costs of suit should be met from plaintiff's private funds and not from those of the Samooham.—

3. Suit by the Secretary of State for India in Council for refund of stipend given to defendant who was for some time a stipendiary student of the Government Forest School at Dehra Dun but who was dismissed from there for misconduct. The plaint was signed and verified by the Hon'ble Mr. A. G. Cardew, Revenue Secretary to the Government of Madras. The defendant, inter alia, contended that the Secretary of State for India in Council was not a corporation, and that, even if he was, the plaint was not properly signed and verified. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit as the plaint was not signed and verified by a proper person under Section 415 of the C. P. C. When the suit was pending before the Munsiff, the Government of Madras (in pursuance of Order 27, Rule I of Act V of 1908) issued a Notification, dated 12th March 1913, empowering with retrospective effect all Secretaries to Government ex officio to sign and verify all pleadings in suits, by or against the Secretary of State for India in Council. This Notification had been brought to the notice of the Munsiff who held that the Notification was not binding on him. On appeal, the District Judge held that the Secretary of State was a corporation and that the plaint in the case was properly signed and verified, and remanded the suit to the Munsiff for trial on the merits. The defendant appealed to the High Court against the order of remand, Meanwhile, i. e., five days after the Munsiff's decree dismissing the suit, a Proclamation was issued (14-6-1913) under His Highness the Maha Rajah's Sign Manual to the effect that the Government of His Majesty the King-Emperor of India may sue and be sued in the Courts of this State in the name of the Secretary of State for India in Council and that all pleadings in such suits may be signed and verified by the Officers empowered in that behalf with respect to similar suits in British India. The Proclamation was expressly given retrospective effect. On these facts, the questions that arose for decision were whether the Secretary of State for India in Council was a corporation, whether the plaint in the suit was properly signed and verified, whether, granting it was not so in the beginning, the Madras Government Notification dated 12-3-1913 did not cure the defect, whether the Courts in this State were bound to take judicial notice of such Notification and act upon its terms, whether the Royal Proclamation dated 14-6-1913 was validly issued, and even if so whether such Proclamation could prejudicially affect vested rights in so far as it was issued after date of decree.

Held.—For purposes of filing suits in India, the Secretary of State for India in Council must be regarded as a corporation.

A corporation created by an English Statute would fall under Section 415, C. P. C. (Travancore), and might, therefore, sue and be sued in the Travancore Courts.

The Hon'ble Mr. Cardew who had subscribed and verified the plaint in the present case as Revenue Secretary to the Government of Madras, might not improperly be termed a 'Principal Officer of the corporation' (viz., the Secretary of State for India in Council) within the meaning of that expression as used in Section 415 of the C. P. C., and the plaint in the suit had therefore been signed and verified by a proper person.

It was unnecessary to decide the broad question whether the Sovereign was competent to legislate except it be under one or other of the provisions of the Legislative Council Regulation (V of 1078), as the subject-matter of the Royal Proclamation dated 1-11-1088/14-6-1913 appertained to "the relations of Our Government with the Paramount Power or with foreign Princes or States" mentioned in proviso 2 (b) of Section 12 of the Legislative Council Regulation, as to which, Section 14 of the Service on corporation.

2. Subject to any statutory provision regulating service of process, where the suit is against a corporation, the summons may be served—

(a) on the secretary, or on any director, or other principal officer of the corporation, or

(b) by leaving it or sending it by post addressed to the corporation at the registered office, or if there is no registered office then at the place where the corporation carries on business.

Regulation provided that the Dewan may frame and submit to His Highness the Maha Raja any Regulation which, if assented to by His Highness, became law; and it made no difference that the enactment was styled a Proclamation instead of being called a Regulation and it apparently did not purport to have been passed under Section 14 of the Legislative Councils Regulation.

The Proclamation, having been expressly given retrospective effect, applied to the case, even though it was promulgated only after the decree of the Court of first instance, and the objection based on the rule that retrospective laws could not affect vested rights did not properly arise in the case as the right of appeal against the first decree had not been barred, and as the proceedings in the Appellate Court were but a continuation of the proceedings in the suit.

Chatfield, J.:—Even assuming that the plaint as originally filed was not signed and verified by a proper person, as the Notification dated 12-3-1913 issued during the pendency of the suit professed to give the Hon'ble Mr. Cardew authority to sign and verify plaints on behalf of the Secretary of State for India in Council with retrospective effect, the plaint became valid and effective for all purposes as from the date of the filing, and it was not necessary that the plaint should again be signed and verified by the Officer concerned.

It is chiefly where an enactment would prejudicially affect vested rights or the legal character of past transactions or impair contracts that the enactment should not be construed retrospectively. The presumption against a retrospective construction has no application to enactments which affect only the procedure and practice of the Courts even where the alteration which the statute makes has been disadvantageous to one of the parties.

Viraraghava Aiyengar, J.—Granting that, as urged by the 1st defendant, no retrospective validity can be given by the Courts of this State to the signing and verification of pleadings, appearances, applications, and acts in suits, made or done by any Secretary to the Government as laid down in paragraph 2 of the above Notification, it seems to me that this was pre-eminently a case in which the original Court, with the Notification before it, would have exercised a wiser and better discretion if it had used the powers vested in it under Section 49 of the C. P. C., [=Or. VI, r. 17 and new Sec. 117], and returned the plaint for amendment in which case the only thing necessary in my opinion to make the existing plaint a valid one would have been for the Hon'ble Mr. Cardew to put his signature over again at the place where he had already signed and verified.—

Suits by or against Firms and Persons carrying on business in names other than their own.

Suing of partners in name of firm.

1. (1) Any two or more persons claiming or being liable as partners and carrying on business in Travancore may sue or be sued in the name of the firm (if any) of which such persons were partners at the time of the accruing of the cause of action, and any party to a suit may in such case apply to the Court for a statement of the names and addresses of the persons who were, at the time of the accruing of the cause of action, partners in such firm, to be furnished and verified in such manner as the Court may direct.

The corresponding Section in Regulation II of 1065 was as follows:—

"416. Service on Corporation or Company.—When the suit is against a Corporation or against a Company authorized to sue and be sued in the name of an officer or of a trustee, the summons may be served—

The difficulties in such cases, especially where all the partners may not reside in the same place at all times are numerous and varied, and every practising lawyer and every trader is aware of such difficulties. They hamper and delay the progress of judicial proceedings, and in not a few cases, entail a failure of justice. The machinery now provided is effective, and would facilitate the speedy trial and decision in suits where firms are parties, without in any way curtailing the rights of litigants."—Notes on Clauses.

II. The Indian Special Committee say :- "The Committee have adopted with the necessary alterations the English procedure in relation to suits against firms. This new procedure has been in force for some time in the Presidency-towns of Calcutta and Bombay and has worked satisfactorily.

"It is hoped that its general application will be found useful by the mercantile community, for the rules remove technical obstacles which under the present procedure may seriously impede this class of litigation, as where a partner has died."

III. 1. The Rules in this Order are almost a reproduction of the principal Rules comprised in the English Order XLVIII-A.

(b) at the principal place at which the partnership business is carried on within Travancore upon any person having, at the time of service, the control or management of the partnership business there, as the Court may direct; and such service shall be deemed good service upon the firm so sued, whether all or any of the partners are within or without Travancore:

Provided that, in the case of a partnership which has been dissolved to the knowledge of the plaintiff before the institution of the suit, the summons shall be served upon every person within Travancore whom it is sought to make liable.

Right of suit on death of partner.

4. Where two or more persons may sue or be sued in the name of a firm under the foregoing provisions and any of such persons dies, whether before the institution or during the pendency of any suit, it shall not be necessary to join the legal representative of the deceased as a party to the suit.

(2) Nothing in Sub-rule (1) shall limit or otherwise affect any right which the legal representative of the deceased may have—

(a) to apply to be made a party to the suit, or

(b) to enforce any claim against the survivor or survivors.

Or. XXX, r. 3 [= ,, = Or. XXX, r. 3 =En. Or. 48-A, r. 3]

This Rule has to be read with Rule 1 of this Order and Rule 48 of Order XXI.

See Order V, Rule 11.

Or. XXX, r. 4 [= ,, = Or. XXX, r. 4]

Case Law.

In a suit for money due to a partnership firm, two of the partners (plaintiffs) died during the course of the suit and their legal representatives were not brought on record. It was contended that the legal representatives of the deceased partners not having been brought on record, the suit abated as regards all the partners.

Held.—Where the death of a partner dissolves the partnership, the surviving partners have a right to do all things necessary for winding up the business of the partnership. Although the right of a deceased partner devolves on his executor, the remedy survives to the surviving partners, who alone must enforce the right by action, and will be liable on recovery to account to the executors or administrators of the deceased partner.

This Rule has now received judicial recognition by the enactment of Order XXX, Rule 4.— 13 T. L. J., 194.

Notice in what capacity served.

5. Where a summons is issued to a firm and is served in the manner provided by Rule 3, every person upon whom it is served shall be informed by notice in writing given at the time of such service, whether he is served as a partner or as a person having the control or management of the partnership business, or in both characters, and, in default of such notice, the person served shall be deemed to be served as a partner.

Appearance of partners.

6. Where persons are sued as partners in the name of their firm, they shall appear individually in their own names, but all subsequent proceedings shall, nevertheless, continue in the name of the firm.

No appearance except by partners.

7. Where a summons is served in the manner provided by Rule 3 upon a person having the control or management of the partnership business, no appearance by him shall be necessary unless he is a partner of the firm sued.

Appearance under protest.

8. Any person served with summons as a partner under Rule 3 may appear under protest, denying that he is a partner, but such appearance shall not preclude the plaintiff from otherwise serving a summons on the firm and obtaining a decree against the firm in default of appearance where no partner has appeared.

Suits between co-partners.

9. This Order shall apply to suits between a firm and one or more of the partners therein and to suits between firms having one or more partners in common; but no execution shall be issued in such suits except by leave of the Court, and, on an application for leave to issue such execution, all such accounts and inquiries may be directed to be taken and made and directions given as may be just.

Case Law.

Where two persons entered into a security bond by which they made themselves liable as sureties for the carrying out of an award of arbitration with reference to the liabilities of a merchant, they cannot be regarded as forming a partnership, as, even if they agree jointly to contribute their labour in winding up the affairs of the merchant, it cannot be supposed that any profit was contemplated.

It is no doubt the rule under the common law of England that no action can be brought by one partner against another for recovery of money or property payable to the firm. This rule however never applied to proceedings in equity, and as regards common law suits, the Judicature Acts have removed the drawback. Under Order XXX Rule 9, provision is made for suits between a firm and one or more of the partners and between firms having one or more partners in common. The rule that, in no circumstances such a suit can be brought appears to be a technical rule of the old English Common Law which should not be pressed too far in Courts not subject to the common law jurisdiction. Courts in India are Courts both of law and equity and can give those remedies which Courts of equity can grant. When all the parties to the partnership are before it, the Court must do justice irrespective of technicalities.

It must, however, be pointed out that there is a difficulty as regards suits between partners in respect of one partnership transaction. It has therefore been held that a partner who has paid up a partnership debt in full is not ordinarily entitled to sue his partner for contribution, but should seek for a dissolution of partnership and a general settlement of accounts.

This, however, does not apply to a case where the relief is asked only against a stranger to the partnership and not against a partner who is only a pro forma party in the suit.

There is no technical objection against a suit being filed against one of two persons jointly liable. It is not incumbent on a person suing partners to make them all defendants in his suit. He is at liberty to sue any one partner as he may choose; only the Court should act in an equitable manner and so as to avoid undue hardship to the parties (F. B.).—45 T. L. R., 67 (= 19 T. L. J., 90).

Suits by or against Trustees, Executors and Administrators.

Representation of beneficiaries in suits concerning property vested in trustees, etc.

1. In all suits concerning property vested in a trustee, executor or administrator, where the contention is between the persons beneficially interested in such property and a third person, the trustee, executor or administrator shall represent the persons so interested, and it shall not ordinarily be necessary to make them parties to the suit. But the Court may, if it thinks fit, order them or any of them to be made parties.

Joinder of trustees-executoirs and administrators.

2. Where there are several trustees, executors or administrators, they shall all be made parties to a suit against one or more of them:

Provided that the executors who have not proved their testator's will, and trustees, executors and administrators outside Travancore, need not be made parties.

Suits by or against Minors and Persons of Unsound Mind.

Minor to sue by next friend.

1. Every suit by a minor shall be instituted in his name by a person who in such suit shall be called the next friend of the minor.

The word "trustee" has been inserted after the word "married".

Order XXXII: "This is mostly a re-enactment of the provisions contained in Chapter XXX of the existing Civil Procedure Code. A few additional provisions are added whose effect is as follows:—(1) Notice of applications for appointments of guardians ad litem has to be given to the minors also. It has the advantage of eliciting the opinion of the minor himself, when he is competent to give such opinion. (2) When a guardian of the person or property of a minor has been appointed by a competent authority, provision is made that no one else shall act for the minor, subject to the discretion of the Court to appoint any one else. (3) When a compromise is entered into, the order of the Court sanctioning such compromise is directed to be express. (4) The Court is required to get security in all cases from the guardian when money or movable property is received on behalf of the minor, except ordinarily where the guardian has been appointed guardian of the properties by a competent authority. The existing provision in favour of parents and Karanavan is thus removed"

Case Law.

Where it appears to the Court that a suit has been commenced by a next friend, if the Court finds that the suit is not for the benefit of the minor, the Court may direct the next friend to pay the costs. But where there are reasonable grounds for instituting the suit and the next friend has acted bona fide, the Court will not mulct the next friend in costs, but will direct the same to come out of the estate. This is the general rule.

Order XXXII does not contain any rule which expressly prohibits an order being made personally against a minor for the payment of the costs of the opposite side.

Where the court which decides the case, directs the minor who had since attained majority, to be personally liable for costs, though suit was originally instituted by his next friend, it is not open to the execution Court to vary the direction.—

No Court can allow the next friend of a minor to give up, on whatever grounds, any portion of the claim of the minor, as it is an act prejudicial to the interests of the minor. The next friend must be required to include the portion of the claim omitted. If upon such inclusion, the whole claim is found to be beyond the jurisdiction of the Munsiff, the plaint must be returned for presentation to a proper Court.— 14 T. L. R., 37.

Held.—The widow did not represent the estate so as to bind the minor sons when their existence was, from whatever causes,

Or. XXXII, r. 2 [= S. 422 = Or. XXXII, r. 2]

I. This Rule reproduces the corresponding Rule in the British Indian Code, with the addition of the second sentence in Sub-Rule (1).

II. As compared with Section 422 of Regulation II of 1065, the changes made are :—The words " Where a suit is instituted" have been substituted for the words "If a plaint be filed," in Sub-Rule (1). The words " by the defendant" which occurred after the word "person" in the second sentence of the old Section corresponding to Sub-Rule (2) have been omitted.

III. Neither the British Indian Code nor Regulation II of 1065, contains the Clause " No order directing.........fact of minority" now found in Sub-Rule (1). This was put in by the Select Committee.

It may be noted here that a provision similar to the above Clause was made in the 1901 Bill to amend the British Indian Civil Procedure Code, and the Statement of Objects and Reasons said :—"It is proposed to follow the ruling in the case of Rattanbai V. Chabildas Lalloobhoy (1888), I. L. R., 13 Bom. 7, and lay it down that the omission to join a next friend is not a nullity but an irregularity, and that a plaint should not be struck off except when it appears, on the face of it, that it was filed by a minor, or when it is proved to have been filed with the knowledge of the fact of minority and with the intention of deceiving the Court and evading the payment of costs in the event of failure."

But the Select committee which reported on that Bill did not consider it necessary to provide specially for the case adverted to by the High Court at Bombay.

Case Law.

1. A District Judge ordered that a plaint be taken off the file with costs to be recovered from the estate of the plaintiffs who were declared to be minors.

Held.—The order for the recovery of defendant's costs from the minors' estate was illegal.— 17 T. L. R., 166.

2. Section 422, C. P. C., does not make it obligatory on a next friend or guardian ad litem to obtain the permission of the Court before stating on oath or putting down in writing that the claim of the adversary is true. Such an admission is not an agreement or compromise within the meaning of that Section and may therefore be acted on by the Court in its discretion (F. B.).— 9 T. L. J., 248.

3. (1) Where the defendant is a minor, the Court, on being satisfied of the fact of his minority, shall appoint a proper person to be guardian for the suit for such minor.

Guardian for the suit to be appointed by Court for minor defendant.

(2) An order for the appointment of a guardian for the suit may be obtained upon application in the name and on behalf of the minor or by the plaintiff.

(3) Such application shall be supported by an affidavit verifying the fact that the proposed guardian has no interest in the matters in controversy in the suit adverse to that of the minor and that he is a fit person to be so appointed. The affidavit shall further state the name of the person or persons on whom notice has to be served under the provisions of Sub-rule (4).

(4) No order shall be made on any application under this Rule except upon notice to any guardian of the minor appointed or declared by an authority competent in that behalf or, where there is no such guardian, upon notice to the father or other natural guardian of the minor, or, where there is no father or other natural guardian, to the person in whose care the minor is, and after hearing any objection which may be urged on behalf of any person served with notice under this Sub-rule.

(5) When the enforcement of a decree is applied for against the heir or representative, being a minor, of a deceased party, a guardian for the suit of such minor shall be appointed by the Court, and the decree-holder shall serve on such guardian notice of such application.

Or. XXXII, r. 3 [=Ss. 423, 436, 440 = Or. XXXII, r. 3]

I. Rule 3 reproduces the corresponding Rule of the British Indian Code, excepting Sub-Rule (5) which is not in that Code.

II. 1. Sub-Rule (1).—In Section 423 of Regulation II of 1065, the words "to a suit" occur after the word "defendant," and after the word "minor" at the end, the following words occur :—"to put in the defence for such minor, and generally to act on his behalf in the conduct of the case."

2. Sub-Rule (2).—This reproduces the first sentence of the first para of Section 436 of the old Regulation.

3. Sub-Rule (3).—The first sentence of this Sub-Rule reproduces the second sentence of the first para of Section 436. The second sentence of this Sub-Rule was added by the Select Committee. There is no such provision in the British Indian Code.

The old Section 436 has a second paragraph for which see next Rule.

4. Sub-Rule (4).—This Sub-Rule is new and reproduces Sub-Rule (4) of the British Indian Code, omitting the words "the minor and to" which occur in that Code after the words "except upon notice to." The deletion was made by the Select Committee.

In regard to this Sub-Rule, the Indian Special Committee say :—"This is based upon Section 443. The Committee think it necessary to ensure that notice should reach one interested in the minor's welfare, and this Rule aims at securing this result."

5. Sub-Rule (5).—This reproduces Section 440 of Regulation II of 1065. The original Bill had omitted this provision. It was added by the Select Committee.

III. For Form of Notice to minor defendant and guardian, see Appendix I, Form No. 11.

Case Law.

1. Where the plaintiff moved for the appointment of a guardian to a minor defendant and the Court issued notice to the proposed guardian to show cause, if any, against his appointment, but the notice was not served on him personally and he did not appear in response to it on the date fixed, and the Munsiff thereupon appointed him guardian and declared him ex parte and tried and disposed of the suit in his absence :

Held.—Such a procedure was illegal. The Munsiff should have taken proper steps to appoint a proper guardian ad litem and thereafter disposed of the suit.—

2. Ordinarily where a minor is a necessary party to a suit, the fact of his not being represented will have the same effect as the omission to make him a party. This rule has no application to cases where the minor although not a party would have been bound by the decree or order.

Where, therefore, a decree is obtained against a widow for a debt due from her husband and where the decree-holder in execution of the decree obtained by him proceeds to execute the decree against the estate of the woman's husband, it may be inferred that the widow was sued in her representative character and that ordinarily the proceedings against her as such representative would be effectual against the estate notwithstanding that her sons who were minors were not impleaded as parties in that litigation.

It cannot be said that simply because a widow who is in possession of her husband's estate does not, in executing documents, especially promissory notes and simple debt bonds, describe herself as the guardian of her infant sons (who are his only heirs), she must be deemed to have entered into that transaction in her individual character and that those who accepted such documents from her dealt with her on that basis.— 9 T. L. J., 342.

Diss.—37 T. L. R., 72

3. Assuming that the Court should, under Section 436, C. P. C., satisfy itself that the person sought to be appointed as the minor's guardian ad litem was willing to act as such before it could appoint him to that office, the omission to do so is only an irregularity—it may be styled serious irregularity—and such irregularity does not of itself go to vitiate the decree passed in the suit. It will be of course open to the minor who is affected by such a decree to show in subsequent proceedings that the irregularity has actually prejudiced his rights, by proving that the claim in the prior suit was an invalid one or had been satisfied either wholly or partially at the date of the prior suit or that there were other defences which could have been but were not put forward in answer to the claim.

Care should be taken by the lower Courts to see that the provisions of Section 436 are complied with. The safer course, when the person who is sought to be appointed as guardian ad litem does not appear and express his willingness to act as such, would be for the Court to see if there is any person other than the person nominated, fit and willing to accept that office, and, if no such person

Who may act as next friend or be appointed guardian for the suit.

4. (1) Any person who is of sound mind and has attained majority may act as next friend of a minor or as his guardian for the suit :

Provided that the interest of such person is not adverse to that of the minor and that he is not, in the case of a next friend, a defendant or, in the case of the guardian for the suit, a plaintiff.

(2) Where a minor has a guardian appointed or declared by competent authority, no person other than such guardian shall act as the next friend of the minor or be appointed his guardian for the suit unless the Court considers, for reasons to be recorded, that it is for the minor's welfare that another person be permitted to act or be appointed, as the case may be.

(3) No person shall without his consent be appointed guardian for the suit.

(4) Where there is no other person fit and willing to act as guardian for the suit, the Court may appoint any of its officers to be such guardian, and may direct that the costs to be incurred by such officer in the performance of his duties as such guardian shall be borne either by the parties or by any one or more of the parties to the suit, or

4. A decree was obtained on a debt bond against the members of an undivided Hindu family. One of the defendants (the plaintiff in the suit) was a minor and was not properly represented and hence it was declared that the decree could not be executed against him. Family properties were sold in Court auction in execution of the decree.

Plaintiff sued to set aside the execution sale to the extent of his share and recover the same.

Held.—The Court sale was only a voidable transaction and the plaintiff should set it aside in order to clear the ground for enforcing the claim for partition. Article 8 of the Limitation Regulation applied to the suit.

So long as the grounds on which the Court sale is sought to be cancelled are such as would fall within Article 8, it is quite immaterial whether the suit was brought by one who was a party to the litigation or who was not a party to it or who though made a party to it is found to have been not properly impleaded.— 10 T. I. Sub-Rule (1).—Sections 425 and 437 of Regulation II of 1065 ran as follow :—

"425. Who may be next friend.—Any person being of sound mind and full age may act as next friend of a minor, provided his interest is not adverse to that of such minor, and he is not a defendant in the suit.

"437. Who may be guardian ad litem.—A co-defendant of sound mind and of full age may be appointed guardian for the suit, if he has no interest adverse to that of the minor, but no plaintiff can be so appointed."

Para 2 of the old Section 436 corresponding to this Sub-Rule was as follows :—"Where there is no other person fit and willing to act as guardian for the suit, the Court may appoint any of its officers to be such guardian, provided that he has no interest adverse to that of the minor."

2. Rule 13 of Order LXV of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, is as follows:—"13. Where the Court or a Judge appoints one of the solicitors of the Court to be guardian ad litem of an infant or person of unsound mind, the Court or Judge may direct that the costs to be incurred in the performance of the duties of such office shall be borne and paid either by the parties or some one or more of the parties to the cause or matter in which such appointment is made, or out of any fund in Court in which such infant or person of unsound mind may be interested, and may give directions for the repayment or allowance of such costs as the justice and circumstances of the case may require."

III. Sub-Rule (5).—This is not in the British Indian Code. It is an addition made by the Select Committee.

Case Law.

1. Suit by an undivided co-parcener for recovery of property said to have been trespassed upon by the guardians of the minor daughters of his deceased co-parcener, as the deceased's legal heir and representative on the ground that the property descends, as such, to him by right of survivorship, the deceased having left no male issue. The

Representation of minor by next friend or guardian for the suit.

5. (1) Every application to the Court on behalf of a minor, other than an application under Rule 10, Sub-rule (2), shall be made by his next friend or by his guardian for the suit.

(2) Every order made in a suit or on any application before the Court, in or by which a minor is in any way concerned or affected, without such minor being represented by a next friend or guardian for the suit, as the case may be, may be discharged, and, where the pleader of the party at whose instance such order was obtained knew, or might reasonably have known, the fact of such minority, with costs to be paid by such pleader.

defendants raised the plea that the minors are the rightful owners of the property, it being their father's self-acquisition.

Held.—The plaintiff's paternal relation of the minors who claims adversely, as against them, the whole property to be his cannot hold the position of their guardian in preference to their maternal relations, Section 437 prohibiting his appointment as guardian of the minor defendants.—

2. The plaintiff or the appellant should make the necessary advances in order to enable the official guardian of the minor defendant or respondent to meet the expenses incidental to the conduct of the defence, and should take credit for the same at the time of the final adjustment under the decree. If the plaintiff or the appellant succeeds in the case, the final decree should order him to pay the costs of the official guardian, giving him liberty to add what he should so pay to his own costs of the suit as against the minor defendant or respondent, as the case may be.— 34 T. L. R., 57.

3. Under the Code of 1065, no express permission of Court is necessary for a next friend to institute a suit for a minor. No change in this matter has been effected by Order XXXII, Rule 4, of the Code of 1100.

The Proviso to Rule 4 requires a specific order only in cases where a guardian has been appointed for the person or property of the minor by a Court of competent jurisdiction and a person other than such a guardian files a suit on behalf of the minor. There is no warrant for holding, on the strength of the Proviso, that leave has to be obtained from Court even in cases not falling under the above category.

Even in cases covered by the Proviso, an express order of Court is not peremptory, and a suit should not be allowed to be defeated for want of such express order, if the intention of the Court as gatherable from the proceedings relating to the suit has been to grant such permission.—

Sub-Rule (1) reproduces Section 421 and Sub-Rule (2), Section 424, of Regulation II of 1065.

Next friend or guardian not to receive money without leave of Court and giving security.

6. No sum of money or other thing shall be received or taken by a next friend or guardian for the suit on behalf of a minor, unless he has first obtained the leave of the Court and given security to its satisfaction that such money or other thing shall be duly accounted for to, and held for, the benefit of such minor :

Provided that, where the next friend or guardian for the minor happens to be the parent or karanavan of such minor, the Court may, for any special reason to be recorded, dispense with the security, when such next friend or guardian is after decree allowed to receive any sum of money or any property on behalf of the minor.

Or. XXXII, r. 6 [=S. 441 = Or. XXXII, r. 6]

I. 1. The original Bill adopted the corresponding Rule of the British Indian Code which was a reproduction of Section 461 of the Code of 1882. But the Select Committee considered it "more expedient to adhere to the existing provisions", and substituted Section 441 of Regulation II of 1065, in place of the new provision in the Bill.

2. In regard to the old Section (441), the Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the 1065 Bill said :—"Section 461, as it stands in the British Code, does not protect the right of the minor in the property received by the guardian in pursuance of a decree. It is, therefore, so amended as to restrict the discretion of the Court in the matter of dispensing with security after decree."— S. O & R., Para 63.

II. Rule 6 of this Order in the British Indian Code is as follows :—

"6. Receipt by next friend or guardian for the suit of property under decree for minor.—(1) A next friend or guardian for the suit shall not, without the leave of the Court, receive any money or other movable property on behalf of a minor either—

(a) by way of compromise before decree or order, or

(b) under a decree or order in favour of the minor.

(2) Where the next friend or guardian for the suit has not been appointed or declared by competent authority to be guardian of the property of the minor, or, having been so appointed or declared, is under any disability known to the Court to receive the money or other movable property, the Court shall, if it grants him leave to receive the property, require such security and give such directions as will, in its opinion, sufficiently protect the property from waste and ensure its proper application."

Case Law.

1. Plaintiff, a childless widow, as the heiress of her deceased husband, sued her father-in-law's divided brother for the recovery of a hypothecation amount due by the latter to her father-in-law. The lower Court gave her a decree, and ordered that before she drew the amount adjudged to her, which may be deposited by the defendant in Court, she must furnish security to indemnify defendant, her reversioner.

Held.—Section 441, C. P. C., prohibits the next friend or guardian, ad litem, of a minor party from taking money from Court without its leave and without giving security. To impose any such condition on the widow would be simply fettering her with more restrictions than thos imposed by the law on her acts.— 1 S. D., 73.

2. Where, as in the case, the minor could not be considered to have come forward

7. (1) No next friend or guardian for the suit shall, without the leave of the Court, expressly recorded in the proceedings, enter into any agreement or compromise on behalf of a minor with reference to the suit in which he acts as next friend or guardian.

Agreement or compromise by next friend or guardian for the suit.

(2) Any such agreement or compromise entered into without the leave of the Court so recorded shall be voidable against all parties other than minor.

to execute any prior decree or order of the Court in her favour against the surety, an order passed under Order XXXII, Rule 6, could not be considered to have fallen within the purview of any of the Clauses of Section 109. The remedy of the minor in such cases lies if at all in a separate suit.

The old Section 249 [new Section 109] restricted its operation only to suretyship entered into before the passing of the decree, whereas, the Code of 1100 has enlarged the scope of the cases in which the surety could be held liable to be proceeded against in execution.

The circumstances under which security is given, and the manifest object of the parties in taking the security may be looked into in determining whether the particular case in hand would be covered by Section 109.

Where there is no prior executable order or decree sought to be enforced in the proceedings, the omission to raise the plea of want of jurisdiction at the earlier stages of the case, could not be deemed to be a fatal objection to the application in execution.—
18 T. L. J., 655.

3. A reading of Section 441 and Rule 6 of Order XXXII shows that it relates to withdrawal from Court of money belonging to the minors available, by the next friend or guardian. It cannot presumably relate to transactions out of Court. Of course, the Court will have to enquire into the propriety of the transaction from the standpoint of the minor parties and examine whether their interests have been sufficiently safeguarded before recognising the same. But the above provisions should not be construed as placing a statutory bar to transactions of this kind.

Order XXXII, Rule 7, relates to compromises or agreements with respect to the subject-matter of the suits to which minors were parties. The provisions of this Rule have no bearing to assignments of decrees, for, they presumably relate to transactions between the minors on the one hand and the other parties to the suit on the other.

In the absence of any statutory prohibition declaring assignments of decrees to which the minors are parties without the previous sanction of the Courts are ipso facto void, the want of sanction cannot be treated as a valid objection to the validity of the assignment. The provisions of Rules 6 and 7 of Order XXXII cannot be construed as imposing such a prohibition. The Court has, however, before allowing a petition for compromise, to consider whether the transaction is beneficial to the interests of the minor. This could be done at any stage of the proceeding.—

= Or. XXXII, r. 7]

The words "expressly recorded in the proceedings" found in Sub-Rule (1), and the words "so recorded" in Sub-Rule (2) are additions.

8. (1) Unless otherwise ordered by the Court, a next friend shall not retire without first procuring a fit person to be put in his place and giving security for the costs already incurred.

Retirement of next friend.

(2) The application for the appointment of a new next friend shall be supported by an affidavit showing the fitness of the person proposed, and also that he has no interest adverse to that of the minor.

Case Law.

1. In a suit to set aside a compromise in a prior litigation entered into by the 1st defendant as guardian of his minor sons—the plaintiffs, where the latter contended inter se that the compromise was illegal for want of Court's sanction under Section 442, Civil Procedure Code, it was held that the defect of procedure did not amount to an illegality but only an irregularity and as it did not prejudice the plaintiff's interests in other ways, the compromise was valid.— 20 T. L. R., 54.

2. Where a minor is party to a suit and a next friend or guardian has been appointed to look after the interests of the infant in the suit, the acts of such next friend or guardian are subject to the control of the Court and no compromise can be entered into under Section 442, C. P. C., without sanction of the Court.

This rule is applicable even in cases where the next friend or guardian is the manager of the family to which the minor belongs.

Such next friend or guardian cannot do any act in his capacity of managing member. His powers are controlled by provisions of law.— 14 T. L. J., 37.

3. In granting leave under Order XXXII, Rule 7, for compromise of suits to which minors are parties, the Court has to examine whether the compromise is one for the minor's benefit. The Court need not gauge the chances of success of the minors and weigh against them the chances of their opponents, and accord sanction only if the chances of the minors appear to it to be slender. The affidavit of the guardian may be taken into consideration in determining whether the compromise is for the benefit of the minor or not. In cases where heavy interests are involved, the Court may act upon the statement of the counsel or Vakil appearing for the minor at the bar or upon his affidavit stating that in his opinion the compromise proposal is for the benefit of the minor.— 19 T. 1. Sub-Rule (1).—The words "at his own request" which occurred after the word "retire" in Section 427 of the old Code have been omitted.

2. Sub-Rule (2).—The words at the end of the second para of Section 427 were :—"no interest adverse to the minor."

Removal of next friend.

9. (1) Where the interest of the next friend of a minor is adverse to that of the minor or where he is so connected with a defendant whose interest is adverse to that of the minor as to make it unlikely that the minor's interest will be properly protected by him, or where he does not do his duty, or during the pendency of the suit, ceases to reside within Travancore, or for any other sufficient cause, application may be made on behalf of the minor or by a defendant for his removal ; and the Court, if satisfied of the sufficiency of the cause assigned, may order the next friend to be removed accordingly, and make such other order as to costs as it thinks fit.

(2) Where the next friend is not a guardian appointed or declared by an authority competent in this behalf, and an application is made by a guardian so appointed or declared, who desires to be himself appointed in the place of the next friend, the Court shall remove the next friend unless it considers, for reasons to be recorded by it, that the guardian ought not to be appointed the next friend of the minor, and shall thereupon appoint the applicant to be next friend in his place upon such terms as to the costs already incurred in the suit as it thinks fit.

Stay of proceedings on removal, etc., of next friend.

10. (1) On the retirement, removal or death of the next friend of a minor, further proceedings shall be stayed until the appointment of a next friend in his place.

(2) Where the pleader of such minor omits within a reasonable time, to take steps to get a new next friend appointed, any person interested in the minor or in the matter in issue may apply to the Court for the appointment of one, and the Court may appoint such person as it thinks fit.

1. Sub-Rule (1) is the same as Section 426 of the old Regulation, with the following words newly added at the end :—"and make such other order as to costs as it thinks fit."

2. Sub-Rule (2) is new. In regard to the words at the end of this Sub-Rule regarding the terms as to costs, the Indian Special Committee who added the words "and shall thereupon.........it thinks fit" to the old Indian Section said :—"The Committee think it expedient that where a guardian insists on his right to be appointed next friend in the place of another there should be power to require him to become liable or give security for costs in the suit previously incurred."

Or. XXXII, r. 10 [=Ss. 428, 429 =Or. XXXII, r. 10]

Sub-Rule (1) corresponds to Section 428 of the old Code. The wording in that Section was :—"On the death or removal of the next friend........"

Sub-Rule (2) reproduces Section 429 of the old Code.

11. (1) Where the guardian for the suit desires to retire or does not do his duty, or where other sufficient ground is made to appear, the Court may permit such guardian to retire or may remove him, and may make such order as to costs as it thinks fit.

Retirement, removal or death of guardian for the suit.

(2) Where the guardian for the suit retires, dies or is removed by the Court during the pendency of the suit, the Court shall appoint a new guardian in his place.

Or. XXXII, r. 11 [=Ss. 438, 439 = Or. XXXII, r. 11]

The corresponding Sections of the old Regulation were as follow :—

"438. Guardian neglecting his duty may be removed.—Costs.—If the guardian for the suit of a minor defendant does not do his duty, or if other sufficient ground be made to appear, the Court may remove him, and may order him to pay such costs as may have been occasioned to any party by his breach of duty."

"439. Appointment in place of guardian dying pendente lite.—If the guardian for the suit dies pending such suit, or is removed by the Court, the Court shall appoint a new guardian in his place."

Case Law.

It is well-settled that a minor can reopen a decree on the ground not alone of fraud, but also of gross negligence on the part of the guardian. Whether there has been gross negligence on the part of the guardian must necessarily depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case. Mere non-appearance at the trial would not amount to gross negligence if there was no good ground of defence to put forward on the minor's behalf but it would be gross negligence not to defend the suit if there was a valid defence available.

Though the failure of the person sought to be appointed guardian ad litem of a minor defendant to signify his willingness to act as guardian is only an irregularity which by itself would not vitiate the decree, the safer course, when the person sought to be appointed guardian ad litem does not appear and express his willingness to act as such, would be for the Court to see if there is any person other than the person nominated fit and willing to accept that office, and, if no such person can be found, to appoint any of its officers to be such guardian as directed in Section 436 [Rules 3 & 4]. In the case the 4th defendant accepted the office of plaintiff's guardian and filed a written defence. But she failed to file a further written statement when called upon by the Court, and the Court punished her under Section 108 [=Or. 8, r. 10] for non-compliance with the order of the Court viz., by decreeing the suit. The question was whether the disobedience of the order of the Court could be visited with the penalty provided in Section 108 as against the minor. It is sufficiently clear from the language of the Section that the Legislature meant the provision to be used only very sparingly even as against the real offender. Much less could that provision be called to aid when the real party to a suit is a minor and the offender is the guardian. Section 438 expressly provides for cases where the guardian of a minor defendant does not do his duty.

The suit was instituted on behalf of a minor by her next friend. The minor came of age before the termination of the suit in the Court of first instance. Held.—There had been no such material irregularity as had prejudiced the parties.

Although the minor became sui juris before the conclusion of the suit in the Court of first instance, she was not in any way prejudiced nor were her opponents prejudiced by not having her next friend struck off the record. Her conduct in appealing in her own name was of itself a sufficient indication of her election to adopt the work already done on her behalf in the suit by her next friend and the lower Appellate Court was therefore right in granting permission.— 29 T. Section 434 of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows:—

"434. When minor co-plaintiff coming of age desires to repudiate suit.—A minor co-plaintiff on coming of age and desiring to repudiate the suit must apply to have his name struck out as co-plaintiff; and the Court, if it finds that he is not a necessary party, shall dismiss him from the suit on such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit.

Notice of the application shall be served on the next friend as well as on the defendant, and it must be proved by affidavit that the late minor has attained his full age. The costs of all parties of such application, and of all or any proceedings theretofore had in the suit, shall be paid by such persons as the Court directs.

(2) Notice of the application shall be served on all the parties concerned; and the Court, upon being satisfied of such unreasonableness or impropriety may grant the application and order the next friend to pay the costs of all parties in respect of the application and of anything done in the suit, or make such other order as it thinks fit.

15. Or. XXXII, r. 15 [= S. 443 = Or. XXXII, r. 15]

I. Section 443 of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows:—"443. The provisions contained in Sections 420 to 442 (both inclusive) shall, mutatis mutandis, apply in the case of persons of unsound mind."

II. The Rule reproduces the British Indian Rule in regard to which the Indian Special Committee said:—"The Committee have extended this rule so as to cover the case of a person incapacitated fram protecting his interests by reason of his mental weakness or of his being a deaf-mute."

Case Law.

A, a Nambudiri lady sued B on behalf of her minor son C, for recovery of land and rent. Her husband D was alive but was alleged to be of unsound mind. B objected to the right of C to carry on the suit during the life of D (C's father) in C's name.—

Held.—D the father of C (the minor) was, according to the law by which the Nambudiris were governed, the head of the Tarwad. Suits relating to Tarwad property must, therefore, be instituted in his name by his next friend or guardian; and there was no objection to A (D's wife and C's mother) acting as his next friend and guardian.

[The plaint was directed to be amended by bringing in the plaintiff's father as the plaintiff on the record, his wife acting as his next friend and guardian].—

ORDER XXXIII.

Suits by Paupers.

Suits may be instituted in forma pauperis.

1. Subject to the following provisions, any suit may be instituted by a pauper.

Explanation.—A person is a "pauper" when he is not possessed of sufficient means to enable him to pay the fee prescribed by law for the plaint in such suit.

Order XXXIII:—"The chief point to be noticed in this Order is that paupers are allowed to bring all suits, including suits for libel, loss of caste, and assault. There is no reason why paupers should not vindicate their character, or go without a civil remedy in cases of assault. Again, a pauper is not the less so, because he has in possession a sum of a hundred rupees or less. This maximum sum is sufficiently low. Lastly, questions arising between the Government and the plaintiff in respect of realising Court fee are subjected to appeal."

Case Law.

The Legislature contemplates two distinct stages in dealing with applications to sue in forma pauperis. The first stage may be taken to be that until the issue of a notice fixing a specified date for the hearing to the Government pleader and the opposite party. In this stage, the Court is empowered to examine the applicant or his agent as regards the applicant's pauperism and the merits of the claim. The examination contemplated at this stage is to ensure clearness or to ascertain definitely the facts necessary to apprize the Court of the exact nature of the right. After such an examination, the Court is empowered to reject the application if the prohibitions specified in Section 392 [Or. XXXIII, r. 5] are found to exist in the case.

The second stage commences with the issue of the notice to the other side and the Government pleader. In this stage, the Court is allowed to conduct an enquiry relating to the application and allow the parties to adduce such evidence as they may have in the matter. This enquiry has to be confined to the question of pauperism alone and not to the merits of the claim. After the enquiry is concluded, an opportunity is given to the counter-petitioner or the Sirkar to advance any argument that they may have for making out that the case falls within the provisions of Section 392 or Rule 5 of Order XXXIII. This could mean that they are given an opportunity to make out that from the plaint as drawn up considered along with the statement of the applicant or his agent recorded under Section 391 of the old Code or Rule 4 of Order XXXIII of the new Code, no cause of action is disclosed. For this purpose, the evidence recorded in the second stage could not be used as the same had to be confined to the question of pauperism alone.

'Cause of action' in Rule 5 of Order XXXIII means a good subsisting cause of action capable of enforcement in Court and calling for an answer, and not barred by the law of limitation or any other law.—

Or. XXXIII, r. 1 [ = S. 386

I. This Rule is the same as Section 386 of Regulation II of 1065. For the word "brought" in the old Section the word "instituted" is used.

II. 1. In the British Indian Code, the Explanation to this Rule which reproduces Section 401 of the 1882 Code, is as follows:- "Explanation.-A person is a "pauper" when he is not possessed of sufficient means to enable him to pay the fee prescribed by law for the plaint in such suit, or, where no such fee is prescribed, when he is not entitled to property worth one hundred rupees other than his necessary wearing apparel and the subject-matter of the suit."

This Explanation was adopted in toto in the original Bill; but the Select Committee deleted the words—"or where.........of the suit."

2. It may be noted here that, in the Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the Bill which became Regulation II of 1065, it was stated :—"The latter part of the Explanation to Section 401 (Indian Code) is omitted, as it is likely to give room to unnecessary enquiries without adequate advantage."— S. O & R., Para 60.

III. (1) When a man seeks permission to sue as a pauper, the Court to whom the application is made is bound to investigate the merits of the claim. It is only after satisfying itself that the petitioner has a prima facie case against the defendants named in his plaint, that the claim is not barred by limitation and that the suit is one which a man may be allowed to institute as a pauper, the Court can proceed to enquire into his alleged pauperism and make a final order to allow or reject his application.

(2) The mere fact that a man was allowed to sue as a pauper is no ground to allow him to appeal as a pauper against the decree of the Court of first instance. The Appellate Court must see reason to believe that the decision of the Court below is contrary to law or is otherwise erroneous or unjust before granting the prayer to appeal in forma pauperis.

(3) The permission given to a man to sue or to appeal as a pauper, does not altogether exonerate him from the payment of institution fees. The permission has merely the effect of postponing the period of payment of the amount due to the Sirkar. If a pauper's claim is entirely disallowed, the decree ought to state the amount of the institution fee which he would have paid if he had not been permitted to sue as a pauper, and it ought to state that he is liable to pay the same to the Sirkar. If a pauper succeeds in his claim wholly or partially, the decree ought to state what amount of the institution fee the Sirkar is entitled to recover from defendant and what amount (if any) from the plaintiff.

(4) To enable the Government to recover the institution fee, it is necessary that the Courts should furnish the Government with copies of decrees in suits and appeals. (Civil Circular No. 3 of 1058).—

IV. An order of partial dispauperisation does not appear to be contemplated by the Code of Civil Procedure. The Code recognises no degrees in pauperism. A person is for the purposes of Chapter XXVI relating to pauper suits either a pauper or not a pauper. He is a pauper if he is unable to pay the fee prescribed for the suit that he proposes to institute, whatever may be extent of his inability. If his means do not enable him to pay the full fee, however small may be the amount required to make it up, he must be treated as a pauper for the purpose of Chapter XXVI of the Civil Procedure Code.— 16 T. L. J., 76.

V. 1. After Section 386, there was the following Section in the old Regulation.

"387. What suits excepted.—No suit shall be brought by a pauper to recover compensation for loss of caste, libel, slander, abusive language or assault."

This has been omitted, as is done in the British Indian Code. For reasons, see Notes on Clauses above.

2. In regard to the omission of this provision in the Indian Code, the Special Committee said: —"The Committee have not preserved Section 402. In the light of the case-law it is misleading, so far as it suggests that a suit will lie for loss of caste or abusive language, and they can see no sufficient reason for witholding from a pauper a right to sue as such in respect of defamation or assault."

Held.—The rejection of the application was improper. The only question that the Judge had to consider was whether the petitioner was in possession of sufficient means to enable him to pay the fees prescribed by law for the plaint in the suit.— 25 T. L. J., 72.

3. Where certain junior members of a Marumakkathayam Tarwad applied under Section 386, C. P. C., for permission to sue in forma pauperis for maintenance and for setting aside certain improper alienations of the immovable properties of the Tarwad, and the Court of first instance while rejecting the application in so far as the second relief was concerned allowed it in regard to the first :

Held (confirming the order of the Court below).—The right to claim maintenance was a personal right, and as the plaintiffs were shown to be paupers they were rightly allowed to sue in forma pauperis in respect of that relief.

The right to set aside an improper alienation of Tarwad properties was a right claimed on behalf of the Tarwad, and as the Tarwad had not been shown to be a pauper within the meaning of Section 386, C. P. C., the plaintiff could not be allowed to seek that relief without payment of the necessary Court fee.

As the causes of action in respect of the two reliefs were distinct, there was nothing wrong in rejecting the application in respect of the one and allowing it in respect of the other.— 4 T. L. J., 57.

4. Suit by junior members of a Nanjinad Vellala Tarwad following Marumakkathayam law to set aside on behalf of the Tarwad, a partition deed entered into during the plaintiff's minority by the other members of the Tarwad, and relating to all Tarwad properties. They also prayed for the setting aside of certain alienations before and after the partition and for the removal of the Karanavan from his office. They applied to file the suit in forma pauperis. The defendants contended, inter alia, that as the Tarwad on whose behalf the suit was brought was not a pauper, the plaintiffs could not sue as a pauper. This contention was upheld by the Judge.

Held.—The examination of an applicant under Section 391 [= Or. XXXIII, r. 4] is only for the purpose of ascertaining whether the applicant's allegations show a cause of action and is not for the purpose of determining the claim on the merits.

All the Tarwad property having become the subject-matter of the suit, leave must be given to file the suit in forma pauperis on behalf of the Tarwad. 'The law does not compel suitors seeking to sue as paupers to mortgage their claims in order to pay Court fees.'— 30 T. L. R., 188 (= 4 T. L. J., 289).

5. An appeal was preferred by first defendant in the case against a decree for partition obtained by the plaintiffs-respondents, who had filed the suit in forma pauperis. The plaintiffs-respondents applied that the memorandum of objections filed by them might be allowed to be filed in forma pauperis.

Held.—The application could not be allowed. Firstly, there is no provision in the Civil Procedure Code covering such an application. Secondly, by reason of the decree passed in their favour by the lower Court, the plaintiffs had ceased to be paupers as understood in the Civil Procedure Code. Thirdly, supposing the application could be regarded as similar to an application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis, Section 561 [=Or. XLIII, r. 1] allows a party to appeal as a pauper, only if the judgment appealed against is prima facie contrary to law or is otherwise erroneous or unjust (F. B.).— 11 T. L. J., 1.

6. Plaintiff applied to the District Court to admit his plaint in a suit for partition in forma pauperis. The defendants 1 to 3 are his brothers and the fourth his mother, while the other defendants 5 to 9 are the alienees under defendants 1 to 4. The plaintiff asserted that the family properties were worth about Rs. 50,000, that his share came to over Rs. 10,000, that he did not make any attempt to raise money by encumbering his share and that he was not willing to do so. The application was rejected and in revision:

Held (By a majority of the Full Bench, Mr. Justice Cheriyan dissenting).— The plaintiff was not a pauper within the meaning of Section 386 C. P. C.

Per Viraraghava Aiyengar, C. J.— Broadly speaking, the following classes of cases may arise in partition suits:—

(1) Whether the plaintiff's right to a share in the properties alleged to belong in common is undisputed.

(2) Where such right is disputed and disputed bona fide, i. e., not in collusion with the plaintiff with a view to enable him to bring the suit in forma pauperis.

Class (1) may be sub-divided thus:—

(a) Where all the properties belonging to the plaintiff and the co-owners—defendants, or in which they are jointly interested, have been alienated away, and are in the possession of the alienees-defendants.

(b) Where such properties have been alienated only in part, the remaining portion continuing to be in possession of the co-owners-defendants.

Sub-clause (b) may be further sub-divided into—

(1) Where the plaintiff is by force or fraud or other improper means on the part of his co-owners-defendants and not by way of collusion, kept out of possession or otherwise prevented by his co-owners-defendants from exercising his right of co-ownership in regard to those properties which still remain as part of the family property or of the joint concern.

(2) Where there is no such prevention or keeping out as is referred to in Sub-clause (b) (1), but the plaintiff does not choose or is unwilling to exercise his rights as co-owner.

With respect to sub-clauses 1 (a), 1 (b) and (2), the plaintiff would prima facie be entitled, regard being had to the other provisions in the Civil Procedure Code bearing on the point, to ask the Court to allow him to sue as a pauper. As regards 1 (b) (2), there appears no reason founded in law or equity why the Court should, apart from the question of the sufficiency of the means, allow the plaintiff to sue as a pauper.

In my view, the word "possessed" in the phrase "possessed of means" occurring in the Section is not used in any technical sense. This phrase "possessed of means" should be, and was intended by the Legislature to be, understood in a popular sense.

The questions in each case for the Court to decide will be (1) whether having regard to all the circumstances and the evidence adduced before it on the point, the plaintiff may be reasonably considered to be a person owning or having anything which is marketable or can be converted into money, and (2) if the question is found in the affirmative, whether the amount which is so realisable would be sufficient to pay the fee prescribed by law.

Per Palpu Pillai, J.—The plaintiff does not say that the properties involved in the suit are beyond his reach. All that is stated is that defendants do not comply with his requisition for partition. This cannot be construed as meaning that the plaintiff is kept out of possession of his one-fourth share to which he is admittedly entitled The real object of the suit is not so much for the plaintiff's share being divided off from those of his brothers, as for having it declared that the encumbrances in favour of defendants 5 to 9 are not valid in so far as the plaintiff's share is concerned. All the properties are presumably in the possession of the family composed of the plaintiff and his brothers, and the latter have not come forward to dispute or question the title set up by plaintiff.

Per Cheriyan, J. (dissenting).—Under Section 393 [=Or. XXXIII, r. 5], all that the Court has to decide is whether the plaintiff is possessed of sufficient means and not whether he is in a position to raise funds for paying the court fee. The measure of pauperism is the sum required to pay the fee on the plaint. If the petitioner is proved to have this sum at his disposal, he is not allowed the privilege of pauperism. The real ground for excluding the subject-matter of the suit is because it is presumably out of the petitioner's reach and cannot be made use of by him to carry on his litigation.

In this case the plaintiff is according to him legally entitled to a share in the plaint items. But so long as he is kept out of his share, in spite of the fact of his being legally entitled to it, the plaint property cannot be said to be at the plaintiff's disposal, so as to justify a finding that he is possessed of sufficient means to pay court fee. It cannot be said that simply because the plaintiff in a pauper suit includes an item of property in the schedule to his proposed plaint, that property should be regarded as the subject-matter of the litigation. But where it is sought to make out that what the plaintiff claims in the suit as being in the possession of the defendant is really in the plaintiff's possession the clearest evidence should be adduced.

In this case there is no allegation or finding that any of the plaint properties is at the plaintiff's disposal or in his possession. The plaintiff's application for leave to sue in forma pauperis cannot be disposed of without a finding on this question.

There is no duty imposed on the plaintiff to raise funds by mortgaging the subject-matter of the litigation.— 37 T. L. R., 138.

The lower Court allowed the plaintiffs to sue in forma pauperis. The defendant preferred the revision and contended that the order of the lower Court was wrong inasmuch as there was no separate application for leave to sue in forma pauperis.

I. The original Bill reproduced Section 394 of Regulation II of 1065 which was the same as Section 409 of the Indian Code of 1882 now adopted as Rule 7 of the present Indian Code. The Select Committee substituted in Sub-Rule (1), the words "on either side" for the words "produced by either party", and in Sub-Rule (3) added at the end the words—"or direct that the application.........may allow."

II. In the Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the 1901 Bill to amend the Indian Civil Procedure Code, the following occurs in reference to Section 409 of the 1882 Code :—"In the second place, the opportunity has been taken to embody the decision in Skinner v. Orde (1879), L. R. 6. I. A. 126, to the effect that in the absence of fraud, an applicant may abandon his prayer to bring a suit as a pauper and, by paying the court-fees, convert his petition into a plaint, operating, for purposes of limitation, from the date of filing and not from that of the payment of court-fees."

Agreeably to the above, the 1901 amending Bill contained a Sub-section to Section 409 which, amended by the Select Committee, stood as follows :—"Where an application has been made for permission to institute a suit as a pauper, the applicant may, at any time before an order is made under this Section, convert his application into a plaint, by paying into Court the necessary court-fees, and, unless the Court, for reasons to be recorded considers the application to have been made in bad faith, such plaint shall, for the purposes of the law of limitation for the time being in force, be deemed to have been presented on the day on which the application was made and not on the day on which the court-fees are paid."

1. The language employed in Clause (b), Section 399 of the C. P. Costs where pauper succeeds.

Or. XXXIII, r. 10 [=S. 396 =Or. XXXIII, r. 10]

The latter part of Section 396 of the old Regulation was as follows:—"and such amount shall be a first charge on the subject-matter of the suit, and shall also be recoverable by the Government from any party ordered by the decree to pay the same, in the same manner as costs of suit are recoverable under this Code."

Case Law.

1. Government has power to recover the institution fees, in a pauper suit from the unsuccessful defendant independently of plaintiff; but a subsequent reversal of the original decree, on appeal, makes the Government liable to refund the fees so recovered.

The Court to which a decree in a pauper suit is transferred for execution, has power to decide questions relating to the recovery of institution fees.— 5 T. L. R. App., 12.

2. Where the plaintiffs when minors sued by their next friend in forma pauperis and the decree therein ordered the recovery of costs on a certain amount from the plaintiffs, the Sirkar in execution for costs attached the properties of the minors and then sought to execute the decree against their person. The plaintiffs contended that the decree was fraudulent. The lower Court held that the right to impeach the decree was barred and that they were personally liable. On appeal by the plaintiffs, the lower Court's order was reversed on the following findings :—

Though there is no express protection for minors from arrest under the Civil Procedure Code, it is necessarily implied. As the Criminal law declines to hold a minor below the age of seven responsible for his actions, it will be anomalous if there be nothing to prevent that same child being retrospectively made liable when he became sui juris for a civil liability.

Per T. Sadasiva Iyer, C. J.—Though the plaintiffs are now majors they were minors when the decree was passed. C. P. C. Section 420 [=Or. XXXII r. 1] does not mean that the minor plaintiff can also be made personally liable, but that the next friend shall not be liable usually, that the minor's estate should be usually made liable if the next friend had not acted very negligently or fraudulently and that in exceptional cases, however, the next friend can be made liable.

It is doubtful from the wording of Section 422, C. P. C., [=Or. XXXII, r. 2] whether, even in the case of a suit by a minor knowingly suing as a major, he can be made personally liable for costs and whether the pleader or other person who presents the plaint is not alone liable for the same.

The whole law of arrest of debtors arose out of the ancient vindictive views as to the debtor, the person having to be placed as a slave at the disposal of the creditor until the debt is discharged by service.— K. P., 455.

proceeded to recover the Court-fees personally from the first plaintiff. The latter objected, but his objections were overruled by the execution Court. The first plaintiff appealed from the above order.

Held.—As the plaintiffs had substantially succeeded in appeal, it was not obligatory on the Appellate Court to have directed them to pay the institution fees personally and, therefore, in the face of the appellate decree, the Sirkar should not recover the same from the plaintiffs personally.

The phrases "success" and "failure" in relation to a suit were used in Sections 396 and 397 C. P. C., [=r. 11], not as mere opposite terms, but as contradictories. "Failure" was a universal and not a particular negative of success. Any medium of success would prevent the result of a suit from being a failure within the meaning of Section 397. An entire absence of success would be a failure. When a suit is compromised, the plaintiff cannot be said to have failed within the meaning of the Section. The fact that he has obtained an agreement which he is willing to accept, prevents the result of his suit from depriving him entirely of all success. But if there is absolutely nothing gained by the suit so that the result is to leave the plaintiff in statu quo ante, or as in this case, by reason of his liability to pay costs, in a worse position, it would be a strain of language to say that the plaintiff had obtained any success of any kind or degree by his suit.—

"397. Procedure when pauper fails.—If the plaintiff fails in the suit, or if he is dispaupered, or if the suit is dismissed under Section 91 or 92, the Court shall order the plaintiff, or any person made under Section 28 co-plaintiff to the suit, to pay the court-fees which would have been paid by the plaintiff if he had not been permitted to sue as a pauper; and if it find that the suit was frivolous or vexatious, it may also punish the plaintiff with fine not exceeding one hundred rupees, or with imprisonment for a term which may extend to a month, or with both."

12. The Government shall have the right at any time to apply to the Court to make an order for the payment of court-fees under Rule 10 or Rule 11.

Government may apply for payment of court-fees.

13. All matters arising between the Government and any party to the suit under Rule 10, Rule 11 or Rule 12 shall be deemed to be questions arising between the parties to the suit within the meaning of Section 40.

Government to be deemed a party.

14. Where an order is made under Rule 10, Rule 11 or Rule 12, the Court shall forthwith cause a copy of the decree to be forwarded to the Government Pleader.

Copy of decree to be sent to Government Pleader.

15. An order refusing to allow the applicant to sue as a pauper shall be a bar to any subsequent application of the like nature by him in respect of the same right to sue; but the applicant shall be at liberty to institute a suit in the ordinary manner in respect of such right, provided that he first pays the costs (if any) incurred by the Government and by the opposite party in opposing his application for leave to sue as a pauper.

Refusal to allow applicant to sue as pauper to bar subsequent application of like nature.

Interpleader.

Plaint in interpleader suit.

1. In every suit of interpleader the plaint shall, in addition to the other statements necessary for plaints, state—

(a) that the plaintiff claims no interest in the subject-matter in dispute other than for charges or costs;

(b) the claims made by the defendants severally; and

(c) that there is no collusion between the plaintiff and any of the defendants.

Payment of thing claimed into Court.

2. Where the thing claimed is capable of being paid into Court or placed in the custody of the Court, the plaintiff may be required to so pay or place it before he can be entitled to any order in the suit.

presented to Court as required by Order XXXIII, Rule 3, and hence it was rejected under Rule 7. The petitioner filed another application and this was rejected on the ground that it was barred under Rule 15.

Held.—The order rejecting the first application did not operate as a bar. If the application had been rejected before notice, the petitioner could have filed a fresh application. It was the duty of the Court to have seen whether there were any formal defects before notice was issued on the application. It was unjust that the applicant should be put in a worse position by reason merely of the Court having failed to do its duty.— 19 T. L. J., *1325.

Procedure at first hearing.

4. (1) At the first hearing the Court may—

(a) declare that the plaintiff is discharged from all liability to the defendants in respect of the thing claimed, award him his costs, and dismiss him from the suit; or

(b) if it thinks that justice or convenience so require, retain all parties until the final disposal of the suit.

(2) Where the Court finds that admissions of the parties or other evidence enable it to do so, it may adjudicate the title to the thing claimed.

(3) Where the admissions of the parties do not enable the Court so to adjudicate, it may direct—

(a) that an issue or issues between the parties be framed and tried, and

(b) that any claimant be made a plaintiff in lieu of or in addition to the original plaintiff,

2. Sub-Rule (2) is the same as Section 461 of the old Regulation. This Section was omitted in the original Bill, but was restored and added as a Sub-Rule by the Select Committee. Section 482 of the British Indian Code of 1882 which contained provision for payment of subsistence allowance to defendants, has been omitted in the existing Code in view of the insertion of a new Section (134) in the body of that Code, applicable to all persons arrested under the Code. Or. XXXVI, r. 5 [= Ss. 462, 463 =Or. XXXVIII, r. 5]

I. 1. This Rule incorporates, with modifications, Sections 462 and 463 of the old Regulation, which were as follow :—

(b) is about to remove the whole or any part of his property from the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, or

(c) has quitted the jurisdiction of the Court leaving therein property belonging to him, the Court may direct the defendant, within a time to be fixed by it, either to furnish security in such sum as may be specified in the order, to produce and place at the disposal of the Court, when required, the said property or the value of the same or such protion thereof as may be sufficient to satisfy the decree, or to appear and show cause why he should not furnish security.

(2) The plaintiff shall, unless the Court otherwise directs, specify the property required to be attached and the estimated value thereof.

(3) The Court may also in the order direct the conditional attachment of the whole or any portion of the property so specified.

"462. Application before judgment for security from defendant to satisfy decree, and in default, for attachment of property.—If, at any stage of any suit, the plaintiff satisfies the Court by affidavit or otherwise that the defendant, with intent to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him,

(a) is about to dispose of the whole or any part of his property, or to remove the same from the jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit is pending, or has concealed any part of his property, or

(b) has quitted the jurisdiction of the Court, leaving therein property belonging to him, the plaintiff may apply to the Court to call upon the defendant to furnish security to satisfy any decree that may be passed against him in such suit and on his failing to give such security, to direct that any portion of his property within the jurisdiction of the Court shall be attached until the further order of the Court.

Contents of application.—The application shall, unless the Court otherwise directs, specify the property required to be attached and the estimated value thereof."

"463. Court may call on defendant to furnish security or show cause.—If the Court, after examining the applicant and making any further investigation which it thinks fit, is satisfied that the defendant is about to dispose of or remove his property or has concealed any part of his property with intent to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him in the suit, or that he has, with such intent, quitted the jurisdiction of the Court, leaving therein property belonging to him, the Court may require him, within a time to be fixed by the Court, either to furnish security in such sum as may be specified in the order, to produce and place at the disposal of the Court, when required, the said property or the value of the same, or such portion thereof as may be sufficient to satisfy the decree, or to appear and show cause why he should not furnish security.

The Court may also in the order direct the conditional attachment of the whole or any portion of the property specified in the application."

2. Section 484 of the Indian Code of 1882 did not contain the words 'or has concealed any part of his property' found in the corresponding Section 468 of the Regulation. They were added, "fraudulent concealment of property being a proper ground for calling upon the defendant to find security."— S. O & R., Para 65.

II. Sub-Rule (1).—Clause (c) was not in the original Bill. It was added by the Select Committee who said that "the change was made to restore the existing provision." Barring Clause (c), the Rule, with the three Sub-Rules, is the same as the corresponding Rule in the British Indian Code.

III. In regard to the omission of the words "property within the jurisdiction of the Court" which occurred in the penultimate para of Section 483 of the old Indian Code (see Section 462 of the old Regulation above), the Indian Special Committee said:—

"The Committee have omitted the words 'property within the jurisdiction of the Court,' as they have caused a conflict of decision; and they think, as a matter of policy, there should not be the restriction these words suggest."

IV. For Form of Attachment before judgment, with Order to call for security, see Appendix F, Form No. 5.

Case Law.

1. The examination of plaintiff is obligatory before the granting of an order for attachment before judgment, even though he has filed an affidavit.— 26 T. L. R., 72.

2. The jurisdiction given to Civil Courts to attach before judgment should be exercised with great discretion and no Court should grant such an attachment on light grounds or unless it is perfectly satisfied by trustworthy evidence that the defendant is about to dispose of his property or to remove it from the jurisdiction of the Court. In all applications for attachment before judgment, there must be uberrima fides on the part of the plaintiff and where the most perfect good faith is wanting, the application should be rejected.

An order directing conditional attachment should not be passed as a matter of course. Section 463 C. P. C., no doubt gives discretion to order a conditional attachment, but the order should show that the discretion has been properly and judicially exercised.— 13 T. L. J., 13.

3. In a suit on a hypothecation deed, the plaintiff applied for an attachment before judgment, of the crops on the hypothecated properties.

Held.—No doubt the crops on the hypothecated properties were part of the property of the defendants and might be attached before judgment, and it was also possible that the defendants might seek to protract the suit with a view to remain in possession of the hypothecated properties as long as possible. However, within the ordinary meaning of words as used in Order XXXVI, Rule 5 (1) (a), the defendants who proposed to consume the yield of the properties in the ordinary way could not be said to be about to dispose of the whole or any part of these properties with intent to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that might be passed against them.— 18 T. ### Case Law.

1. The contention that only such orders of withdrawal of attachment are appealable as are made on the defendant's showing cause against the attachment or on his furnishing security as provided in Clause (2) of Section 464, has nothing to support it. There is nothing in Section 557, Clause (24), [= new Section 82, Or. XLII, r. 1] to warrant the inference that the right of appeal conferred thereby is qualified or limited in the manner contended. On principle also, such a construction cannot be accepted. When a right of appeal is given to the plaintiff even in cases where an attachment is withdrawn on the production of security or on sufficient cause being shown against an attachment, it would be strange indeed if no right of appeal is given where an attachment is withdrawn when those conditions are not fulfilled. It is more reasonable to hold that the right of appeal depends upon the nature of the order that is actually passed irrespective of the circumstances under which it was passed. If the order finally withdraws the attachment, there would be a right of appeal.—
15 T. L. J., 352.

2. A security deed, when it is accepted by the Court, takes effect from the time of its execution and not from the date of its acceptance by the Court.

An attachment of immovable property does not become effective when the order is made, but only when the attachment is effected.— 19 T. L. J., 748.

3. The application for attachment before judgment was made under Section 462 [Or. XXXVI, r. 5] on 13-2-1101. Before notice was issued on this application, the counter-petitioner voluntarily appeared in Court on 14-2-1101 and contested the application. The Court enquired into the matter. The parties were examined and a number of documents were adduced in evidence. After hearing both sides, the Court passed the order rejecting the application.

On appeal the question arose whether the order rejecting the application was one passed under Section 463 [=Or. XXXVI, r. 5 ] and non-appealable or under Section 464 and appealable as provided for in Section 557 (24) [ =Section 82 and Or. XLII, r. 1 ].

Joseph Thaliath, J.—The importance in differentiating whether an order is passed under Section 463 or 464 lies more in the fact whether such order is prior or subsequent to the full enquiry contemplated under Section 464 than to any mere forms of procedure like issuing of notice, &c., prescribed in the Code.

When the defendant entered appearance before he was called upon to show cause, it should be taken as if he has asked the Court to dispense with the preliminary enquiry and to hear his defence. It is doubtful whether he could have claimed any locus standi unless the enquiry was being conducted by the Court under Section 464.

An order passed under Section 464, whether it be favourable or unfavourable to the plaintiff, is appealable. Section 557, Clause 24, does not restrict the appeals to orders passed against the defendant. The enquiry conducted by the lower Court is one provided by Section 464, and not the preliminary enquiry contemplated by Section 463, and the order passed after such an enquiry is one passed under Section 464 and hence it is appealable.

Boothalingom Aiyer, J.—An order refusing the attachment before the defendant was required to furnish security or to show cause why he should not do so, is one which was passed before reaching the stage contemplated by Section 464, and it should be viewed as having been made under Section 463. The circumstance that the defendant voluntarily appeared and opposed the application at the preliminary stage makes no difference.

The further investigation referred to in Section 463 must embrace also the reception of the rebutting evidence offered by the defendant who chooses to appear voluntarily.

The order of refusal of the application, though not expressly provided for in Section 463 [as in Section 471 ( = Or. XXXVII, r. 1) relating to application for temporary injunction] is obviously implied in the provision as it is the only possible order which could be made where the Court is not satisfied that any ground is made out in support of the application.

The order in question, therefore, falls under Section 463, having been made before the last stage referred to in Section 464 was reached. No appeal is provided for from the order under Section 463.

On this difference of opinion, the case was referred to the Chief Justice.

Per Chatfield, C. J.—The test as to the Section under which the order passed by the lower Court falls is the following :—

If the Court had been of opinion that a case for attachment had been made out, would it have been necessary to issue notice again to the defendant as provided in Section 463, or could an order of attachment have at once been made.

Before an order can be passed under Section 464, the defendant must have failed to show cause why he should not furnish security and must also have failed to furnish security required in the notice given to him by the Court. In this case, on his appearance before the Court without notice, the defendant might have failed to show cause why he should give security. But a final order of attachment could not have been passed against him, as he had not been given an opportunity to deposit security. The order of the lower Court was not one under Section 464, and the appeal, therefore, is not competent.

Section 557 (24) refer to orders under Section 464. Presumably an order refusing the jurisdiction conferred by this Section is as much an order passed under the Section, as an order in exercise of that jurisdiction.— 43 T. L. R., 366.

From the wide terms in which Section 466 is enacted, it is clear that the Court is invested with the power to investigate and dispose of the claim thereunder preferred either before or after the judgment in the suit. ## ORDER XXXVII.

Temporary Injunctions and Interlocutory Orders.

Temporary Injunctions.

Cases in which temporary injunction may be granted.

1. Where in any suit it is proved by affidavit or otherwise—

(a) that any property in dispute in a suit is in danger of being wasted, damaged or alienated by any party to the suit, or wrongfully sold in execution of a decree, or

(b) that the defendant threatens, or intends, to remove or dispose of his property with a view to defraud his creditors, the Court may by order grant a temporary injunction to restrain such act, or make such other order for the purpose of staying and preventing the wasting, damaging, alienation, sale, removal or disposition of the property as the Court thinks fit, until the disposal of the suit or until further orders.

Case Law.

1. The contemplated ouster of plaintiff whose possession is admitted, entitles him to a temporary injunction to prevent the ouster pending the decision of his claim to a permanent occupancy right.

An order refusing to grant an interlocutory injunction is appealable.—

2. Where a Zillah Judge ordered the issue of an injunction to one who was not a party to the suit;

Held.—Under Section 471 read along with Sections 473 and 476 [Or. XXXVII, r. 3 & Sec. 75] of the Civil Procedure Code, an injunction could be issued only to a party to the suit and not to a stranger who has not the opportunity of showing cause against the application for injunction or of claiming damages or compensation in the suit itself for the issue of the injunction on insufficient grounds.— 14 T. L. R. App., 50.

3. Temporary injunctions granting the same relief as are asked for in the plaint ought to be very sparingly granted and only in exceptional cases, unless the plaintiff's case is prima facie a strong one.—

3 S. D., 387.

4. Plaintiff filed a suit in the Trivandrum District Court against the defendant and obtained an unconditional order prohibiting the defendant from executing a decree obtained by the latter in the Tinnevelly Sub-Court. The defendant contended that the Trivandrum District Judge had no jurisdiction to pass an order against the execution of a decree of a British Indian Court, and that the Judge ought not to have passed an unconditional order.

Held.—(1) Though the Trivandrum District Court cannot grant an injunction against the British Indian Court, it can issue an order against the defendant prohibiting him from executing his decree at his peril and that though the terms of Section 471 may not apply, the Courts have inherent powers beyond those given expressly by the C. P. C. when such inherent powers are necessary to prevent injustice and to avoid passing infructuous decrees.

(2) In granting injunctions in such cases, it would be better if some conditions, such as directing plaintiff to furnish security for any damages which might be incurred by the defendant as the result of the injunction prayed for are imposed: for otherwise, the defendant might lose by limitation his right to execute the British Indian decree.—

3 S. D., 390.

Ref.—18 T. L. J., 966.

5. A Munsiff's Court is competent to issue an injunction restraining proceedings in execution pending before a Panchayat Court, and the Panchayat Court is bound to respect the injunction.

If the executing Court has notice of the injunction, the effect of which is to preserve the subject in controversy in statu quo by stopping the mischief complained of, it would stay the sale, and not persist, as in the case, the Panchayat Court had done in assisting the decree-holder to do what he was ordered not to do by a Court of competent jurisdiction. However, the property sold was movable property, and a sale in contravention of a temporary injunction is not invalid.—

12. T. L. J., 311.

6. The defendants 1 and 2 obtained a decree against the plaintiff and his son V for balance of unpaid purchase money charged on the plaint property. The plaintiff who had been impleaded in that suit as the mortgagee of V did not contest the suit and a decree was made against him ex parte. He afterwards sought to set aside the ex parte decree: but failed both in the primary and the Appellate Courts. He then instituted the present suit to cancel that decree and proceedings in execution, and also applied for the issue of a temporary injunction. The lower Court refused the application for the issue of an injunction. Against the order of the lower Court refusing the application for the issue of an injunction, the present appeal was preferred to the High Court.

Held.—The exercise of the jurisdiction to grant relief by the issue of an injunction is not a matter ex debito justitiae but is one which is entirely within the discretion of the Court. The Court is not bound to grant such relief merely because it is lawful to do so. The jurisdiction of the Court in this matter being equitable, its interference is governed upon equitable principles. Therefore, the Court always looks to the conduct of the party who makes the application, and will refuse to interfere, even in cases where it acknowledges a right, unless his conduct in the matter is fair and honest.

It is a well-known rule that the Court must, before disturbing any man's legal right, or stripping him of any of the rights with which the law has clothed him, be satisfied that the probability is in favour of his case ultimately failing in the final issue of the suit.

Where an appeal attacks the exercise of discretion, before the Appellate Court will interfere in favour of the appellant, he must satisfy such Court that the discretion has been improperly exercised.—

7. The provisions of Section 15, Clause (1) of the Limitation Regulation have received a liberal interpretation in Travancore and British India, in enabling parties to exclude the time, during which execution has been stayed by an injunction order. What has to be looked to in such cases is whether there has been substantially a stay of the proceedings. The benefit of the rule can be applied to cases of orders which directly but very proximately and effectively cause a stay. Where the object of the order is virtually to restrain or put a clog on the execution of the decree, Section 15 should be applied.

Even if the injunction or order relates only to a portion of the decree, it is operative for purposes of Section 15 of the Limitation Regulation, with respect to the whole of the decree. The principle underlying this is that the decree-holder could not be compelled to adopt a particular mode of executing his decree, as his discretion in choosing the best course therefore, should be left unfettered.

Where no time with respect to the duration of the order granting the injunction, is prescribed by the Court, the time during which it should be held operative must be determined on general principles relating to injunctions ad litem, there being no specification of duration in Rules 1 and 2 of Order XXXVII, both relating to injunctions.

"The sole obect of temporary and interlocutory injunctions is to preserve the subject in controversy in its then condition, and without determining any question of right merely to prevent the further perpetration of wrong or the doing of any act whereby the right in controversy may be materially injured or endangered."

Rules of procedure are intended to enable the Courts to act ex debito justitiae and to do real and substantial justice.

"It is the duty of the Judges to apply the laws, not only to what appears to be regulated by their express dispositions but to all the cases to which a just application of them may be made and which appear to be comprehended either within the express sense of the law or within the consequences that may be gathered from it."

What the Courts have to look to in the exercise of the inherent powers under Section 115 is that the expressions of the Code or of any other law for the time being in force should not be transgressed or contravened in the invocation of such powers, and the Courts have always to utilise such powers in the interests of justice, equity and good conscience.

Bearing the above principles in mind, it may be laid down that the provisional remedies by way of orders relating to temporary injunctions, receivers, and other kindred matters, which are intended to afford relief to plaintiffs in actions against possible damage or prejudice by any act of the defendants should be held operative in appropriate cases so as to make the remedy effectively available for their benefit. Such orders would ipso facto cease to have any force when the suit is dismissed, for the Court then becomes functus officio. Where suits are eventually decreed in favour of the plaintiff, orders of this nature should be deemed to have binding force till expressly discharged by the Court or the interests of the plaintiffs are sufficiently safeguarded otherwise.

Hence the injunction continues to have binding force till the final disposal of the suit for the smaller sum by the Appellate Court. By the grant of the injunction staying the execution of the decree, the same should be taken to have been suspended till the cancellation of the order. Even if a fresh application for execution has been filed that could have been only by way of revivor or continuation of the former proceeding.

The expression "produce" in Section 242 [ = Or. XXI, r. 16 ] has to be construed in its ordinary sense. If at all the provisions of Chapter X of the Code (1065) relating to the production of documents and the standing orders issued under Section 591 [ new Section 91 ] alone could govern such production.

Where no judicial order disposing of the execution application for the larger sum, which was subject to the injunction had been passed, the decree-holder therein has the right to the benefit of Section 242, C. P. C. (of 1065).— 18 T. L. J., 816.

Fol.—19 T. L. J., 1071.

8. It is open to the Court to issue a temporary injunction even in cases where the property has been sold in execution of the decree. The expression "wrongfully sold in execution of the decree" in Order XXXVII, Rule 1, may reasonably be taken to include also the actual transfer of possession under the sale.

The Sections of the Civil Procedure Code do not exhaust the powers of the Court to issue injunctions. The issue of an injunction may be supported on the inherent power of the Court under its general equity jurisdiction to do what is necessary to subserve the ends of justice.— 18 T. L. J., 966.

9. Civil Courts should not be allowed to restrain a Magistrate from executing his order passed under Section 366, Criminal Procedure Code, by an injunction, on a mere prima facie case established in the Civil Courts. The case will be different when the Civil Court gives a decree after a full enquiry about the relationship of the parties.

In granting injunctions, the Court operates in personam, and there is no reason for thinking that the Indian Legislature when it spoke of staying proceedings by injunction intended any departure from that practice. The injunction therefore operates not only as regards a Court but also the parties concerned.—

2. (1) In any suit for restraining the defendant from committing a breach of contract or other injury of any kind, whether compensation is claimed in the suit or not, the plaintiff may, at any time after the commencement of the suit, and either before or after judgment, apply to the Court for a temporary injunction to restrain the defendant from committing the breach of contract or injury complained of, or any breach of contract or injury of a like kind arising out of the same contract or relating to the same property or right.

Injunction to restrain repetition or continuance of breach.

(2) The Court may by order grant such injunction, on such terms as to the duration of the injunction, keeping an account, giving security, or otherwise, as the Court thinks fit.

10. The Civil Procedure Code contemplates no interim injunction after the opposite party has received notice of the application and filed his objections. The order granting the injunction at such a stage, in whatever form or words it might be stated, has to be regarded as falling under Rule 1 or Rule 2 of Order XXXVII, as the case may be, and consequently to be held as appealable under Order XLII, Rule 1, Clause (21).

An order for temporary injunction cannot be granted under Rule 2 which corresponds to Section 472 of the old Code, except in aid of the prospective order for permanent injunction prayed for in the plaint.— 44 T. L. R., 404.

11. Normally, an injunction granted on an interlocutory application is superseded by the judgment in the action; and if the suit is dismissed, the temporary injunction issued will come to an end, as the suit ceases to be a pending suit and the Court which dismissed it would have no jurisdiction either to continue or maintain the injunction originally granted or to issue a fresh injunction in respect of the matter in suit.— 19 T. L. J., 1071.

2. In Sub-Rule (2), the words "or refuse the same" which occurred after the words "as the Court thinks fit" at the end of the corresponding second para in the old Section, have been omitted.

3. Paras 3 and 4 of the old Section corresponding to Sub-Rules (3) and (4) were as follow :—

"In case of disobedience, an injunction granted under this Section or Section 471 may be enforced by the imprisonment of the defendant for a term not exceeding six months or the attachment of his property or both.

"No attachment under this Section shall remain in force for more than one year, at the end of which time, if the defendant has not obeyed the injunction, the property attached may be sold, and out of the proceeds the Court may award to the plaintiff such compensation as it thinks fit, and may pay the balance, if any, to the defendant."

1. A District Judge granted an injunction under Section 472, C. P. C., in reversal

(3) In case of disobedience, or of breach of any such terms, the Court granting an injunction may order the property of the person guilty of such disobedience or breach to be attached, and may also order such person to be detained in the civil prison for a term not exceeding six months, unless in the meantime the Court directs his release.

(4) No attachment under this Rule shall remain in force for more than one year, at the end of which time, if the disobedience or breach continues, the property attached may be sold, and out of the proceeds, the Court may award such compensation as it thinks fit, and shall pay the balance, if any, to the party entitled thereto.

of the order passed by a District Munsiff. When an application for revision of the Judge's order was made by the first defendant, the petitioner, under Section 568 [new Section 89], the counter-petitioner opposed it on the ground that the first defendant's remedy lay under Section 575 or 560 [= Or. XLV, rr. 7 & 9 or Section 83 (1)], but not under Section 568.

Held.—To prevent grave and irreparable loss, the interference of the High Court under Section 568 was necessary in the interest of justice and the word "case" in that Section would cover an interlocutory order passed during the progress of a suit and the phrase "records of any case" occurring in the same Section would include so much of the proceedings in a suit as related to the interlocutory order.

A District Judge should, before granting an injunction in reversal of a District Munsiff's order, satisfy himself that prima facie the suit was within the cognisance of the District Munsiff.

As the suit in question was for declaration of a trust, the purpose and object of which were not definite enough to warrant a decree for specific performance, the District Judge was wrong in granting the injunction.— 14 T. L. R. App., 22.

2. A scheme for the management of the Ananthanarayanapuram Devaswom was framed by the High Court as part of a Full Bench decree. The scheme provided for the removal of members of the Committee of management for misconduct, on application made by any person interested in the Devaswom. One such application was put in and the petitioner prayed for an injunction to restrain the president and certain members from exercising their functions until the disposal of the application.

The District Judge granted the injunction prayed for under Sections 472 and 584, Civil Procedure Code.

Held.—Section 584, C. P. C., [new Sec. 105] was not applicable to proceedings in execution of decrees.

The application for removal of the president and members for misconduct was not an application in execution of the decree under which the scheme was prepared, but was in the nature of an application to make a supplemental decree.

Per Hunt, J.—The provisions of the Code are not exhaustive. Courts have an inherent jurisdiction to do that justice for which alone they exist.

The granting of an injunction order is discretionary with the Court.

Per Ramachandra Rao, J.—In these matters (in the matter of granting injunction orders), the opinion of the lower Court is entitled to much weight and is liable to be set aside only if it is vague, arbitrary or fanciful.— 26 T. L. R., 162.

3. A obtained a personal decree against S and took out execution against R who had stood surety for the decree amount. R instituted a suit for setting aside the decree on the ground of fraud and collusion and applied for a temporary injunction to stay the execution of the decree. The Munsiff granted the injunction. On appeal:

Held.—(1) Section 472 C. P. C. under which the order appealed against had been made, did not apply to a case in which there was no prayer for restraining the defendant from causing any injury to the plaintiff.

(2) An order for temporary injunction could be sought only in aid of the prospective order for permanent injunction. As the plaintiff could not obtain a decree for perpetual injunction in the suit which was solely for a declaration, it was not competent to him to ask for a temporary injunction.— 39 T. L. R., 172.

4. When there is no prayer in the plaint for restraining the defendant from committing an injury but only one for setting aside a decree in a prior case obtained by the defendant and declaring that he is not entitled to execute the same against the plaintiff and the plaintiff applied for a temporary injunction to stay the execution of the decree:

Held.—Section 472, C. P. C., does not apply as there is no prayer in the plaint for restraining the defendant from causing any injury to the plaintiff and the temporary injunction cannot be granted.—

14 T. L. J., 363.

5. A temporary injunction under Section 472 can be sought only in aid of a prospective order for a perpetual injunction. In the absence of any prayer for perpetual injunction as a substantive relief in the suit, an application for a temporary injunction cannot be treated as one falling under Section 472.—

18 T. L. J., 74.

6. A temporary injunction under Order XXXVII, Rule 2, can be sought only in aid of prospective order for a perpetual injunction and in the absence of a prayer in the suit for any perpetual injunction, no temporary injunction can be asked for.

To sustain an application for temporary injunction the applicant should, among other things, satisfy the Court that he has a fair and substantial prima facie case in support of the right he claims. This does not mean that he should make out a clear legal title.

An interlocutory injunction should not be lightly granted. "The power of granting an injunction is one which has been perhaps a little lavishly bestowed upon the Courts in this country. It is a tremendous power and one which the superior Courts must carefully guard themselves from exercising hastily or without solid grounds." A person who seeks the aid of the Court by way of interlocutory injunction must be able to satisfy the Court that its interference is necessary to protect him from that species of injury which the Court calls irreparable before the legal right can be established upon trial.

In granting or withholding an injunction, the Courts should exercise a judicial discretion and weigh the amount of substantial mischief done or threatened to the plaintiff and compare it with that which the injunction, if granted, would inflict on the defendant.

In dealing with an application for temporary injunction, "the Court always looks to the conduct of the party who makes the application and will refuse to interfere, even in cases where it acknowledges a right, unless his conduct in the matter is fair and honest."— 43 T. L. R., 65.

II. In regard to the addition of the words at the end of the Rule—" or which for any other just......sold at once"—the Indian Special Committee observed :—" Words have been added to Section 498 so as to empower the Court to order a sale of securities where the state of the market requires such a course."

7. (1) The Court may, on the application of any party to a suit, and on such terms as it thinks fit,—

Detention, preservation, inspection, etc., of subject-matter of suit.

(b) for all or any of the purposes aforesaid authorise any person to enter upon or into any land or building in the possession of any other party to such suit; and

(c) for all or any of the purposes aforesaid authorise any samples to be taken, or any observation to be made or experiment to be tried, which may seem necessary or expedient for the purpose of obtaining full information or evidence.

(2) The provisions as to execution of process shall apply, mutatis mutandis, to persons authorised to enter under this Rule.

8. (1) An application by the plaintiff for an order under Rule 6 or Rule 7 may be made after notice to the defendant at any time after institution of the suit.

Application for such orders to be after notice.

This Rule reproduces Section 478 of Regulation II of 1065, with the addition to Clause (a) of the words—"or as to which any question may arise therein." With this addition, the Rule reproduces the English Rule.

Or. XXXVII, r. 8 [= S. 479
= Or. XXXIX, r. 8]

The first para of Section 479 of the old Regulation corresponding to Sub-Rule (1) was as follows:—"An application by the plaintiff......to the defendant at any time after service of the summons."

Under the modification made by the Sub-Rule, "the plaintiff is enabled to get any emergent order subsequent to the filing of the suit, instead of, as at present, only after service of summons."—

When party may be put in immediate possession of land, the subject-matter of suit.

9. Where land paying revenue to the Government, or a tenure liable to sale, is the subject-matter of a suit, if the party in possession of such land or tenure neglects to pay the Government revenue, or the rent due to the proprietor of the tenure, as the case may be, and such land or tenure is consequently ordered to be sold, any other party to the suit claiming to have an interest in such land or tenure may, upon payment of the revenue or rent due previously to the sale (and with or without security at the discretion of the Court), be put in immediate possession of the land or tenure; and the Court in its decree may award against the defaulter the amount so paid, with interest thereon at such rate as the Court thinks fit, or may charge the amount so paid, with interest thereon at such rate as the Court orders, in any adjustment of accounts which may be directed in the decree passed in the suit.

Deposit of money, etc., in Court.

10. Where the subject-matter of a suit is money or some other thing capable of delivery and any party thereto admits that he holds such money or other thing as a trustee for another party, or that it belongs or is due to another party, the Court may order the same to be deposited in Court or delivered to such last-named party, with or without security, subject to the further direction of the Court.

Case Law.

Under Section 481, a Court is competent to direct a party to deposit a sum of money in Court, provided, among other things, there is pending before it a suit the subject-matter of which is money and a party thereto admits that the money is due from him to another party.

The Section cannot be confined to cases where one party admits that he is in possession of money actually belonging to another party, as distinguished from money which is only due to another.

The Section is obviously enacted for the purpose of arming the Court with the necessary powers in the matter of passing interlocutory orders, for the purpose of safeguarding the interests of parties pending suit, in certain prescribed contingencies.— 17 T. L. J., 680.

ORDER XXXVIII.

Appointment of Receivers.

Appointment of receivers.

1. (1) Where it appears to the Court to be just and convenient, the Court may by order—

(a) appoint a receiver of any property, whether before or after decree;

(b) remove any person from the possession or custody of the property;

(c) commit the same to the possession, custody or management of the receiver; and

(d) confer upon the receiver all such powers, as to bringing and defending suits and for the realization, management, protection, preservation and improvement of the property, the collection of the rents and profits thereof, the application and disposal of such rents and profits, and the execution of documents as the owner himself has, or such of those powers as the Court thinks fit,

(2) Nothing in this Rule shall authorise the Court to remove from the possession or custody of property any person whom any party to the suit has not a present right so to remove.

Remuneration.

2. The Court may by general or special order fix the amount to be paid as remuneration for the services of the receiver.

Duties.

3. Every receiver so appointed shall—

(a) furnish such security (if any) as the Court thinks fit, duly to account for what he shall receive in respect of the property;

(b) submit his accounts at such periods and in such form as the Court directs;

(c) pay the amount due from him as the Court directs; and

(d) be responsible for any loss occasioned to the property by his wilful default or gross negligence.

Or. XXXVIII, r. 1 [= S. 482
= Or. XL, r. 1]

Or. XXXVIII, r. 2 [= S. 482
= Or. XL, r. 2]

Or. XXXVIII, r. 3 [= S. 482

I. Section 482 of Regulation II of 1065 which covers the above three Rules, was as follows :—

" 482. Power of Court to appoint receivers.—Whenever it appears to the Court to be necessary for the realization, preservation or better custody or management of any property, movable or immovable, the subject of a suit, or under attachment, the Court may by order—

(a) appoint a receiver of such property, and, if need be,

(b) remove the person in whose possession or custody the property may be from the possession or custody thereof ;

(c) commit the same to the custody or management of such receiver ; and,

(d) grant to such receiver such fee or commission on the rents and profits of the property by way of remuneration, and all such powers as to bringing and defending suits, and for the realization, management, protection, preservation and improvement of the property, the collection of the rents and profits thereof, the application and disposal of such rents and profits, and the execution of instruments in writing, as the owner himself has, or such of those powers as the Court thinks fit.

Receiver's liabilities.—Every receiver so appointed shall

(e) give such security (if any) as the Court thinks fit duly to account for what he shall receive in respect of the property ;

(f) pass his accounts at such periods and in such form as the Court directs ;

(g) pay the balance due from him thereon as the Court directs ; and

(h) be responsible for any loss occasioned to the property by his wilful default or gross negligence.

Nothing in this Section authorizes the Court to remove from the possession or custody of property under attachment any person whom the parties to the suit or, some or one of them, have or has not a present right so to remove."

II. In regard to Rule 1, the Notes on Clauses say :—" This Rule considerably enlarges the powers of the Court to appoint receivers, the only limitation on such powers being that the Court should be of opinion that it is convenient as well as just to make the appointment. The existing Code restricts the powers in two ways :—

(i) Property which is the subject of suit, or under attachment, may alone be handed over to a receiver.

(ii) It must appear necessary that the appointment of a receiver would achieve the realisation, preservation, or the better custody or management of such property.

There is no reason why, at the present time, at all events, there should be such restriction. It will be seen from Sub-Rule (2) that no stranger to the suit may be disturbed. It is but right that the parties to a suit should be under the absolute control of the Court, in order to render complete justice between the parties."

III. For Form of Appointment of a Receiver under Rule 1, see Appendix F, Form No. 9.

For Form of Bond to be given by Receiver, see Appendix F, Form No. 10.

IV. 1. Chapter XXXV of Regulation II of 1065 which dealt with "Appointment of Receivers" had three Sections—482, 483 and 484. The first two have been incorporated in the new Regulation, while the last has been omitted. It was as follows:—

"484. Courts empowered under this Chapter.—The powers conferred by this Chapter shall be exercised only by the High Court and District Courts: Provided that, whenever the Judge of a Court subordinate to a District Court considers it expedient that a receiver should be appointed in any suit before him, he shall nominate such person as he considers fit for such appointment, and submit such person's name, with the grounds for the nomination, to the District Court, and the District Court shall authorize such Judge to appoint the person so nominated, or pass such other order as it thinks fit."

2. In 39 T. L. R., 99 (13 T. L. J., 11) the procedure for appointment of receivers was laid down.

In this case, a District Judge by an order expressed his opinion that upon the facts before him, the plaintiff's prayer for the appointment of a receiver ought to be allowed and directed the plaintiff to produce a proper man for nomination to the District Court under Section 484. The defendant appealed from that order. It was held that the order was only a preliminary one falling under Section 484, and no appeal lay from such an order.

Case Law.

1. There is nothing in the Code of Civil Procedure which limits the power of the Court to appoint a receiver after decree, if such a course is necessary or proper.

Plaintiff held a hypothecation decree over the equity of redemption in properties of his judgment-debtors. The latter, with a view to defeat plaintiff's rights and acting in collusion with the mortgagees, nearly allowed their decree for a redemption to become barred. Under these circumstances, the plaintiff applied to the Court to appoint a receiver for executing the redemption decree. It was contended that the provisions of Section 482 of the Code of Civil Procedure, did not cover a case like the present and that the plaintiff could execute the redemption decree only after purchasing the equity of redemption in Court-sale in execution of his hypothecation decree.

Held.—Section 482 should receive a liberal construction. The subject-matter of the suit being the equity of redemption of the properties, its preservation was absolutely necessary by appointing a receiver to execute the redemption decree.—

2. During the term of attachment placed on a property by a Magistrate, though the receiver appointed by the Court was the person in possession of the property, such possession must be held to have been for and on behalf of the person who had been in possession on the date of attachment,

"The receiver in a suit is nothing more than the hand of the Court for the purpose of holding the property of the litigants whenever it is necessary that it should be kept in the grasp of the Court in order to preserve the subject-matter of the suit pendente lite, and the possession of the receiver is simply the possession of the Court and whatever he rightly does with regard to the property, he does simply as the agent of the owner of the property.—

Ref.—16 T. L. J., 225.

3. In a suit for the settlement of a scheme of management for a mosque, the property of the mosque is the subject-matter of the suit for the purpose of Section 482, C. P. C., and the Court has jurisdiction to appoint a receiver if it is convinced that there is a justification for such appointment.

The exercise of the jurisdiction to appoint a receiver is not a matter ex debito justitiae, but one which is purely within the discretion of the Court: the Court is not bound to grant such relief merely because it is lawful to do so. In exercising its discretion, the Court shall proceed with the greatest care and caution; and the appointment of a receiver is a step which should not be taken without special reasons, particularly in the case of a bona fide possessor with legal title.— 10 T. L. J., 88.

4. The appointment as well as the removal of a receiver, is a matter which rests in the sound discretion of the Court. A receiver being an impartial person as between the parties and being the Officer of the Court and representative of the Court in the management and control of the property in controversy, considerable importance attaches to the question of his selection. Inasmuch as a receiver is required to be an impartial person, the person chosen should, as a general rule, be wholly disinterested in the subject-matter of the suit. One of the parties to a cause shall not be appointed receiver without the consent of the other party, unless a very special case is made.

The power of the Court to remove a receiver whom it has appointed is a necessary adjunct of the power of appointment, and is exercised as an incident to or consequence of that power.

The right to propose a proper person for the office of receiver rests in the first instance with the parties. The object being the proper preservation of the property pending the suit, no person other than those interested in it can be expected to suggest the most competent person for the office; and all bona fide representations of the parties regarding the qualifications of the persons suggested for the office are entitled to great consideration at the hands of the Court. The Court is no doubt not bound to appoint the person proposed by the parties, if he does not appear to the Court to be a proper person: but where the parties are agreed or practically agreed as to the person to be appointed, the Court may make the appointment without much further enquiry.

When the lower Court has in the exercise of its judgment made its selection, the Appellate Court will not interfere unless some over-whelming objection in point of propriety or some fatal objection in principle to the person appointed is shown.

As a general rule, every receiver appointed must give security, duly to account for what he shall receive in respect of the property: and if as in exceptional cases, no security is to be given, it should be so stated in the order. The appointment of the receiver is for the ultimate benefit of the party or parties to whom the Court shall by its decisions award the property: and this ultimate benefit which the Court must constantly have in view renders it essential that the Court should take the necessary steps to safeguard the estate from the injurious consequences of the receiver's illegal or negligent acts or omissions. The necessity for taking proper security becomes all the more stringent when the receiver is appointed to collect outstandings and take possession of the properties and the order grants remuneration for his work.—37 T. L. R., 245

5. The appointment of a receiver is a matter which is purely within the discretion of the Court and the exercise of this, like all other matters of judicial discretion, will rarely be interfered with by an appellate tribunal. The opinion of the primary Courts is, in a matter like this, of great weight. It has the facts and the parties before it and is perhaps the best tribunal to decide whether it is necessary or expedient, having regard to the circumstances, that a receiver should be appointed. And a party who in appeal attacks the exercise of this discretion should show that the discretion has been improperly so exercised. As regards the selection of a receiver, the lower Court's decision will be interfered with if some 'over-whelming objection in point of propriety of choice or some objection fatal in principle,' to the person selected be shown.— 10 T. L. J., 309.

6. A receiver can be appointed under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code in a suit to enforce a mortgage.— 10 T. L. J., 337.

Fol.—12 T. L. J., 195.

7. Where an appeal was preferred by an interim receiver against an order of a District Judge directing him to furnish further security for continuing as receiver and a preliminary objection is raised by the respondents that the appeal was incompetent.

Held.—The order was not appealable.

Per Sesha Aiyar, J.—The right of appeal is available only to the parties to the suit and a receiver is not entitled to prefer an appeal. The fact that the receiver is a party to the suit does not affect his right of appeal. The receiver as such is different from the party. He is the representative of the Court in the administration of the property in litigation, pending a judicial determination of the rights of the parties to the suit. "He is merely the officer of the Court and the estate (which he administers) must for all legal purposes be regarded as being in manibus curiae." The Court has ample jurisdiction to impose conditions on him for the due and satisfactory discharge of his work as an officer of the Court. He is subject to the orders of the Court as its representative; and having regard to his position, he cannot have a right of appeal against the order of the lower Court. If he is unwilling to furnish the security, he cannot be the receiver, and there is an end of the matter.

A receiver appointed by the Court is appointed on behalf and for the benefit of all persons interested, parties to the suit or proceedings. Section 482 falls into two clearly marked divisions, Clauses (a) to (d) constituting one division, and (e) to (h) constituting the other. The former embraces acts which the Court may do "by order"; and the latter embraces the liabilities of the receiver. It is clear that, while in the first class of acts, the Section contemplates an order passed by the Court, in the other class which enumerates the receiver's liabilities, the passing of any order by the Court is not contemplated, though, of course, the Court may have to give directions to the receiver in connection with those matters. If so, it is only orders that fall under Clauses (a) to (d) of the Section that can be held to be appealable; while the directions that fall under Clauses (e) to (h) which are intended to help the Court to exercise effective control over the receiver as its representative or officer, cannot be made the subject of appeal.— 38 T. L. R., 1 (= 11 T. L. J., 405).

8. (1) A receiver can be appointed after decree.

(2) A receiver can be appointed even when the subject-matter in dispute was only the equity of redemption.—12 T. L. J., 195.

9. Under Section 482, Clause (e), C. P. C., the demanding of security is not always obligatory. Ordinarily, the Court will not dispense with security duly to account for what the receiver shall receive and to pay the same as the Court shall direct; but it is not beyond the competency of the Court to appoint in exceptional case, a receiver without the usual security.

It is not unusual, where no salary is given to the receiver, to dispense with the security.

When the lower Court has exercised its discretion in imposing conditions, the Court of appeal will not ordinarily interfere.

When no security is needed to be given, it should be so stated in the order appointing the receiver.

A receiver is entitled to have out of the funds collected or realised by him, his expenses properly incurred in the discharge of his ordinary duties or in the performance of extraordinary services which have been sanctioned by the Court or which have benefited the estate.—38 T. L. R., 265 (=13 T. L. J., 507).

10. The suit was for a declaration of the plaintiff's title to the plaint properties and to recover them with mesne profits from the defendants who were alleged to have trespassed on the properties after the plaintiff had obtained delivery of the properties in execution of a decree. The defendants set up possession under an independent title and denied the plaintiff's title and possession. The plaintiff applied for the appointment of a receiver to take possession of the properties.

Held.—The plaintiff's apprehensions that he might not be able to realise mesne profits and costs of suit if he succeeded in getting a decree in his favour and that the defendants might neglect to take proper care of the properties during the pendency of the suit were not sufficient grounds for the appointment of a receiver. The appointment of a receiver was, no doubt, in the discretion of the Court, but the power of appointment was not to be exercised as a matter of course, but was to be used with the greatest care and caution. In the case, the defendants were admittedly in possession, and such possession was not to be divested by the appointment of a receiver, unless a very strong case was made out for such a course being adopted. The power of appointing a receiver should be exercised with a sound discretion, upon a view of the whole circumstances of the case, not merely the circumstances which might make the appointment expedient for the protection of the property, but all the circumstances connected with the right which was asserted and had to be established. The Court would not interfere by appointing a receiver where a right was asserted to property in the possession of a defendant claiming to hold it under a legal title, unless a strong case was made out.— 14 T. L. J., 317.

11. The order appointing a receiver under Section 482, C. P. C., is appealable under Clause 24 of Section 557, and the appeal lies to the Court to which an appeal would lie from the decree that may be passed in the suit.

Where the Appellate Court has already passed an order under Section 484 (omitted in new Code), that Court is no doubt incompetent to hear the appeal against the order under Section 482, under Section 19, Subsection (2) of the Civil Courts Regulation. But this disqualification is only personal. A party cannot be deprived of his right of appeal to a particular Court merely because it is presided over by an Officer who cannot hear the appeal by reason of personal disqualification.

Where such disqualification exists, action should be taken under Section 19, Sub-section (3), of the Civil Courts Regulation, and the appeal should be transferred to another Court.

A District Judge who acts under Section 484 (now omitted) exercises not a ministerial but a judicial function. His duty under that Section is not merely to approve or disapprove of the appointment of the Munsiff's nominee, but also to take into consideration the necessity for the appointment of a receiver and pass such other orders as the circumstances of the case may require. 16 T. L. J., 68.

12. Civil Miscellaneous appeals were preferred against the order of the lower Court granting the application of the plaintiffs for the appointment of a receiver in a suit brought by the members of two Thavazhees of a Nayar Tarwad under Sec. 37

4. Where a receiver—

Enforcement of receiver's duties.

(a) fails to submit his accounts at such periods and in such form as the Court directs, or

(b) fails to pay the amount due from him as the Court directs, or

(c) occasions loss to the property by his wilful default or gross negligence, the Court may direct his property to be attached and may sell such property, and may apply the proceeds to make good any amount found to be due from him or any loss occasioned by him, and shall pay the balance (if any) to the receiver.

(1) of the Regulation for partition of the Tarwad properties.

Held.—In the circumstances of the case, the lower Court exercised its discretion properly in granting the application for the appointment of a receiver so far as the properties of the Tarwad in the possession of the 1st defendant, the Karanavan, were concerned.

The Court has jurisdiction to appoint a receiver until the hearing of a particular action or until further orders, even though there is no exclusive occupation by any party and the Court would not hesitate to do so whenever it was just and convenient. The case for the appointment of a receiver is much stronger if a party to the partition action is in sole occupation. The Court might, in the exercise of its discretion, appoint or refuse the appointment of a receiver after duly weighing the facts of the case.

When the plaintiff has made out that he has a good case to claim a share in the plaint property and when some circumstances are shown which render it just and desirable in the interest of all the parties that possession should not be exclusively to one of the parties in a partition suit, the Court will appoint a receiver. No distinction should be drawn between cases governed by the Hindu Law and cases governed by the Marumakkathayam law. The distinction between parties governed by these systems of law is based on Section 39 of the Regulation (II of 1100) which provides that, until partition, no member of the Tarwad shall be deemed to have a definite share in Tarwad property liable to be seized in execution nor shall such member be deemed to have any alienable or heritable interest therein.

As regards certain properties which are Kandukrishi lands, no sanction from Government was filed with the plaint as required by Section 8 C. P. C. Accordingly no receiver could be appointed by the Court for these properties.—

(= 16 T. L. J., 595).

13. In the matter of appointment of receivers, Order XXXVIII, Rule 1, gives wider powers to the Court than Section 482 of the old Code which was restricted to cases where the appointment appeared to be necessary for the realisation, preservation or better custody or management of property which is

When Division Peishkar may be appointed receiver.

5. Where the property is land and the Court considers that the interests of those concerned will be promoted by the management of the Division Peishkar, the Court may, with the previous sanction of the Government, appoint him to be receiver of such property.

ORDER XXXIX.

Arbitration.

Arbitration in Suits.

Parties to suit may apply for order of reference.

1. (1) Where in any suit all the parties interested agree that any matter in difference between them shall be referred to arbitration, they may, at any time before judgment is pronounced, apply to the Court for an order of reference.

(2) Every such application shall be in writing and shall state the matter sought to be referred.

the subject of the suit or under attachment. These wide powers should be exercised with great caution. Where a property in dispute is admittedly in the possession of the defendant under a title which is prima facie legal, the Court will not ordinarily be justified in disturbing the defendant's possession by the appointment of a receiver. This may be taken to be the ordinary rule; but that does not mean that the rule is an invariable one. Each case must be dealt with on its own facts.—

Or. XXXIX: In the British Indian Code of 1882, "Arbitration." formed a Chapter in the body of the Code. In the present Code, the provisions have been removed and placed in a separate Schedule (II) appended to the Code. In regard to this, the Indian Special Committee say:—"Two questions of importance have arisen in connection with this subject: (1) should any of the Sections of the Arbitration Act of 1899 be incorporated into the Code; (2) should the right of appeal, as now existing, be altered, and if so, in what direction? We are of opinion that the best course would undoubtedly be to eliminate from the Code all the clauses as to arbitration, and insert them in a new and comprehensive Arbitration Act. There are, perhaps, difficulties as to this at present. We have determined therefore to leave the arbitration clauses much as they are in the present Code: but we have placed them in a Schedule in the hope that at no distant date they may be transferred into a comprehensive Arbitration Act."

Or. XXXIX, r. 1 [= S. 485

"485. Parties to a suit may apply for order of reference.—If all the parties to a suit desire that any matter in difference between them in the suit be referred to arbitration, they may, at any time before judgment is pronounced, apply, in person or by their respective pleaders specially authorized in writing in this behalf, to the Court for an order of reference.

Every such application shall be in writing and shall state the particular matter sought to be referred."

Case Law.

1. Under Section 501 of the Civil Procedure Code, [ = Or. XXXIX, r. 16 ] no appeal lies from a judgment or decree passed in accordance with the award of an arbitrator, except in so far as such decree or judgment is in excess of or not in accordance with the award. It stands to reason that the law should be so; for, the object of arbitration which is to secure cheap substantial justice without a protracted trial before the courts, would be defeated if appeals are to be allowed from the awards of arbitrators on merits.

The omission to file an arbitrator's award in Court on the date fixed by the Court does not render it invalid when it has been made and pronounced within the prescribed date. The word "made" does not include the filing of the award.

It is discretionary with the Court to compel an arbitrator to give evidence on matters he has dealt with as an arbitrator. Judges and arbitrators are, from motives of public policy, not compellable to testify as to certain matters though, when fraud is alleged, they may (F. B.).—

This rule corresponds to Para 1 of Section 486 of the old Regulation which was as follows:—

4. (1) Where the reference is to two or more arbitrators, provision shall be made in the order for a difference of opinion among the arbitrators—

(b) by declaring that, if the majority of the arbitrators agree, the decision of the majority shall prevail; or

(c) by empowering the arbitrators to appoint an umpire; or

(d) otherwise as may be agreed between the parties or, if they cannot agree, as the Court may determine.

(2) Where an umpire is appointed, the Court shall fix such time as it thinks reasonable for the making of his award in case he is required to act.

Or. XXXIX, r. 3 [ = S. 487 = Sch. II, Para 3 ]

In Sub-Rule (1), the words "for the making of the award" have been substituted for the words "for the delivery of the award" which occurred in Section 487 of the old Regulation.

The award was submitted to the Court after the expiry of the time fixed for its delivery; but the Court remitted the award to the arbitrator for reconsideration as it was submitted after time. Held.—Under Section 500 of the Civil Procedure Code, [ = Or. XXXIX, r. 15] no award is valid unless made within the period allowed by the Court.

Although, under Section 493 [ = Or. XXXIX, r. 8], the Court has the fullest power to enlarge time, so long as the award was not completed, it possesses no such power when once the time was passed or the award was made and delivered. When the award was, in the first instance delivered, the arbitrator had ceased to have any lawful authority to make it. It was competent to the Court to have enlarged the period for the delivery of the award; but the Court, in the case, did not do so; and its action, allowing a fresh period when it purported to remit the award could not be regarded as enlargement of the time under Section 493 [ = Or. XXXIX, r. 8].

When a matter in difference between the parties has once been referred to arbitration, the Court is, by Section 487, precluded from dealing with it, save in accordance with the provisions of the succeeding Sections. None of the Sections confers upon the Court a power to make a second reference to arbitration upon the same agreement.

The second remission cannot be treated as coming under Section 499 (C) of the Code [ = Or. XXXIX, r. 14].—

Power of Court to appoint arbitrator in certain cases.

(a) where the parties cannot agree within a reasonable time with respect to the appointment of an arbitrator, or the person appointed refuses to accept the office of arbitrator, or

(b) where an arbitrator or umpire—

(i) dies, or

(ii) refuses or neglects to act or becomes incapable of acting, or

(iii) leaves Travancore in circumstances showing that he will probably not return at an early date, or

(c) where the arbitrators are empowered by the order of reference to appoint an umpire and fail to do so, any party may serve the other party or the arbitrators, as the case may be, with a written notice to appoint an arbitrator or umpire.

(2) If, within seven clear days after such notice has been served or such further time as the Court may in each case allow, no arbitrator or no umpire is appointed, as the case may be, the Court may, on application by the party who gave the notice, and after giving the other party an opportunity of being heard, appoint an arbitrator or umpire or make an order superseding the arbitration, and in such case shall proceed with the suit.

The corresponding provisions of the old Regulation were as follow :—

"486, Para 2.—"If the parties cannot agree with respect to such nomination, or if the person whom they nominate refuses to accept the arbitration and the parties desire that the nomination shall be made by the Court, the Court shall nominate the arbitrator."

"489. Death, incapacity, &c., of arbitrators or umpire.—If the arbitrator, or, where there are more arbitrators than one, any of the arbitrators, or the umpire, dies, or refuses, or neglects, or becomes incapable to act, or leaves Travancore under circumstances showing that he will probably not return at an early date, the Court may in its discretion either appoint a new arbitrator or umpire in the place of the person so dying, or refusing, or neglecting, or becoming incapable to act, or leaving Travancore, or make an order superseding the arbitration, and in such case shall proceed with the suit.

6. Every arbitrator or umpire appointed under Rule 4 or Rule 5 shall have the like powers as if his name had been inserted in the order of reference.

Powers of arbitrator or umpire appointed under Rule 4 or 5.

7. (1) The Court shall issue the same processes to the parties and witnesses whom the arbitrator or umpire desires to examine, as the Court may issue in suits tried before it.

Summoning witnesses and default.

(2) Persons not attending in accordance with such process, or making any other default, or refusing to give their evidence, or guilty of any contempt to the arbitrator or umpire during the investigation of the matters referred, shall be subject to the like disadvantages, penalties and punishments, by order of the Court on the representation of the arbitrator or umpire, as they would incur for the like offences in suits tried before the Court.

8. Where the arbitrators or the umpire cannot complete the award within the period specified in the order, the Court may, if it thinks fit, either allow further time, and from time to time, either before or after the expiration of the period fixed for the making of the award, enlarge such period ; or may make an order superseding the arbitration, and in such case shall proceed with the suit.

"490. Appointment of umpire by Court. —Where the arbitrators are empowered by the order of reference to appoint an umpire and fail to do so, any of the parties may serve the arbitrators with a written notice to appoint an umpire ; and if, within seven days after such notice has been served, or such further time as the Court may in each case allow, no umpire be appointed, the Court, upon the application of the party who has served such notice as aforesaid, may appoint an umpire."

"493. Extension of time for making award.—If, from the want of the necessary evidence or information, or from any other cause, the arbitrators cannot complete the award within the period specified in the order, the Court may, if it thinks fit, either grant a further time, and from time to time enlarge the period for the delivery of the award or make an order superseding the arbitration, and in such case shall proceed with the suit."

The term "misconduct" should be interpreted in the sense in which it is used in English law. I. Section 501 of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows :—

"501. Judgment to be according to award.—If the Court sees no cause to remit the award or any of the matters referred to arbitration for reconsideration in manner aforesaid, and if no application has been made to set aside the award, or if the Court has refused such application,

Decree to follow.—Upon the judgment so given a decree shall follow, and shall be enforced in manner provided in this Code for the execution of decrees. No appeal shall lie from such decree except in so far as the decree is in excess of, or not in accordance with, the award."

II. In regard to Para 16 of Schedule II to the British Indian Code, which has been adopted as Rule 16, the Indian Special Committee said :—"In regard to appeals, some change has been made. Upon this question, adopting the view of the Judicial Committee as expressed in Ghulam's case (I. L. R., 29 Cal., 167) we are strongly in favour of finality in cases of arbitration. If rights of appeal be given, the disappointed party will take advantage of every such right. To meet the difficulty expressed in the case reported in I. L. R., 25 Cal., 141 (which followed many other cases in the Calcutta High Court), we have inserted the words "or being otherwise invalid" in Sub-section (c) of Section 521 of the present Code. If, therefore, either party considers the award is invalid on any ground, he can apply to have it set aside. We have thought it right to give one appeal from the opinion expressed by the Court on a special case under Section 517, and to allow one appeal as from order under Sections 521, 523 and

(2) The application shall be in writing and shall be numbered and registered as a suit between one or more of the parties interested or claiming to be interested as plaintiff or plaintiffs, and the others or other of them as defendants or defendant, if the application has been presented by all the parties, or, if otherwise, between the applicant as plaintiff and the other parties as defendants.

(3) On such application being made, the Court shall direct notice thereof to be given to all the parties to the agreement, other than the applicants, requiring such parties to show cause, within the time specified in the notice, why the agreement should not be filed.

526. And having regard to the rather wide language of the Judicial Committee in Ghulam's case, we have further thought it advisable to make it clear that an order granting an application either under Section 523 or 526 is not to be deemed a decree within the meaning of the Code ; otherwise there would be a wider right of appeal from orders under these Sections than from a decree under Section 522. The other alterations deal with the text, rather than with any question of policy or principle."

[The Rules of this Order corresponding to the Sections of the old Indian Code mentioned above, namely, 517, 521, 522, 523 and 526, are respectively Nos. 11, 15, 16, 17 and 21.]

Filing award in matter referred to arbitration without intervention of Court.

Or. XXXIX, r. 20 [= S. 504 = Sch. II, Para. 20]

Para 1 of Section 504 of the old Regulation corresponding to Sub-Rule (1) was:—"When any matter has been referred,..... in the award may apply to the Court of the lowest grade having jurisdiction over the matter to which the award relates, that the award be filed in Court."

Case Law.

1. Under the Will executed by the father of plaintiff and defendant, Cutchi Memons, the plaintiff was entitled to certain properties, movable and immovable. Defendant having objected to the plaintiff's claim to such properties, both the parties referred the matters in dispute to arbitrators, An award was given by the arbitrators, whereby the plaintiff's claim to properties under the Will was established, and the extent of the properties to be given was specified. On an application made by plaintiff under Section 504 to enforce the award, limitation was successfully raised in defence. The application was, therefore, rejected as having been brought beyond the time allowed by law. The plaintiff brought the suit to establish her claim under the Will, and claimed in the alternative, to enforce, the award. The defendant contended, inter alia, that the rejection of the plaintiff's application to enforce the award being a decree operated to bar a fresh suit, and that the award of the arbitrators was invalid, as they did not give reasons for their decision, and did not examine the account books of the defendants fully.

Held.—An order refusing to file an award under Section 504, is analogous to an order rejecting a plaint under Clause (c) of Section 50 [= Or. VII, r. 11] Civil Procedure Code, and cannot, therefore, operate as a bar to a subsequent suit based on the award.

Arbitrators are not bound to give a reasoned judicial decision. They are bound to give only an intelligible decision which determines the rights of all the parties in relation to the subject-matter of the reference. They are not bound to give reasons at all.

Where a person, who is entitled to property under a Will, agrees to refer disputes relating thereto to arbitration and the arbitrators give a valid award, the right to claim under the Will becomes merged in the award. The award furnishes the only

2. Where there is a reference to arbitration without the intervention of the Court and where a suit is instituted a considerable time after such reference, the arbitration not having terminated, the Court may raise a presumption that the reference has been abandoned before the litigation commenced.

Granting that the reference is still in force, it would not warrant the dismissal of the suit. A party relying on an antecedent agreement to refer matters to arbitration as a bar to the continuance of a suit should apply for a stay of the proceedings in Court. If such party takes no steps for stay of judicial proceedings and allows the case to be decided, any award, even if made during the pendency of the suit, would not affect the rights of the parties as decided by the Court.— 19 T. Or. XXXIX, r. 21 [= S. 505

Section 505 of the old Regulation corresponding to Sub-Rule (1) was as follows :—

"505. Filing and enforcement of such award.—If no ground such as is mentioned or referred to in Section 499 or Section 500 be shown against the award, the Court shall order it to be filed, and such award shall then take effect as an award made under the provisions of this Chapter."

[Sections 499 and 500 correspond to Rules 14 and 15.]

Case Law.

1. An award was made by a board of arbitrators appointed by the parties without the intervention of the Court. The plaintiff applied for filing the award. The defendant raised various objections. The Court overruled them, ordered the award to be filed and passed a decree in terms thereof. No separate order for filing the award was, however, passed, the same being embodied in the judgment disposing of the matter itself. Against this decree, the defendant appealed.

On behalf of the respondent-plaintiff, a preliminary objection was raised regarding the competency of the appeal. It was contended that, under Clause (2) of Rule 21 of Order XXXIX, no appeal lay from a decree of the kind in question except on the ground that the same was in excess of or not in accordance with the award.

Held.—The appeal could be treated as one against the order for filing the award, as contemplated in Clause (1) of Rule 21 of Order XXXIX. An appeal has been expressly provided for against such an order in Section 82 (1) (e) of the Code, and the Court should not deprive a party of this statutory right of appeal by proceeding to judgment immediately without allowing any time for such appeal, or embodying the appellate order of filing in its final judgment which in cases of confirmation of the award is expressly declared not appealable.

The contention of the appellant based on the provisions of Section 55 of the Code of 1065 [=Or. VII, r. 14] that the award should not have been allowed to be filed, as a copy thereof had not been presented along with the application, could not stand. The Civil Procedure Code did not warrant the dismissal of a plaint by reason of the non-production of the documents referred to in Section 55. It only prohibited the reception, in evidence, of such documents without special leave. When, however, the document was received in evidence, the Appellate Court was bound to consider the same and could not reject it.

Even though a specific reference is contained in the reference requiring the opinion of the majority to prevail, notice should have been given to all the arbitrators of the meeting, and if the evidence had been recorded and the parties heard, and as a result of the conjoint deliberations of the arbitrators a particular decision has been arrived at by all, or by a majority of the arbitrators, such decision, if reduced to writing, would be perfectly valid in spite of some of the arbitrators not having affixed their signatures thereto.

When the parties have mutually agreed that the decision of the majority at the meetings having a quorum as prescribed therein would be binding on the parties the same could not be impeached on the ground of the absence of any of the arbitrators at any of such meetings inclusive of the last one, if the absentee arbitrators had notice of the meeting of the board at which the final decision was proposed to be resolved upon.

Although the principles above formulated will have to be followed in general cases, they cannot be taken to govern cases where by mutual consent of parties a different state of affairs is arranged for.

It is a cardinal rule of the interpretation of deeds that the same word appearing in different parts of the deed are presumed to be intended to bear the same meaning.

An award could not exceed the submission or the power given by the submission in the particular case. If it is in excess of the same, it will be bad in toto. Of course, if the excess is separable from the other portion, it will be held void only as regards the portion which is in excess of the submission. If, however, the excess is so mixed up with the other portions or if its decision on the matters covered by the reference has been affected by such excess, the whole award should be treated as a nullity. As to the effect of the various statements and the question how far the conclusions arrived at by the arbitrators are warranted by the evidence before them, these are matters which could not be considered by the Court where the filing of the award is sought for, as the arbitrators constitute by the consent of the parties the sole Judges of fact and law on the questions arising before them, and the Court's jurisdiction to interfere with their decision thereon is circumscribed by the statutory provisions on the subject. The arbitrators need not give their reasons for their conclusions and they are not even bound to record anything of the proceedings.

The award could be set aside only if there is corruption, misconduct or partiality on the part of the arbitrators, or an error of law apparent on the face of it which could refer only to some legal proposition in the award or actually incorporated thereto as its basis, which proposition is per se erroneous,

The word "misconduct" as applied to arbitrators does not necessarily imply moral turpitude; but it includes neglect of the duties and responsibilities of the arbitrators and what Courts of Justice expect from them before allowing finality to their awards. The truth of the allegations made as amounting to misconduct will have to be examined, and it will have to be considered whether the allegations could be treated as such in the eye of the law.

Exclusion of a party from the meetings of the board at which discussions between arbitrators as to the conclusions to be arrived were held, does not constitute misconduct.

The user of the plaintiff by the convenor to purchase some tobacco for him with the convenor's money could not per se amount to misconduct on the part of the convenor so as to invalidate the award, in the absence of anything to show that the convenor has been influenced thereby or that the award has been made as the result of the obligation. What is required in such cases is to see whether the intention is to corrupt the umpire or that he has been influenced thereby.—43 T. L. R., 388 (= 17 T. L. J., 711).

The appeal against one alone of the trustees was, therefore, not maintainable. The omission to implead the other trustees was more than irregularity, and the Appellate Court was bound to see that all necessary parties were before it.— 1 T. L. J., 203.

V. It is a safe maxim for a Court of Appeal to be governed by that an objection which, if taken, might have been cured and which has not been taken in the Court below, shall not be taken in the Court of Appeal. (Obiter).— 30 T. L. R., 251.

I. This reproduces Section 518 of Regulation II of 1065 with some changes in the first Para of that Section corresponding to Sub-Rule (1). The first Para was as follows:—

"Form of appeal. What to accompany memorandum.—The appeal shall be made in the form of a memorandum in writing presented by the appellant, and shall be accompanied by a copy of the decree appealed against, and (unless the Appellate Court dispenses therewith) of the judgment on which it is founded."

II. For Form of Memorandum of Appeal, see Appendix H, Form No. 1.

Case Law.

1. It is wrong to allow, in appeal, a plea of want of jurisdiction based on facts to be ascertained, to be raised for the first time. The plea of want of jurisdiction, in the case, was not a pure question of law, but required to be proved as any other disputed fact.

The onus of substantiating such a plea, when taken in proper time, is on those who urge it, the law making a presumption in favour of the existence of jurisdiction until the contrary is shown.— 4 T. L. R., 68.

2. The point for decision by the Courts was whether the plaintiff's claim to Karanavanship was well-founded and this point having been found against plaintiff by both the lower Courts, is is against all judicial precedents to allow plaintiff to amend his case in appeal, and to invoke the aid of Courts to try in the same suit the new case set up in appeal. The effect of granting such concessions to plaintiffs would be to encourage frivolous litigation.—8 T. L. R., 46.

3. The law makes it obligatory on appellants to produce a copy of the lower Court's judgment along with the appeal memo, unless it is dispensed with by the Appeal Court. The delay, even though it may be of more than three years in granting the copy of the judgment, was not delay for which the appellant was responsible.— 12 T. L. R., 198.

4. The Dewan of Travancore sued to recover a sum of money due from the defendant to the Sri Padmanabha Swami Temple. The defendant contended, inter alia, that the Dewan of Travancore was not competent to sue on behalf of the Temple and that he did not owe all the money sued for. The first Court decreed the plaintiff's suit in toto. The defendant appealed only with regard to the sum of money not admitted by him to be due and raised objection regarding the competency of the Dewan of Travancore to sue on behalf of the Sri Padmanabha Swami Temple.

Held.—The competency of the Dewan to sue having been accepted by the defendant in relation to the sum adjudged by the decree and not questioned in appeal, the finding became final between the parties and could not be re-opened (F. B.).

Per Krishnan Pandalai, J.—If the Appellate Court should find the claim barred by limitation, it could not for that reason reverse the decree to the extent it has been appealed against, as the unappealed portion is based on the view that there is no bar of limitation, and that view is final between the same parties. The only consistent course is in such cases to dismiss the appeal or reverse the whole decree. The ground that the plaintiff is not competent to sue is like the defence of limitation one that goes to the root of the claim and cannot be allowed to prevail in the case, as the defendant had not appealed against two-thirds of the decree which the plaintiff has got on the same bond.— 5 T. L. J., 48.

5. An objection to the maintainability of a suit on the ground that it is one for partial partition will not be allowed to be raised for the first time in special appeal.— 5 T. L. J., 123.

6. One of the grounds raised by the Sirkar appellant was that the plaintiff (respondent) was not entitled to the reliefs claimed by him, inasmuch as he was dismissed for misconduct.

This point was not expressly raised or even suggested in the defendant's written statement and was not covered by any issue settled in the case. To allow such a vital question to be raised at this stage would, therefore, be very embarrassing to the plaintiff. The contention was, therefore, overruled.— 34 T. L. R., 281.

7. (1) Where there are more defendants than one in a suit and the decree appealed from affects each of them individually and each of the appeals preferred or all of them, when treated as a single consolidated appeal, had not been directed against the whole decree, it is not competent for some of the defendants to associate with other defendants as co-appellants without having previously obtained copies of the decree appealed from and without being in a position to file such copies together with the appeal memoranda.

(2) The provision contained in Section 513 of the Civil Procedure Code that the appeal presented by the appellant shall be accompanied by a copy of the decree appealed against, is mandatory (F. B.).— 35 T. L. R., 1.

8. The plaintiff, alleging that he was the real owner of the plaint property and that the second defendant in whose name the document stood was only a benamidar, brought the suit for the cancellation of a sale deed executed by the second defendant in favour of the first defendant in respect of the plaint property. The Courts below accepting the plaintiff's allegations, decreed the suit.

The first defendant preferred the special appeal and took for the first time before the High Court the plea of bona fide purchase for value from the ostensible owner without notice of the defect in title.

Held.—(1) On proof of the benami character of the purchaser, the real owner established a prima facie case against the purchaser who was then called upon to prove that he had paid value and that he had made the purchase bona fide and without notice.

(2) The first defendant could not be allowed at that stage to raise the plea inasmuch as the issue which such a plea would raise was not purely one of fact but of mixed law and fact. It would be taking the opposite party by surprise if, on the evidence on record not let in with reference to the particular defence, the first defendant were allowed to substantiate his plea.—

9. The Vakil for the appellant attempted to submit at the last stage of his argument in appeal in the High Court a new contention to the effect that, before the suit, there was a reference to arbitrators who had pronounced an award, and therefore the suit was not maintainable except as one for enforcing an award, in which event it would be barred by limitation. This was an entirely new contention which had not been raised in the lower Court or even in the memorandum of appeal to the High Court.

Held (While declining to permit the appellant's Vakil to raise the plea).—

Unless the circumstances are wholly exceptional, appellants must be strictly held to the grounds of appeal which they think proper to set forth in the formal documents which are demanded from them. The object of indicating in detail the grounds of appeal is that the respondent parties may be accurately and precisely informed of the case which they have to meet. Their efforts are naturally directed to the contentions which are put forward by the appellants. They are entitled to treat as abandoned contentions which are not set forth. If in exceptional cases parties desire to add new grounds to those of which they have given notice, it will usually be convenient, by a substantive application, to apply to the indulgence of the Court which is to hear the appeal.— 11 T. L. J., 389.

10. There is nothing in Sections 513, 556 [new Section 86] or 591 [new Section 91], C. P. C., which precludes the Court after admitting and registering a second appeal from insisting on the production of copies of judgments and decrees or orders of Courts of first instance, before it will further proceed with second appeal (F. B.).—

11. Section 513 lays down a mandatory provision which no Court has the power to relax. A memorandum of appeal presented without a copy of the decree appealed against cannot, in view of the imperative provision of Section 513, be accepted by the Court as a good memorandum in law. If, for any reason, such a memorandum is allowed to remain in Court and the copy of the decree appealed against is produced before the memorandum is rejected or returned, the appeal memorandum should in law be viewed as having been presented only on the date when the copy of the said decree was produced (F. B.)—

12. When a court accepts a new case set up which is inconsistent with the pleadings, the Court acts irregularly.

"It is impossible to conclude parties by inferences of fact which are not only not consistent with the allegations that are to be found in the plaint which constitute the case the defendant has to meet, but which are in reality contradictory of the case made by the plaintiff. It will introduce the greatest amount of uncertainty into judicial proceedings if the final determination of causes is to be founded upon inferences at variance with the case that the plaintiff has pleaded and by joining issue in the cause has undertaken to prove" (11 M. L. A., 7).—

Rel.—18 T. L. J., 449.

13. A litigating party can only succeed secundam allegata et probatis, and a Court of Appeal should not allow him to set up on appeal a case which should have been but was not, put forward by him in the Court of first instance. The severity of this rule has no doubt been relaxed so as to cover cases which, though not specifically put forward in the trial Court, are nevertheless involved in the pleadings or consistent with the case thereby made. But this concession has never been extended to cases which are not only not involved in the pleadings, but are inconsistent with the case thereby made, and have been again and again repudiated by the party who subsequently seeks to rely on them.

To permit the plaintiffs to take advantage of the defendants' plea and claim relief on that basis on the evidence on record would be springing a surprise on the defendants, and would seriously prejudice them, as the question of their liability on that basis has not been properly fought out in the Court below.

"If a point was not taken before the tribunal which hears the evidence, and evidence could have been adduced which by any possibility would prevent the point from succeeding, it cannot be taken afterwards. You are bound to take the point in the first instance to enable the other party to give evidence."—42 T. L. R., 327 (= 16 T. L. J., 253).

Ref.—19 T. L. J., 481.

14. In an appeal against the final decree in a partition suit, it is open to the appellant to question the correctness of the preliminary decree or order for partition when no appeal has been preferred therefrom within the time allowed by law.

If an appeal is preferred and the same comes to be rejected for any of the grounds mentioned in Section 50 [ = Or. VII, r. 11 ], such presentation will be no bar to a fresh appeal. Under Section 551 [new Section 85 (2) & Or. XXII, r. 11 ], the principle underlying Section 52 [ = Or. VII, r. 13 ] is clearly applicable to memoranda of appeals (F. B.).— 44 T. L. R., 315 ( = 18 T. L. J., 996 ).

15. The second respondent in the appeal put in an objection memorandum under Order XL, Rule 21, setting forth the following grounds.

(1) The lower Court wrongly directed the second defendant to suffer his costs when his contentions were upheld.

(2) The properties allowed to the second defendant were wrongly made liable for the arrears adjudged to the plaintiffs.

He paid institution fee on the first ground only, and therefore on 12-2-'04, the Deputy Registrar ordered him to state the amount of arrears adjudged to the plaintiffs and to pay Court fee thereon. One week was allowed to cure this defect. On 1-4-1104, the respondent presented a petition praying for permission to withdraw the second ground. A Division Bench which heard the petition referred for the decision of a Full Bench the question of the competency of a Court to allow withdrawal of grounds in insufficiently stamped appeal memoranda.

Held.—Per Venkita Rao, J.—An appellant may withdraw a part of the claim even though proper Court fee has not been paid on the reliefs as claimed in his memo of appeal.

Per Parameswaran Pillai, J.—(1) At the time of the presentation of a plaint or memorandum of appeal, the plaintiff or appellant may, without the permission of the Court, abandon any of the reliefs claimed therein and in respect of which the Court fee leviable has not been paid, and the Court is not competent to refuse to file the plaint or memorandum of appeal if the fee payable on the reliefs not abandoned has been paid.

(2) Even under Order VII, Rule 11, Clause (c), a plaint or memorandum of appeal cannot be wholly rejected for non-payment of Court-fees leviable on some of the reliefs, if the plaintiff or appellant is willing to forego that part of the claim or reliefs for which Court-fee has not been paid.

Per A. Venkitarama Aiyer, Ag. C. J. (Dissenting).—No relief in an insufficiently stamped plaint, appeal memorandum or objection memorandum can be allowed to be withdrawn without payment of the deficit Court-fee and the same considered and disposed of on the merits without such Grounds which may be taken in appeal.

2. The appellant shall not, except by leave of the Court, urge or be heard in support of any ground of objection not set forth in the memorandum of appeal; but the Appellate Court, in deciding the appeal, shall not be confined to the grounds of objection set forth in the memorandum of appeal or taken by leave of the Court under this Rule:

Provided that the Court shall not rest its decision on any other ground unless the party who may be affected thereby has had a sufficient opportunity of contesting the case on that ground.

Rejection or amendment of memorandum.

3. (1) Where the memorandum of appeal is not drawn up in the manner hereinbefore prescribed, it may be rejected, or be returned to the appellant for the purpose of being amended within a time to be fixed by the Court or be amended then and there.

"514. Appellant confined to grounds set out.—The appellant shall not, without the leave of the Court, urge or be heard in support of any other ground of objection, but the Court in deciding the appeal shall not be confined to the grounds set forth by the appellant :

Provided that the Court shall not rest its decision on any ground not set forth by the appellant, unless the respondent has had sufficient opportunity of contesting the case on that ground."

2. When a suit has been dismissed against one of two defendants by the Court of first instance and the defeated plaintiff has not appealed against that part of the decree, the addition of the defendant, against whom the suit has been dismissed, to the array of parties does not empower the Appellate Court to pass against him a decree which the Court of first instance declined to pass and in the decision of which Court the plaintiff chose to acquiesce.—

4. Where there are more plaintiffs or more defendants than one in a suit, and the decree appealed from proceeds on any ground common to all the plaintiffs or to all the defendants, any one of the plaintiffs or of the defendants may appeal from the whole decree, and thereupon the Appellate Court may reverse or vary the decree in favour of all the plaintiffs or defendants, as the case may be.

The third Para of Section 515 of Regulation II of 1065, corresponding to Sub-Rule (3) was as follows :—

"When a memorandum.........in this behalf, shall attest the amendment by his signature."

Or. XL, r. 4 [= S. 516 = Or. XLI, r. 4]

In place of the word "vary," Section 516 of the old Regulation had the word "modify."

Case Law.

1. The plaintiff, whose claim on a debt-bond assigned to him by 3rd defendant was dismissed against 1st and 2nd defendants, but decreed against 3rd defendant the assignor, failed to appeal. On 3rd defendant's appeal, however, the lower Appellate Court gave a decree in plaintiff's favour against 1st and 2nd defendants.

Held (on special appeal).—It is not competent to the lower Appellate Court to pass such a decree, and Section 321 of the old Civil Procedure Code does not apply to the case.

The alleged debtors and the assignor of the debt were, under no circumstances, jointly liable to the assignee, and the ground upon which the 3rd defendant's appeal was to be decided could not be said to be common to him and the plaintiff. Third defendant could only appeal regarding his own rights and liabilities and could not call upon the Court to decide in plaintiff's favour matters upon which the plaintiff did not choose to appeal. Section 321 (Regulation II of 1037) which empowered an Appellate Court to reverse a decree in favour of a party who failed to appeal, did not warrant a decree in plaintiff's favour, and against two of the defendants on the appeal of the third defendant. That Section had been construed as enabling an Appellate Court to review the whole decision in favour of all the plaintiffs or of all the defendants on the appeal of one of them, when it proceeded on a common ground; but a decree could not be passed in appeal against a defendant and in favour of plaintiff on the appeal of a co-defendant.

[Section 321 was as follows :—"If there be two or more plaintiffs or two or more defendants in a suit, and the decision of the lower Court proceed on any ground common to all, any one of the plaintiffs or defendants may appeal against the whole decree, and the Appellate Court may reverse or modify

2. Where a decree deals only with and decides the disputes between the plaintiffs on one side and defendants as a body on the other and not the disputes between defendants inter se:

3. In a suit for recovery of money due on a joint hypothecation deed, the first Court passed an ex parte decree against all the defendants; but on the application of one of the defendants, the ex parte order as against him alone was set aside. At the re-trial, the Munsiff found that the hypothecation debt was discharged and dismissed the plaintiff's suit as against all the defendants. The District Judge modified the Munsiff's decree by restoring the ex parte decree against all the remaining defendants who failed to get the same cancelled. On special appeal:

4. The only Section under which a party can claim the benefit of another party's appeal is Section 516. That Section applies only to co-plaintiffs or co-defendants who have the same interest and not adverse parties though they may have identity of interest. Therefore, a plaintiff who has not appealed or put in cross-objections against the portion of the lower Court's decree that went against him is not entitled to the benefit of an appeal by a defendant who appealed against the same and who had identity of interest with plaintiff.— 3 S. D., 17.

5. The plaintiff brought the suit to enforce a chitty security bond executed by defendants 1 to 3 on the ground that the defendants had committed default in paying the subscriptions. The second defendant alone contested the suit. The primary Court upheld the plaintiff's case and gave him a decree; but the lower Appellate Court held that there was no default and reversed the decree of the primary Court. The appeal to the lower Appellate Court was by the second defendant alone, and to that appeal the other defendants were not parties. The plaintiff filed the special appeal, and contended that, inasmuch as the second defendant alone had appealed to the lower Appellate Court, that Court erred in reversing the primary Court's decree as regards the other defendants also.

Held.—The lower Appellate Court was justified by the terms of Section 516 of the Civil Procedure Code in setting aside the primary Court's decree even as against the defendants who were not parties to the appeal before that Court. That Section provided that one of several plaintiffs or defendants might obtain a reversal of the whole decree, when it proceeded on any ground common to all the plaintiffs or to all the defendants. If one of such persons appealed, he really occupied a representative character towards all others who stood on a common ground with him, and those others were necessarily privy to the appeal. Upon his appeal the whole case was opened up; and the respondent might under Section 532 press any objections to the decree which he could have urged by way of appeal regardless of the fact that others were not parties.

The lower Court's finding that no default had been made by the defendants rendered the suit devoid of any foundations. It is unstateable that, in those circumstances, because the other defendants were not formally parties to the appeal, the liability based on default still attached to them, though not to the second defendant. It is to avoid such obvious anomaly or incongruity that power is given by Section 516 to reverse or vary the whole decree, even in the absence of some of those against whom the decree had been passed, where the decree proceeded on a ground common to them and the appellant.— 12 T. L. J., 60.

6. The plaintiffs filed a suit for declaration and recovery of possession of the plaint items which were claimed under a gift from the husband of the first plaintiff and father of the other plaintiffs. The suit was dismissed. On appeal by the second plaintiff alone (the other plaintiffs not having been made parties to the appeal), the High Court reversed the whole decree, not only in favour of the appellant 2nd plaintiff, but of all the plaintiffs. In review, it was contended, inter alia, that the decree of the lower Court should have been set aside only to the extent of the appellant second plaintiff's claim, the plaintiffs having in law separate interests in the subject-matter of the suit.

Held.—Under Section 516 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Appellate Court was competent to reverse the decree of the lower Court and grant a decree in favour of all the plaintiffs notwithstanding that one plaintiff alone appealed against the decree of the lower Court and the other plaintiffs had not even been impleaded as respondents to the appeal.

The language of Section 516 shows that, provided that the decree appealed against has proceeded on any ground common to all the plaintiffs or all the defendants, any one of the plaintiffs or defendants may question in appeal the whole decree and the Appellate Court becomes properly seized of the whole case and competent to reverse or modify the decree in favour of all the plaintiffs or defendants. The Section does not require the impleading of the other unsuccessful plaintiffs or defendants as respondents in order to enable the Court to interfere with the whole decree.—

7. The special appeal arose out of a suit to recover 42 Fs. for damages from defendants 1 to 5 for having removed the fruit from four tamarind trees stated to be in the possession of plaintiff under a mortgage from the ancestor of defendants 9 to 11. The defendants admitted taking the fruit but claimed to be in possession as lessees under defendants 6 to 8 who were the real owners. The District Munsiff found in favour of the title of the defendants 9 to 11 and the enjoyment of the plaintiff and gave the plaintiff a decree for 28 Fs., as the price of the tamarind fruit removed, against defendants 1 to 5, and made all the contesting defendants liable for the plaintiff's costs. The 8th defendant alone appealed. The District Judge allowed the appeal holding that defendants 9 to 11 had no title to the properties in dispute and that plaintiff had never been in possession of them.

It was contended in the High Court that the decree of the trial Court against the 8th defendant being only for costs, the lower Appellate Court was wrong in interfering with that part of the decree which made defendants 1 to 5 liable to pay to the plaintiff 28 Fs.

Held (Overruling the contention).—The lower Appellate Court acted rightly.

The 8th defendant having appealed against the whole decree and his appeal having been based on a ground common to himself and all the defendants 1 to 5, viz., that he and defendants 6 and 7 were entitled to the trees and that the plaintiff and the plaintiff's mortgagor had no manner of right over the plaint property, the lower Appellate Court was right in interfering with the judgment of the trial Court even as against the defendants who did not appeal.

The decision of the case depends upon a correct interpretation of Section 516. In deciding whether the Court can exercise this jurisdiction two things are necessary:— (1) The decree appealed against must proceed on some point common to all the defendants or plaintiffs, and (2) the defendant (or plaintiff) who appeals must do so against the whole decree.

Stay of proceedings and of execution.

Stay by Appellate Court.

5. (1) An appeal shall not operate as a stay of proceedings under a decree or order appealed from except so far as the Appellate Court may order, nor shall execution of a decree be stayed by reason only of an appeal having been preferred from the decree; but the Appellate Court may for sufficient cause order stay of execution of such decree.

Stay by Court which passed the decree.

(2) Where an application is made for stay of execution of an appealable decree before the expiration of the time allowed for appealing therefrom, the Court which passed the decree may on sufficient cause being shown order the execution to be stayed.

---

If the decree proceeds on more than one ground, it is sufficient that one of the grounds is common to all the defendants.— 15 T. L. J., 434.

Ref.—18 T. L. J., 301.

8. Under Section 516, C. P. C., the interference by the Appellate Court on behalf of the non-appealing plaintiffs or defendants is discretionary with the Court. It is doubtful whether the omission to exercise that discretion would be a ground for preferring a second appeal and it is also doubtful whether an appeal will lie at the instance of the party who did not appeal to the lower Appellate Court.

It is however open to the High Court to treat the appeal as an application in revision in cases in which a subordinate Court has omitted to exercise a jurisdiction conferred on it by law.— 16 T. L. J., 80.

9. The only conditions necessary for the applicability of Rules 4 and 32 of Order XL are that there should be a ground common to the appellant and the other defendants against whom also the decree has to be reversed, and that the appeal should have been preferred against the whole decree and not with respect to that portion alone which affects the appellant. Even if other grounds are raised which cannot be said to be common to the appellant and the other defendants in the case, the benefit of this provision could be invoked.— 18 T. L. J., 301.

1. Section 517 of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows:—

"517. Execution of decree not stayed solely by reason of appeal.—Execution of a decree shall not be stayed by reason only of an appeal having been preferred against the decree; but the Appellate Court may, for sufficient cause, order the execution to be stayed.

Stay of execution of appealable decree before time for appealing has expired.—If an application be made for stay of execution of an appealable decree before the expiry of the time allowed for appealing therefrom, the Court which passed the decree may for sufficient cause order the execution to be stayed:

Provided that no order shall be made under this Section unless the Court making it is satisfied—

(3) No order for stay of execution shall be made under Sub-rule (1) or Sub-rule (2) unless the Court making it is satisfied—

(a) that substantial loss may result to the party applying for stay of execution unless the order is made;

(b) that the application has been made without unreasonable delay ; and

(c) that security has been given by the applicant for the due performance of such decree or order as may ultimately be binding upon him.

(4) Notwithstanding anything contained in Sub-rule (3), the Court may make an ex parte order for stay of execution pending the hearing of the application.

II. In regard to the addition of the words at the beginning of Sub-Rule (1)—"An appeal shall not......may order," the Indian Special Committee said :—

"The Committee have added words to Section 545 in order to make it clear that proceedings under a decree as well as execution can be stayed by an Appellate Court ; the recognition of preliminary decrees makes it the more necessary to have an express power to this effect instead of resting on an inherent power [ Balkishen Sahu V. Khugnu (I. L. R., 31 Cal., 722)]. The Committee have introduced express words authorising an ex parte stay, as the need for such an order constantly arises in practice."

1. Where an unconditional interim order is made by the High Court or an Appellate Court so as to affect the further progress of the proceedings pending before a subordinate Court and where either notice of such order is given to the latter Court by an official communication or the said Court is otherwise credibly informed of such order, the said order takes effect from the moment of the receipt of such communication or information and all subsequent further proceedings inconsistent with such order are void. The mere fact that an order of the nature above indicated is made by a superior tribunal does not affect the jurisdiction of the subordinate Court in respect of acts done, orders made or directions given, without knowledge of the said order (F. 2. The Appellate Court to which a pauper appeal is preferred is competent to stay execution of the decree under Order XL, Rule 5, even before the admission of the appeal. The Legislature has cautiously worded the Rule so as to enable the Appellate Court to exercise the power before

Security in case of order for execution of decree appealed from.

6. (1) Where an order is made for the execution of a decree from which an appeal is pending, the Court which passed the decree shall, on sufficient cause being shown by the appellant, require security to be taken for the restitution of any property which may be or has been taken in execution of the decree or for the payment of the value of such property and for the due performance of the decree or order of the Appellate Court, or the Appellate Court may for like cause direct the Court which passed the decree to take such security.

(2) Where an order has been made for the sale of immovable property in execution of a decree, and an appeal is pending from such decree, the sale shall, on the application of the judgment-debtor to the Court which made the order, be stayed on such terms as to giving security or otherwise as the Court thinks fit until the appeal is disposed of.

No security to be required from the Government or a public officer in certain cases.

7. No such security as is mentioned in Rules 5 and 6 shall be required from the Dewan of Travancore or, where the Government has undertaken the defence of the suit, from any public officer sued in respect of an act alleged to be done by him in his official capacity.

the appeal is admitted. The placing of the Rules regarding stay of execution just before those relating to procedure on admission of the appeal in the Code is also indicative of the object of the Legislature.

Or. XLIII, Rule 1, which relates to pauper appeals contemplates presentation of two separate documents, namely, a memorandum of appeal and an application for leave to appeal as pauper. The dismissal of the pauper application does not involve dismissal of the appeal. The appeal may still be regarded as an existing appeal if the appellant desires to continue it as an ordinary one by paying the court fee.—

3. Proceedings in a subordinate Court would not be rendered invalid merely because they were taken by such Court after the passing of a stay order by a superior Court. To render such proceedings invalid, information of the passing of the stay order must have been communicated to the subordinate Court by the Court issuing the stay order.— 19 T. L. J., 861.

Restoration of appeal rejected.

(3) Where an appeal is rejected under this Rule, the appellant may apply for an order to restore the appeal and if it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from furnishing the security within the time allowed, the Court shall restore the appeal to its file upon such terms as to security for costs or otherwise as it thinks fit.

The order dismissing the appeal was neither a decree as defined by Section 2 of the Civil Procedure Code nor an order falling within Section 557 [new Section 82 and Or. security for costs of the appeal. The discretion to demand security for costs under Order XL, Rule 10, is not taken away by anything contained in Order XLIII.

The discretion, however, must be exercised judicially. The fact that, before obtaining leave for filing an appeal in forma pauperis, the appellant has to satisfy the Court that he has a good case cannot be overlooked. Some particular circumstances must be shown, such as that the appellant has been acting in a vexatious or improper manner or some like ground (F. B.)—

Or. XL, r. 11 [= S. 523 = Or. XLI, r. 12].

It may be noted here that Rule 11 of the British Indian Code has not been adopted. It empowers the Appellate Court to dismiss the appeal without sending notice to the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred and without serving notice on the respondent or his pleader. The British Indian Rule corresponds to Section 551 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882.

In the Bill which became Regulation II of 1065, Section 551 of the Indian Code was adopted, But the Select Committee who reported on that Bill omitted the provision. They said :—"The High Court were not for its adoption, and it appears unsafe to allow power to dismiss appeals in the summary way contemplated without reference to the original records and before hearing both sides. The provision is likely to operate injuriously to the interests of justice, especially where a tendency for a hasty clearing of the file exists."

Rule 11 of the Indian Code has provided for the Court sending for the records if it thinks fit to do so.

I. 1. Section 532 of Regulation II of 1065 ran as follows :—

"532. Upon hearing, respondent may object to decree as if he had preferred separate appeal.—Any respondent, though he may not have appealed against any part of the decree, may upon the hearing not only support the decree on any of the grounds decided against him in the Court below, but take any objection to the decree which he could have taken by way of appeal, provided he has filed a notice of such objection not less than seven days before the day fixed for the hearing of the appeal.

Form of notice, and provisions applicable thereto.—Such objection shall be in the form of a memorandum, and the provisions of Section 513, so far as they relate to the form and contents of the memorandum of appeal, shall apply thereto.

Explanation.—When the appellant fails to appear at the hearing, or appearing, withdraws the appeal, the respondent shall not be heard in support of his objections to the decree which he could have taken by way of appeal, but did not."

2. The Explanation found in this Section is not found in the corresponding Section 561 of the Indian Code of 1882. In the Statement of Objects and Reasons for the 1065 Bill, it was observed :—"The Explanation added to Section 561 removes the doubt to which the wording of the Section gives rise. The party who does not appeal against the decree virtually acquiesces in it. When his rights under such decree are disputed, it is equitable that he should be allowed to show that what he got is really less than what should have been awarded. But when the appellant acquiesces in the decree by allowing the appeal to go by default, the respondent could have no reasonable grounds to complain, if his objections, not urged in the form of a regular appeal, be not heard."— S. O & R., Para 70.

II. 1. In regard to the changes made, the Notes on Clauses say :—"The provision as regards objection memorandum makes a departure from the existing provision in three matters.

(1) The objection must, at present, be filed within seven days previous to the date fixed for hearing the appeal. This operates as a hardship, and becomes difficult of application when summonses are irregularly served. Hence the proposal to enable the objection to be filed within one month from the date of service.

(2) Objections cannot be heard now if the appeal is withdrawn. This is an unreasonable penalty imposed on the respondent for not having figured as an appellant in a separate appeal of his. Having levied the required Court-fee, it would not be fair to deprive him of the right of being heard, merely because his opponent chose to withdraw the appeal.

(3) Objection memo cannot, as the law now stands, be admitted in forma pauperis; there being no radical distinction between an appeal and an objection, the latter is also permitted to be filed in forma pauperis."

2. It may be noted that the British Indian Rule which is reproduced here, is almost the same as Section 561 of the Indian Code of 1882, with the addition of Sub-Rule 4.

III. For Form of memorandum of Cross objection, see Appendix H, Form No. 8.

Case Law.

1. A respondent shall not, without the leave of the Court for special cause, be heard in support of any other objection to the decree or order in question than those raised by him in the memorandum filed by him.— 1 T. L. R., 48.

2. A respondent in appeal is entitled to have his objections heard and disposed of whether the appeal itself is allowed or not. When the Legislature has conferred on a respondent the right of urging objections at the time of the hearing of the appeal, it clearly intended that they should be heard and disposed of whether or not the appeal is allowed.— 3 T. L. R., 43.

3. A respondent, in special appeal, is entitled simply to raise objections to the decree or judgment of the lower Appellate Court but not to that portion of the decree of the Court of first instance which has become final by operation of law in consequence of the neglect of defendant to appeal to the Zillah Court.

4. Plaintiffs sued as trustees for a declaration of their right to execute a decree obtained on behalf of the trust fund and also for moneys alleged to have been wrongfully realized by defendants in execution, on the pretence that they were the trustees. Defendants contended that they were the legally appointed trustees and, as such, entitled to recover the moneys, and that institution fee on the value of the whole of the trust property should be levied.

The Munsiff, while dismissing the plaintiff's claim for moneys received by defendants whom he held to be co-trustees of plaintiff, granted by the decree a declaration of plaintiffs' right as trustees to administer the affairs of the trust. Both parties appealed to the Zillah Court, plaintiffs' memo of appeal being however marked at the heading as presented under Section 332 of the Civil Procedure Code, though treated in all other respects as a regular appeal memorandum. These appeals were separately registered by the Zillah Court, and were eventually dismissed. Defendants, thereupon, appealed specially on the ground that the declaration of plaintiffs' trusteeship by the lower Courts was beyond the scope of the suit and the Munsiff's jurisdiction, and plaintiffs sought, at the hearing of the special appeal, to object to the disallowance by the lower Court of his claim for moneys.

Held.—(1) The memo, presented by plaintiffs to the Zillah Court, was virtually an appeal against the Munsiff's decree and the dismissal of such appeal, not having been specially appealed against, the plaintiffs were not entitled, at the hearing of defendants' special appeal, to object to the decree of the Zillah Court disallowing their claim.

(2) The determination of plaintiffs' general rights as trustees, though incidental to the relief asked for in the plaint, is not in the relief prayed for and could not be granted in the suit—the value of the subject-matter being beyond the jurisdiction of the Munsiff.— 8 T. L. R., 95.

5. Section 332 of the old Civil Procedure Code (Regulation II of 1037), did not prescribe the mode in which objections were to be taken to the lower Courts' judgments. Where the final judgment shows that a certain objection was taken, though not in writing, and allowed by the final Appellate Court, the decision with respect to the objection cannot be impugned in a subsequent suit, as based on an objection improperly taken and wrongly allowed (F. B).— 11 T. L. R., 112.

[Section 332 referred to was as follows:—"Upon the hearing of the appeal, the respondent may take any objections to the decisions of the lower Court which he might have taken if he had preferred a separate appeal from such decision."]

7. Where a respondent filed a memo of objections regarding questions arising between him and his co-respondents:

11. The rule that requires parties to file objections to findings within a prescribed time before the date of the hearing of the appeal is one of procedure and does not affect the power of the Appellate Court to deal with the findings as it deems proper in the interests of justice.—14 T. L. R., 31.

12. As a general rule a cross-appeal cannot re-open any questions which have been decided between co-respondents, but must have reference to the appellant and to the points which are in dispute between the respondent who takes the cross-appeal and the appellant.— 25 T. L. R., 164.

13. The non-filing by the plaintiffs of any objection-memo against the finding of the lower Court on the several items of account does not disentitle the plaintiff to support the lower Court's decree, which was in their favour by showing that the disallowed items are properly allowable. The Court cannot, in such a suit for adjustment of partnership accounts, do complete justice between the parties without adjudicating upon all the items of account in dispute between the parties.— 1 S. D., 64.

14. Section 532 of the Civil Procedure Code requires an objection to be filed only if it is taken to any part of the lower Court's decree. The same Section clearly allows a respondent to support the decree on any of the grounds decided against him in the lower Court without filing an objection in respect of the same. The law does not require a respondent to file objections to findings but only to any part of the decree which may be against him (F. B.).—

Overruled.—15 T. L. J., 190.

15. The plaintiff could have preferred cross-objections (under Section 532) to the 12th defendant's appeal in respect of the Munsiff's decree refusing to give him credit for the amount of the abatement which the defendant admitted to have received. He neither did this nor preferred an appeal, and in respect of that amount, the decree had become final.— 3 S. D., 17.

16. Defendants 1 and 2 owed plaintiff Rs. 600 under account. Out of this amount, third defendant, a debtor of defendants 1 and 2, undertook to pay Rs. 300 and executed a pro-note in plaintiff's favour. Rs. 300 was paid to plaintiff by a certain person named K, which payment was claimed by defendants 1 and 2 to have been made on their behalf, while the third defendant, on the other hand, claimed it to have been made on his behalf. Plaintiff was willing to credit the amount in favour of whichever party the Court found to have really made the payment and claimed Rs. 300 in the alternative against the contesting parties. The Munsiff found that Rs. 300 was actually paid on behalf of defendants 1 and 2, and gave plaintiff a decree against the 3rd defendant for the amount under the note with interest, and for the balance against 1 and 2 defendants. Third defendant appealed to the District Court making plaintiff and defendants 1 and 2 party respondents. The District Court allowed 3rd defendant's appeal holding that the payment of Rs. 300 was really made on behalf of the 3rd defendant and gave plaintiff a decree against defendants 1 and 2 for this amount. One and two defendants preferred a second appeal to the High Court. The High Court, on the evidence, found that the Rs. 300 paid to the plaintiff was really paid by defendants 1 and 2. On the question whether, while dismissing plaintiff's claim as against 1 and 2 defendants in regard to the Rs. 300, a decree can be given against the 3rd defendant for the same amount in the absence of an appeal or objection-memo by plaintiff,

Held.—Even in the absence of a memorandum of objection filed by a respondent under Section 532, an Appellate Court could grant to such respondent a relief by modifying the decree of the lower Court, where the granting of such relief is necessarily incidental to the relief granted to, or where such relief forms as it were a parcel of, the relief necessary to be granted to the appellant.

Having regard to the relief prayed for in the suit, viz., a decree for the disputed amount, either as against defendants 1 and 2 or as against third defendant, there was nothing for the plaintiff to appeal against when the Munsiff gave him a decree as against the 3rd defendant, and Section 532 could have no application to such cases.

Inasmuch as the finding of the District Judge in the 3rd defendant's appeal, viz., that the 3rd defendant should be given credit for the disputed amount implied that the said sum did not belong to defendants 1 and 2, and that they should not get credit for it, the District Judge acted rightly even in the absence of a memorandum of objections on plaintiff's part, in varying the decree of the Munsiff and giving the plaintiff a decree for the amount as against defendants 1 and 2, as the latter relief was necessarily incidental to, or was a natural or necessary consequence of, the relief granted by the District Judge to the 3rd defendant-appellant before him. The provisions of Section 546 of the C. P. C., empowered the District Judge to do so; and for the same reason, the High Court was competent, even in the absence of an objection memo on plaintiff's part, to pass a decree against the 3rd defendant for the disputed amount on the basis of its finding that the said amount belonged to defendants 1 and 2.

" Section 532 of the Civil Procedure Code contemplates the case of a party who has been denied a portion of the relief prayed for by him in the original Court, and who has been made a respondent in the appeal preferred by the party who has been prejudiced by that portion of the relief which has been actually granted to that respondent by the original Court. The language of the Section also assumes that the respondent mentioned therein could have appealed if he had chosen to do so; in other words, had himself a right of appeal against the decree. In such cases, Section 532 invests the said respondent with two rights—(a) a right to support the decree on any of the grounds decided against him in the Court below, (b) to take any objection to the decree which he could have taken by way of appeal." (F. B.).— 6 T. L. J., 172.

Appl.—8 T. L. J., 425.

17. In the absence of cross-objections, the Appellate Court cannot disturb such portion of the decree of the lower Appellate Court as may be favourable to the appellant, and his right, whatever it may amount to under that decree, will be left undisturbed. 34 T. L. R., 262.

18. The suit was for recovery of three items of property together with mesne profits from defendants 1 to 13. The decree in the suit allowed plaintiffs to recover items 1 and 2 from the 13th defendant and item 3 from the 12th defendant with mesne profits and costs and directed plaintiffs to pay 5th defendant's costs. From this, defendants 11 and 13 and 12th defendant preferred appeals in which plaintiffs and 5th defendant were among the respondents and plaintiffs filed a memo of objections. The appeal of defendants 11 and 13 whose interests were identical related to the order for costs and mesne profits, that of 12th defendant to property item No. 3 and the memo of objections to mesne profits and costs of 5th defendant. On these, the District Judge modified the decree of the District Munsiff by allowing the appeals of defendants 12 and 13 and allowing plaintiffs to recover items 1 and 2 with past and future mesne profits from defendants 1 to 10 with costs from them as well as 13th defendant and by directing 5th defendant to suffer his costs. In special appeal, it was urged for fifth defendant that the District Judge erred in allowing plaintiff's objections which were directed not against the defendants who appealed but against 5th defendant who was merely a co-respondent.

Held.—The matters urged by the plaintiffs by way of objections directed against the 5th defendant and other co-respondents had an intimate bearing on the case and the lower Appellate Court was justified in admitting the memo of objections.

[illegible stamp]

Per Raman Tampi, J.—As a general rule the right of a respondent to urge cross objections should be limited to his urging them against the appellants; and it is only by way of exception to the general rule that one respondent may urge cross-objections as against the other respondents, the exception holding good among other cases in those in which the appeal of some of the parties opens out questions which cannot be disposed of completely without matters being allowed to be opened up as between co-respondents.

Per Raman Menon, C. J.—Section 532 (Civil Procedure Code) is merely a rule of procedure and not one of jurisdiction. It lays down an exception to the general rule that objection to an appealable decree should be taken in the form of a substantive appeal [Section 518 (= Or. XL, r. 1)]. A contravention of the rule will only amount to an irregularity which will, in certain circumstances, be cured by Section 547, Civil Procedure Code [new Section 78].—

19. Where the notice of appeal was not served on the respondent in time so as to enable him to file his memorandum of objections within the period provided in Section 532 of the Civil Procedure Code;

Held,—Section 532 does not apply. That Section contemplates service of notice of appeal sufficiently early, so that the respondent may with due diligence be in a position to file his objections not less than seven days before the date fixed for hearing.

[Note the change in the Rule].

20. The appeal was preferred by the first defendant against a decree for partition obtained by the plaintiffs-respondents who had filed the suit in forma pauperis. The plaintiffs-respondents applied that the memorandum of objections filed by them may be allowed to be filed in forma pauperis.

Held.—The application could not be allowed. Firstly, there was no provision in the Civil Procedure Code (old) covering such an application. Secondly, the plaintiffs had ceased to be paupers as understood in the Civil Procedure Code (F. B.).—

11 T. L. J., 1**.

[Note the new provision in the Rule].

21. In cases in which the notice of appeal is not served within such time as would give to the respondent the prescribed period for filing objections, the limitation prescribed in Section 532 of the Civil Procedure Code does not apply and the Court has power to extend the time (F. B.).—

22. Rule 301 of the Civil Courts' Guide which requires that, whenever a respondent proposes to support the decree appealed against by taking objection to the findings of the lower Court against him, he shall give notice of his intention to do so not later than fifteen clear days after the service of notice of hearing of the appeal by filing in Court a memorandum of the grounds on which the decree is sought to be supported, is not inconsistent with Section 532 of the Civil Procedure Code and has the force of law.

The first part of the first paragraph of Section 532 simply says that a respondent may upon the hearing support the decree of the lower Court in his favour on any of the grounds decided against him by the lower Court. It leaves the matter there and is silent as to what the respondent should do or may be required to do in order to enable him to exercise that right. It is here that the Rule lays down the procedure. There is nothing in such a direction by the Court not consistent with the Code. It is not clear how inconsistency by implication can be imputed to a rule regulating a matter of procedure in respect of which the Legislature has not thought fit to make specific provision in the Code itself. It is this omission that is sought to be supplied by the Rule and it is clear that the Rule in question is not only not inconsistent with the first part of the first paragraph of Section 532, but is one made for the purpose of seeing that the right conferred on a respondent by it is exercised by him in such a manner as may not take his opponent by surprise and put him at a disadvantage (F. B.).— 15 T. L. J., 190.

22. Where the Court from whose decree an appeal is preferred has disposed of the suit upon a preliminary point and the decree is reversed in appeal, the Appellate Court may, if it thinks fit, by order remand the case, and may further direct what issue or issues shall be tried in the case so remanded, and shall send a copy of its judgment and order to the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred, with directions to re-admit the suit under its original number in the register of civil suits, and proceed to determine the suit; and the evidence (if any) recorded during the original trial shall, subject to all just exceptions, be evidence during the trial after remand.

Remand of case by Appellate Court.

Ref.—18 T. L. J., 100.

23. When an appeal has been dismissed as being presented out of time, the hearing and determination of the objection memorandum is not permissible. Under Paragraph (4) of Rule 21 of Order XL, the only two classes of cases in which an objection memorandum could be heard and determined when the appeal itself is not heard are when the appeal is withdrawn or dismissed for default.— 17 T. L. J., 780.

24. The right to press the memorandum of objections remains when the appeal is rejected for failure to deposit costs. Clause (4) of the Rule reserves that right when the original appeal is withdrawn or is dismissed for default. Unless the rejection of the appeal under Order XL, Rule 10, is treated as a dismissal for default, the respondent will have no right to press his memorandum of objections.— 18 T. L. J., 1016.

25. The objection memorandum filed by the respondent has to be treated under Order XL, Rule 21, as the memorandum in a cross-appeal for purposes of return thereof for presentation to the proper Court under Order VII, Rule 10, Clause (1), read with Section 85, Clause (2), of the Civil Procedure Code.

In these matters, the provisions of the Code will have to be liberally construed, for it will be clearly improper to require a respondent to file a fresh memorandum of objections and insist upon payment of the necessary court fee payable thereon again when the same had been paid in another Court which by reason of want of jurisdiction cannot have dealt with the same.— 45 T. L. R., 252 (= 19 T. L. J., 952).

I. This Rule which corresponds to Section 533 of Regulation II of 1065 reproduces Rule 23 of the British Indian Code which corresponds to Section 562 of the Indian Code of 1882.

II. Section 533 of the old Regulation was as follows :—

"533. Remand of case by Appellate Court.—If the Court against whose decree the appeal is made has disposed of the suit upon a preliminary point or in such manner as to exclude any evidence of fact which appears to the Appellate Court essential to the determination of the rights of the parties, and the decree is reversed in appeal, the Appellate Court may, if it thinks fit, by order remand the case, together with a copy of the order in appeal, to the Court against whose decree the appeal is made, with directions to readmit the suit under its original number in the register and proceed to investigate the suit on the merits.

The Appellate Court may, if it thinks fit, direct what issue or issues shall be tried in any case so remanded."

III. Section 562 of the Indian Code of 1882 did not contain the words—"or in such manner as to exclude any evidence of fact which appears to the Appellate Court essential to the determination of the rights of the parties"—found in Section 533 of the old Regulation quoted above. These words were put in by the Select Committee who reported on that Regulation. They said :—

"The corresponding Section 562 in the British Code as amended by Act VII of 1888 has reference only to decisions upon preliminary points. Cases may arise, where the decrees appealed against may have resulted from exclusion of essential points of evidence and in such cases it is expedient that the Appellate Court should have power to order their remand for the defect being remedied."

IV. 1. After Section 533, there were the following two Sections in Regulation II of 1065, taken from the Indian Code of 1882 :—

"534. When further evidence is barred.—When a case is so remanded with directions to take any evidence so excluded, the Court to which the case is remanded shall not take any other evidence in the case, except evidence tendered to contradict the evidence so taken.

"535. Limit to remand.—The Appellate Court shall not remand a case for a second decision, except as provided in Section 533."

2. The provision in the old Indian Code corresponding to Section 534 was repealed by a later Act, VII of 1888, and accordingly it found no place in the original Bill which became Regulation II of 1065. But the Select Committee on that Bill inserted it (as Section 534) because they considered that the amendment made by them in Section 533 (see above) necessitated its retention.

3. In regard to the omission of Section 535, which reproduced the provision in the British Indian Code of 1882, it may be noted that the present Indian Code does not contain it. The Select Committee of 1908 struck out this Rule as in their opinion it was unduly restrictive.—

dated 15-2-1908, Pt. V.

V. In regard to Rule 23 of the present Indian Code, the Indian Special Committee said :—

"After due consideration the Committee have thought it safer not to give legislative sanction to the views enunciated in Habib Bakhsh V. Baldeo Prasad (I. L. R., 23 All., 167). The power of reversal and remand is liable to be abused, while the procedure under Section 566 is free from this liability, and at the same time furnishes an effectual remedy.

"The words at the end of the Rule have been added to clear up a doubt which is stated by the Select Committee to exist as to whether evidence recorded at the original trial can be used on the trial after remand."

[For the Rule corresponding to Section 566 of the Indian Code referred to in the above extract, see Rule 24 Infra.]

VI. The observations of the Indian Select Committee referred to above were:—

"It has been reported to us that the practice in various Provinces differs on the question whether evidence recorded in the proceedings leading up to the decree set aside under Section 562 is in itself available as evidence during the retrial or whether it can only be made admissible, in the case of witnesses attending at the hearing, by examining them upon their previous depositions as statements recorded in a different proceeding. We are of opinion that, subject to all just exceptions, such depositions should, of their own force, be available as evidence."—

Case Law.

1. Where a case has been fully investigated, but the Court of first instance has failed to record its opinion thereon, the Appellate Court ought to proceed to determine the case upon the evidence, if, in its opinion, there is sufficient material on the record for that purpose, and has no power to remand the case.

In the case, there was the greater reason for the Appellate Court's doing so, as the evidence was recorded by the disposing Court itself.— 1 T. L. R., 108.

2. Except in ex parte cases, the parties must know of the remand in the Court making the remand and, consequently, no special notice need be served. A proper notice affixed in the Court to which the remand is made would be sufficient.— 4 T. L. R. App., 23.

3. An Appellate Court is fully competent to make any order as to costs it may think fit, notwithstanding that no regular appeal or objection had been filed against the lower Court's order as to costs.

It is but right and fair that the party whose conduct has necessitated the setting aside of the whole proceedings up to a certain stage of the litigation and the commencing of proceedings afresh from the institution of the suit should be made to pay the costs incurred by the opposite party up to that date (F. B.).— 6 T. L. R., 13.

4. (1) Section 335 of the old Civil Procedure Code (Regulation II of 1037) authorises Appellate Courts to make a remand for trial only, where the lower Court's decision is on a purely preliminary point that decision is set aside on appeal, and the records of the case do not contain sufficient materials or evidence to determine the other points arising from the pleadings of the parties.

(2) When the Appellate Court finds an issue, not raised and considered by the Court of first instance, necessary to be found for the final and complete disposal of the suit, and no evidence on the record of the case to determine that fresh issue, it can only send down that issue for trial and finding to the first Court, and not get rid of the case altogether from its file.— 7 T. L. R., 123.

5. A, alleging himself to be the Karanavan of his Tarwad, sued B to invalidate an Otti executed by his Karanavan (deceased). B, inter alia, denied A's Karanavanship. The Munsiff found A's Karanavanship disproved and dismissed the suit. The Zillah Judge affirmed the Munsiff's finding but reversed the decree and remanded the suit with directions to make the real Karanavan of the Tarwad party and proceed with the case de novo.

Held.—In no case where the judgment of the first Court, on the merits, is affirmed in appeal, is such remand authorized by Section 335 of the old Civil Procedure Code (Regulation II of 1037).— 8 T. L. R., 46.

6. The decree passed, on remand, which is the final decree, is the only legally operative decree, and the decree that had been passed prior to the remand ceased to be of any legal efficacy.— 9 T. L. R., 75.

7. (1) A remand order under Section 533 of the Code, can be made only in cases where the Court of first instance disposed of the suit on a preliminary point or in such a manner as to exclude any evidence of fact essential to the determination of the rights of the parties; but where a party failed to adduce evidence and the original Court disposed of the suit on the available record, and the Appellate Court thinks that the defaulting party might be allowed a further opportunity to adduce evidence, the remand must be made under Section 540 [ = Or. XL, r. 27 ].

(2) In an appeal against the order of an Appellate Court remanding a case, the High Court may enter into the merits and dispose of any preliminary point adjudicated upon by the Court of first instance. 10 T. L. R. App., 3.

Ref.—32 T. L. R., 80.

8. The question having been referred to a Full Bench whether a party who did not appeal against a remand order of the Appellate Court passed overruling a preliminary objection, may be allowed, in special appeal against the final decree on merits of the Appellate Court, to raise the same preliminary objection :

Held.—The remand order in the case, being an interlocutory decree, the special appellant's omission to appeal against it, would not deprive him of the right to impeach it in the special appeal against the appellate decree on merits and to urge the preliminary objection overruled by the interlocutory decree.— 11 T. L. R., 8.

Ref.—18 T. L. J., 952.

[See also Section 83.]

9. Where a Court of first appeal remanded a case to the original Court for the addition of party and fresh trial :

Held (on appeal from the order of remand).—By force of Section 551 of the Civil Procedure Code [ new Section 85 (2)], an Appellate Court has the power of adding any party it may think necessary. The proper course in the case for the lower Appellate Court was to have added the party itself, and then to have framed the necessary issues and remitted the case to the original Court for findings on those issues.— 11 T. L. R., 180.

10. Where a respondent (plaintiff) filed objections to the order of the lower Court setting aside an ex parte decree :

Held.—As no appeal lies against an order setting aside an ex parte decree, no objections can be allowed to be taken to such order under Section 582 of the C. P. C., [=Or. XL, r. 21 ] in the Appellate Court by the respondent (plaintiff). Section 560 [new Section 83 (l) ] permits an appellant to set forth "as a ground in the appeal memo" any non-appealable order which may have affected the decision of the case. But it confers no such power on a respondent. An error in making such an order cannot be made a ground for reversal of the decree passed on the merits. It is the policy of the law to discourage purely technical objections to a decision given on the merits by a Court of competent jurisdiction. Section 547 [new Section 78] distinctly enjoins that no error, defect or irregularity in any order passed not affecting the merits or the jurisdiction of the Court shall be a ground for reversal of the decree appealed against. 14 T. L. R., 39.

11. Section 533 of the Civil Procedure Code applies only where the original Court decided a case on a preliminary point and that decision is set aside in appeal.— 16 T. L. R. App., 46.

12. Of the Sections authorising a remand —Sections 533 and 537 [ = Or. XL, r. 24], the latter refers only to cases where specific issues have to be recorded by the Appellate Court and that Court has to pass the decision on findings submitted by the original Court. That Section is evidently not intended to cover cases which have to be wholly retried by the original Court, and in which the policy of the Legislature is to give the litigants the benefit of the decisions of two Courts. Such cases would seem therefore to fall within the purview of Section 533.

It is true that Section 535 [omitted] prohibits the Appellate Court from remanding a case for a second decision except as provided in Section 533. But in construing a statute every part of it must be read with every other part and effect must not be given to one part in such a manner as to defeat the rest. Section 533 must therefore be construed in such a manner as not to defeat the provisions of Sections 551 and 28 [new Section 85 (2) and Or. I, r. 10]. Hence it has to be taken that a remand necessitated by the addition of a fresh party under Sections 551 and 28 was intended to fall under Section 533 so as to be saved from the prohibition in Section 535 (F. B.).—

13. Section 533 is not intended to cover cases falling within the express provisions of Section 537 [Or. XL, r. 24]. The former refers only to cases which have been disposed of (1) on a preliminary point or (2) in such a manner as to exclude any evidence of fact which appears to be necessary and (3) in which the decree is reversed by the remanding Court. In any case no remand under this Section can be made unless the lower Court's decree is reversed. In the absence of the conditions specified in Section 533, Section 535 [omitted] expressly prohibits a remand under that Section.

A remand under Section 533 deprives the parties of the benefit of the appeal, as they should pay fresh institution fees if they wish to prefer an appeal from the decree after remand.— 1 S. D., 346.

14. Section 533 C. P. C., permits the Appellate Court to remand a case for findings on facts but it is not within its province to direct the original Court to alter its decision on question of law.—
2 S. D., 248.

15. Where a personal decree on a hypothecation bond was obtained against the late Karanavan as representing his Tarwad, the succeeding Karanavan pleading, inter alia, absence of consideration for the bond in resistance to the execution of the decree, was not bound to prove the issue, the onus of proof ordinarily resting on the creditor. The fact that the question of consideration was agitated by an application under Section 238 [new Section 40] rather than in a regular suit did not make any difference as to onus of proof.

The order appealed against was set aside on the ground that the Judge below erred in casting the burden of proof on the appellant and the case remanded under Section 533.— 28 T. L. R., 170.

16. A Munsiff dismissed a suit after framing issues and taking evidence without recording distinct findings on some of the issues. On appeal the District Judge reversed the Munsiff's decision, re-settled the points for determination which were not essentially different from, but were clearer and more distinct than, the issues framed by the Munsiff himself and remanded the suit for trial de novo under Section 533 of the Code of Civil Procedure; directing at the same time an amendment of the plaint.

Held.—(1) As the Munsiff had not disposed of the suit upon any preliminary point, nor in such a manner as to exclude any evidence of fact which was essential to the determination of the rights of the parties, the District Judge was wrong in having reversed the Munsiff's decree and remanded the suit for trial denovo under Section 533 of the Civil Procedure Code especially when the issues re-settled by him were not essentially different from those framed by the Munsiff and there was no contention that the parties were misled by the form of the issues framed by the Munsiff.

In the circumstances of the case the remand should have been under Section 537 [Or. XL, r. 24] of the Code for distinct findings on the issues in the case.

(2) The direction to 'amend the plaint was wrong, as plaintiff sought no new relief, and as no new points of dispute which were essentially different from the point of dispute arising from the original pleadings arose between the parties.—

17. A remand order under Section 533, speaking generally, restores the parties to the position in which they stood before the Court of first instance passed its decree. This implies that they will have the right at the new trial to adduce whatever evidence they may wish to, subject, of course, to such restrictions as may have been imposed on them either by the order of remand or by the Court of first instance in the course of the first trial. Whether this right should be qualified in any instance and if so, to what extent, are questions which must be left to the discretion of the Court which remands the suit to decide, having regard to all the circumstances of the case.— 31 T. L. R., 139.

18. Per Viraraghava Aiyengar, J. (Chatfield, J. concurring).—Where on hearing an appeal, the Appellate Court is of opinion that certain additional evidence has to be taken in order to satisfactorily decide the various issues raised and tried by the Court of first instance, the Appellate Court is competent to act under Section 538, C. P. C., if the evidence wrongly excluded by the trial Court is in the opinion of the Appellate Court of such a nature, or has so vital a bearing on the questions arising in the suit, that it may be deemed to fall within the words 'exclude any evidence of fact which appears to the Appellate Court essential to the determination of the rights of the parties' occurring in Section 533. If the excluded evidence is not of the nature mentioned above, the provisions of Section 540, C. P. C., [Or. XL, r. 27] have to be adhered to by the Appellate Court. Section 537 [Or. XL, r. 24] can come into operation only when there is omission to frame issue or try any issue or 'to determine any question of fact essential to the right decision of the suit on the merits'. The words 'determine any question of fact' occurring in Section 537 are meant to cover also cases where no finding on an issue which has been tried is given by the trial Court.

Per Cheriyan, J.—If the Appellate Court is of opinion that certain additional evidence has to be taken in order to satisfactorily decide the various issues raised and tried by the Court of first instance, the Appellate Court must take action under Section 540, C. P. C.

It is the duty of the High Court to enter into the merits and appreciate the evidence on questions of fact when the findings of the trial Court and the lower Appellate Court are conflicting, and it will not ordinarily be possible to satisfactorily discharge that duty in the absence of findings of both the Courts based on the whole evidence. Such findings can be had only if the Appellate Court is at liberty to call upon the Court of first instance to record revised findings. It has often been observed that the Civil Procedure Code is not exhaustive and where a particular course of action is not prohibited by the Code, it should not be deemed to limit or otherwise affect the inherent power of the Court to make such orders as may be necessary for the ends of justice. It may also be pointed out that it has been a well-established practice for the Appellate Courts in this State to call for revised findings whenever additional evidence is ordered to be taken by the Court of first instance. So long as, in the interests of justice, this practice is found to be very helpful for Courts of first appeal and almost necessary for a Court of second appeal in cases of conflicting findings on questions of fact, where the Law empowers it to enter into the merits and decide questions of fact for itself, and in view of the fact that such a course is not prohibited by the Civil Procedure Code, it will not be proper to deviate from the well-established practice in a matter of procedure.

Per Viraraghava Aiyengar, Chatfield and Cheriyan JJ:—If the Appellate Court direct the trial Court under Section 540, C. P. C., to receive additional evidence, it is competent to the Appellate Court to call upon the trial Court to record revised findings upon the issues already tried by it.—

19. From the decree in a suit of the value of more than Rs. 1000, an appeal was preferred by the plaintiff-petitioner to the District Court which set aside the Munsiff's decree and remanded the suit under Section 583 for re-trial. The Munsiff to whom the suit was remanded declined to try and dispose of the suit as, in his opinion, the judgment of the District Court which had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal was not a valid judgment.

Held.—The course adopted by the District Munsiff was illegal inasmuch as it was not competent to him in the face of the remand order to have declined to try and dispose of the suit. Even though the District Judge acted without jurisdiction in entertaining the appeal, the proper course for the defendants (counter-petitioners) to have taken, was to invoke the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court to cancel the appellate proceedings. The Munsiff clearly had no jurisdiction to revise the Judge's order and virtually to set it aside.—

20. Where the suit has not been disposed of by the primary Court upon a preliminary point nor in such manner as to exclude any evidence of fact essential to the determination of the rights of the parties, Section 583, C. P. C., will not apply. It is not the contention of the respondent that the Court of first instance omitted to settle or try any issue or determine any essential question of fact, and so, Section 537, C. P. C., will not apply. Where the Appellate Court finds that additional evidence is required to be taken in order to satisfactorily decide a question arising between the parties the proper procedure for the Appellate Court is to act under Section 540, C. P. C., and direct the primary Court to receive additional evidence that the parties might adduce on the question and submit revised findings to the Appellate Court.—
10 T. L. J., 137.

21. The provisions of the Civil Procedure Code as regards the power to order a remand are not exhaustive. Besides the cases specifically dealt with in the Code, there are cases in which the Appellate Court has inherent power to order a retrial for the ends of justice. When the lower Court has committed any error, omission or irregularity, by reason of which there has not been a proper trial or an effectual or complete adjudication of the suit, the Appellate Court has set aside, ex debito justitiæ the proceedings of the lower Court and directed the primary Court to retry the case.

Though an order of remand may be in contravention of the provisions of Section 583, yet the error may be cured by the consent of parties.—38 T. L. R., 217
(=12 T. L. J., 160).

Ref.—18 T. L. J., 175.

22. When a remand is made, it is the order of remand that confers jurisdiction on the Court to which the remand is made. The jurisdiction being created by the order of remand is defined and circumscribed by it.

Therefore, where the Court to which the remand is made has admitted evidence not covered by the order of remand and used such evidence in arriving at its findings, the findings returned are invalid in law.—
15 T. L. J., 413.

23. When settling the issue, the Munsiff did not draw up the issue paper as required by Rule 64 of the Civil Courts Guide. If he had elucidated the relevant facts bearing on the pleadings and prepared the issue paper in the manner pointed out in the Rule, the obscurity in the pleadings would have been removed and the Court would have been in a better position to understand the defendant's position.

Omission on the part of a trial Court to comply with the imperative provisions of the Rule laid down by the High Court in the matter of trial of suits is an irregularity. If by reason of the omission there has not been a proper trial or an effective and complete adjudication of the suit and the party complaining of the omission has been materially prejudiced thereby, the Appellate Court should not hestitate to vacate the decision of the trial Court and to order retrial.

The provisions of the Civil Procedure Code as regards the power to order remand are not exhaustive, and besides the cases specially provided for in the Code, there are cases in which the Appellate Court has inherent power to order re-trial for the ends of justice. The restrictive provision in Section 585 is omitted in the present C. P. C., and the inherent power of the Court to make such orders as may be necessary for the ends of justice are expressly provided for in Section 115. The Appellate Court is, therefore, now more free to exercise its power of remand when it considers it necessary in the ends of justice, though the case may not strictly fall under Order XL, Rule 22. The decree was therefore set aside, and the suit remanded under this Rule.—

18 T. L. J., 175.

24. In the case of remand under Section 533, the decisions on questions contained in the orders directing the same will be conclusive between the parties unless vacated in appropriate proceedings, and the Court which passed the order is precluded from going behind the same when the matter comes up again by way of a fresh appeal against the decree after remand.

In the case of orders of remand under Section 537 [=Or. XL, r. 24], the questions upon which arguments had been heard before remand and definite opinions expressed by the Court at the time when such remand was ordered, should not be allowed to be re-agitated at a later stage. But if the opinions on those questions were only incidentally or provisionally made, the Court not having intended such expression of opinion as a decision of the question, the whole case must be deemed to be open for consideration at a later stage, irrespective of the expression of opinion by the Court on some of the questions involved therein at an earlier stage. Whether the order of remand has decided the question in dispute or the same only contains incidental or provisional observations, is a matter that has to be decided with reference to the facts of each case.

It is a well-recognised rule in the law of pleadings that an estoppel must always be specifically pleaded, unless it appears on the face of the adverse pleading, when it is ground for an objection in point of law. A plea of estoppel must be drafted with great care and particularity. It must state in full detail the facts on which the party pleading relies as constituting the estoppel, and should also specify the allegations which it is alleged the other party is precluded from proving. Facts that form the basis of estoppel have to be specifically pleaded. Even when it turns upon silence, the same has to be expressly alleged (F. B.).— 44 T. L. R., 408

25. The powers of Appellate Courts under Order XL, Rule 22, are wider than those under Section 533 of the Code of 1065.

The expression "preliminary point" in Rule 22 of Order XL, means a matter preliminary to the general determination of the suit which the parties bring before the Court for decision. It is not confined to Where evidence on record sufficient. Appellate Court may determine case finally.

23. Where the evidence upon the record is sufficient to enable the Appellate Court to pronounce judgment, the Appellate Court may, after resettling the issues, if necessary, finally determine the suit, notwithstanding that the judgment of the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred has proceeded wholly upon some ground other than that on which the Appellate Court proceeds.

Where Appellate Court may frame issues and refer them for trial to Court whose decree appealed from.

24. Where the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred has omitted to frame or try any issue, or to determine any question of fact, which appears to the Appellate Court essential to the right decision of the suit upon the merits, the Appellate Court may, if necessary, frame issues, and refer the same for trial to the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred, and in such case shall direct such Court to take the additional evidence required; and such Court shall proceed to try such issues, and shall return the evidence to the Appellate Court together with its findings thereon and the reasons therefor.

such legal points only as may be pleaded in bar of suit, but comprehends all such points as may have prevented the Court from disposing of the case on its merits whether such points are pure questions of law or pure questions of fact. The expression preliminary point has to be liberally construed. It would not be violent to treat the shutting out of the evidence on one side as matter which has affected the decision of a suit prejudicially and on that basis considering it to be a preliminary question falling within the purview of Order XL, Rule 22.

Even in cases which cannot be brought within the scope of Order XL, Rule 22, the better view seems to be that Appellate Courts can exercise powers of remand under their inherent powers under Section 115 in appropriate cases.— 19 T. L. J., 1353.

Case Law.

1. An omission to regard the qualification of an obligation created by law and to frame a definite issue in connection with it amounts to material irregularity. The issue raised in the case and tried was general in its wording and the mind neither of the parties nor of the Courts below was specifically directed to the statutory qualification.— 38 T. L. R., 179 (=13 T. L. J., 328**).

2. Under Section 83, Clause (2), the only remedy that a person aggrieved by an order of remand under Order XL, Rule 22, has, is by way of appeal against that order, and if he does not do so, he is, thereafter, precluded from disputing its correctness. This appeal may be preferred within sixty days under Article 141 of the Limitation Regulation. The statute has imposed no other restriction upon this right of appeal vested in a person aggrieved by the order of remand.

The right of appeal against a remand order by an Appellate Court is unaffected by the subsequent passing of a final decree by the trial Court, and the proceedings taken by the original Court after the appeal filed against the remand order are null and void.

The reversal of the order of remand will vacate the final decree passed after the remand, for that decree depends for its validity on the remand order, and with the quashing of that order the decree will cease to have any force.

Where the lower Appellate Court decides the main issues in the case and remands the case on a single question remaining to be decided, the remand has to be under Order XL, Rule 24 and not Rule 22.

Or. XL, r. 25 [=S. 588=Or. XLI, r. 26]

Case Law.

1. The party who files no objection to findings has no right, except with the permission of the Court, to call them in question at the hearing. But the rule that requires parties to file objections to findings within a prescribed time before the date of the hearing of the appeal is one of procedure and pleading and does not affect the power of Appellate Court to deal with the findings as it deems proper in the interests of justice.— 14 T. L. R., 31.

2. When a first Appellate Court has remanded a case to the Court of first instance for the trial of issues, and when on the return of the findings on those issues, no objections have been preferred by either party, the Appellate Court is bound to consider the findings of the lower Court on the merits and the imperative provisions of Section 545 [=Or. XL, r. 30] of the Civil Procedure Code apply alike to cases remanded by the first Appellate Court for the trial of issues, and to those in which no such remand has taken place.

Where, therefore, a first Appellate Court remanded a suit for a finding on facts and allowed the appeal after the receipt of the Munsiff's findings, without going into the facts of the case on the simple ground that the respondents had not filed objections :

Held.—The judgment of the lower Appellate Court was not final as contemplated by law and therefore the case should be remanded under Section 583, C. P. C.

The non-filing of the objections does not relieve the lower Appellate Court of the necessity of recording its own findings on the merits. The High Court, as a Court of second appeal, is precluded from entering into the merits of the case in order to ascertain the weight of the evidence produced in support of the allegations of the parties, when the findings of the lower Court are concurrent; and it has to be seen to that the lower Appellate Court has recorded its findings in the manner prescribed by law. "Even if no objection was preferred in writing or orally, it is not the duty of the lower Appellate Court to accept the Munsiff's finding blindly without examining the evidence on which it was founded and satisfying itself that it was correct and proper to be accepted."— 18 T. L. R., 23.

3. Suit for the recovery of Tarwad properties taken possession of by defendant, a junior member. Defendant contended that the properties were allotted to him for maintenance and that plaintiff was not entitled to take possession of them till he had made other arrangements for maintenance. The lower Court decreed the suit in plaintiff's favour conditional on his making other arrangements for defendant's maintenance. Plaintiff appealed to the High Court and the High Court remanded the suit for findings on fresh issues. The Munsiff found the maintenance allotment not true but that defendant was in possession of the properties from 1064 to 1082 (date of suit). On receipt of the findings, the respondent was called upon by the High Court to file his objections, if any, within seven days. The respondent neglected to file any objections.

At the hearing, the respondent's Vakil argued that, in view of the finding of the lower Court regarding the possession by the defendant, it should be presumed that plaintiff, Karanavan of the Tarwad, impliedly agreed to treat the properties as allotted to defendant for maintenance. In answer, appellant's Vakil urged that respondent not having filed objections within the time allotted, could not be allowed to argue against the finding at the hearing and that the finding of the Court of first instance had become final.

Held.—The respondent, not having filed objections within the time fixed by the Appellate Court, was not entitled as a matter of right to object to the finding at the hearing but that he might do so, provided the Court gave him permission.

The Appellate Court was not bound to accept the findings of the lower Court as final for the reason that objections had not

1. An Appellate Court is not authorised to try an appeal de novo and take the whole evidence. Section 339 of the old Civil Procedure Code only provides for the taking of additional evidence in appeal under certain circumstances, the Court in such cases invariably recording the reasons for such procedure.

The taking of such additional evidence does not make a special appeal liable to be heard and determined as if it were a regular appeal.— 1 T. L. R., 79.

2. No appellant shall be allowed to produce fresh documents with memorandum of appeal. As a rule, he must refer to them in the memo of appeal. The proper procedure in cases of such documents is that they should be produced at the hearing of the appeal with a written application to admit them. No application for admission of fresh documents shall be heard or granted unless the applicant shows that he gave at least seven days' notice in writing to the other side, containing full particulars of the documents intended to be filed and of his intention to so apply.—

3. The judgment of the lower Appellate Court did not satisfy even the minimum requirements of the law. 1. No decree can be passed in appeal against a defendant whom the Court of first instance absolved from liability, and against whom no appeal has been preferred within time.— 3 T. L. R., 46.

2. When the case was before the lower Court for the trial of issues remitted by the High Court, the parties compromised and presented a Razinamah. The Judge passed an order affirming it and directing a decree to be drawn up accordingly.

Held.—As the case was pending in the High Court the Judge had no jurisdiction to pass such order. He should have sent the Razi to the High Court. The terms of the Razi being unobjectionable were decreed.— 4 T. L. R., 25.

3. The Appellate Court cannot raise fresh issues with reference to pleas not urged in the Court below.—9 T. L. J., 195.

4. In an appeal against the order of an Appellate Court remanding a case, the High Court may enter into the merits and dispose of any preliminary point adjudicated upon by the Court of first instance.

It is obviously expedient and equally desirable that (on the hypothesis that the ruling is incorrect) it should be quashed at once, and thereby the lower Courts saved the time and labour, and the parties, the expense and annoyance, of a protracted investigation of a claim barred by limitation.— 10 T. L. R. App., 3.

5. When a suit has been dismissed against one of two defendants by the Court of first instance and the defeated plaintiff has not appealed against that part of the decree, the addition of the defendant against whom the suit has been dismissed, to the array of parties does not empower the Appellate Court to pass against him a decree which the Court of first instance declined to pass and in the decision of which the plaintiff chose to acquiesce.— 25 T. L. R., 91.

Ref.—6 T. L. J., 172.
Dist.—19 T. L. J., 1016.

6. "It is doubtless true that, on appeal, the whole case, including the facts, is within the jurisdiction of the Appeal Court. But generally speaking, it is undesirable to interfere with the findings of fact of the trial Judge who sees and hears the witnesses, and has an opportunity of noting their demeanour, especially in cases where the issue is simple and depends on the credit which attached to one or other of conflicting witnesses. Nor should his pronouncement with respect to their credibility be put aside on a mere calculation of probabilities by the Court of appeal. In making these observations, Their Lordships have no desire to restrict the discretion of the Appellate Courts in India in the consideration of evidence. They only wish to point out that where the issue is simple and straightforward, and the only question is which set of witnesses is to be believed, the verdict of the Judge trying the case should not be lightly disregarded" (39 Bom., 386, P. C.).— 8 T. L. J., 472.

7. The general rule is that an Appellate Court ought to be extremely chary in interfering with the finding of fact where that finding is based on the ground that the Judge who heard the evidence of the witnesses did not believe them; and probably the advantage of hearing the witnesses give their evidence is of special value when it relates to the mental capacity of a person. This rule, however, is not of universal application. The rule does not apply to cases where the Appellate Court is clearly satisfied that there has been miscarriage in the appreciation of evidence, that it is manifestly clear from the probabilities that the Court below was wrong, that there has been some miscarriage in respect of a presumption to which too much weight was given or that there is so strong a preponderence of testimony that the Appellate Court can confidently pronounce the decision to be wrong.

"The advantage the Judge of the primary Court possesses in forming a correct opinion of the credit due to the witnesses, does not relieve the Court of Appeal from the duty of examining the whole evidence and forming for itself an opinion upon the whole of the case" (10 M. I. A., 429).

"Even where the appeal turns upon a question of fact, the Court of Appeal has to bear in mind that its duty is to re-hear the case and the Court must re-consider the materials before the Judge, with such other materials as it may have decided to admit. The Court must then make up its own mind, not disregarding the judgment appealed from, but carefully weighing and considering it; and not shrinking from overruling it, if on full consideration, the Court comes to the conclusion that the judgment is wrong" (1898, 1. Ch. 704).

To justify the rejection of evidence, it must be either contradicted, or improbable in itself or obnoxious, according to some established legal mode of testing truth.— 36 T. L. R., 97 (=10 T. L. J., 99).

ORDER XLI.

Appeals from Appellate Decrees.

Procedure. The Rules of Order XL shall apply, so far as may be, to appeals from appellate decrees.

ORDER XLII.

Appeals from Orders.

Appeals from orders. 1. An appeal shall lie from the following orders under the provisions of Section 82, namely :—

(1) an order under Rule 10 (2) of Order I striking out or adding the name of a person as plaintiff or defendant ;

(2) an order under Rule 4 of Order II giving or refusing to give leave for adding a cause of action ;

---

Or. XLI, r. 1 [Cf. S. 556=Or. XLII, r. 1]

I. Section 556 of Regulation II of 1065 has the following words at the end :—" to appeals under this Chapter, and to the execution of decrees passed in such appeals."

II. See Section 86, Clause (a), Supra.

Case Law.

See under Section 86.

Order XLII : " As has been already remarked, provision for questioning several interlocutory orders in appeal immediately, is now repealed, and it is only such orders that affect the jurisdiction of the Court, or affect the person or property of a litigant that are allowed to be challenged immediately by way of appeal. Orders allowing amendments of plaints or written statements adding or striking out a party, including or excluding causes of action, directing parties to appear, allowing or refusing to allow a set off, and similar orders which are passed in the course of a suit are all omitted from the purview of an immediate appeal. All orders, however, that determine the suit and that are passed as a penalty for the disobedience of the litigants to the orders of the Court are made appealable. In a matter such as allowing or taking away the right of appeal, there must be a large difference of opinion, and it will depend on the view taken as to the general policy applicable, and, to some extent on the efficiency and the integrity of judicial officers as to how many, or how few, appeals may be allowed against interlocutory orders. It is deemed that, viewed from any standpoint, the provision hereafter should be for less and not more scope for interference by an Appellate Court in matters essentially incidental.

" It must also be noted that no second appeals at all are now provided from an appellate judgment in appeals passed against orders.

" It may further be noted that an appeal is provided against orders admitting applications for review, not on certain specified grounds only, but on all available grounds."

(3) an order under Rule 10 of Order VII returning a plaint to be presented to the proper Court ;

(4) an order under Rule 10 of Order VIII pronouncing judgment against a party ;

(5) an order under Rule 9 of Order IX rejecting an application (in a case open to appeal) for an order to set aside the dismissal of a suit ;

(6) an order under Rule 13 of Order IX rejecting an application (in a case open to appeal) for an order to set aside a decree passed ex parte ;

(7) an order under Rule 4 of Order X pronouncing judgment against a party ;

(8) an order under Rule 21 of Order XI ;

(9) an order under Rule 10 of Order XVI for the attachment of property ;

(10) an order under Rule 20 of Order XVI pronouncing judgment against a party ;

(11) an order under Rule 27 of Order XXI staying execution of the decree ;

(12) an order under Rule 32 of Order XXI on an objection to the draft of a document or of an endorsement ;

II. See Section 82 Supra.

III. 1. In the original Bill, the provisions of the British Indian Rule were adopted. But the Select Committee recast them. They said:—"Appeals provided for from certain orders under Section 557 of the existing Regulation have been omitted in Rule 1 (of the original Bill). After carefully examining them, we consider it necessary that some of the orders have to be included. As such inclusion necessitates a great deal of change in the numbering, we propose to substitute the following for Rule 1."— S. C. R.

2. The corresponding Rule in the British Indian Code does not contain the following Clauses which allow appeals against the orders referred to therein:—

Clause (1) An order under Rule 10 (2) of Order I.

" (2) An order under Rule 4 of Order II.

" (11) An order under Rule 27 of Order XXI.

" (18) An order under Rules 2, 11, 13 and 14 of Order XXXII.

" (24) An order under Rule 10 of Order XL.

IV. Under the Code, decrees and orders which have the force of decrees are appealable.

Orders which come under Sections 40, 108 and 109, Rule 11 of Order VII and Rule 2 of Order XXI are now decrees.

All orders are not appealable. Only those orders that are provided for in Section 82 read with Order XLII are appealable. There is no second appeal from an order which is appealable.

---

Procedure.

2. The Rules of Order XL shall apply, so far as may be, to appeals from orders:

Provided that, in the case of appeals against interlocutory orders made prior to decree, the Court which passed the order appealed from shall not send the records unless an order has been made for the stay of further proceedings in that Court.

ORDER XLIII.

Pauper Appeals.

Who may appeal as pauper.

1. Any person entitled to prefer an appeal, who is unable to pay the fee required for the memorandum of appeal, may present an application accompanied by a memorandum of appeal, and may be allowed to appeal as a pauper, subject, in all matters, including the presentation of such application, to the provisions relating to suits by paupers, in so far as those provisions are applicable:

Procedure on application for admission of appeal.

Provided that the Court shall reject the application unless, upon a perusal thereof and of the judgment and decree appealed from, it sees reason to think that the decree is contrary to law or to some usage having the force of law, or is otherwise erroneous or unjust.

Or. XLII, r. 2 [= S. 559 = Or. XLIII, r. 2]

1. For Section 559 of the old Regulation, see under Section 86 Supra.

2. The Rule in the Indian Code does not contain the Proviso. It was added by the Select Committee who said:—"This is intended to prevent obstruction to the further progress pending appeal, unless a stay order is passed by the Appellate Court."

Case Law.

Or. XLIII, r. 1 [= S. 561 = Or. XLIV, r. 1].

1. Section 561 of the old Regulation was as follows:—

"561. Who may appeal as pauper.—Any person entitled under this Code or any other law to prefer an appeal, who is unable to pay the fee required for the petition of appeal, may, on presenting an application accompanied by a memorandum of appeal, be allowed to appeal as a pauper, subject to the Rules contained in Chapters XXVI, XXXIX, XL and XLI, in so far as those Rules are applicable:

Provided that the Court.........erroneous or unjust."

[The Chapters referred to, deal with the following:—

XXVI.— Suits by Paupers.

XXXIX.—Of appeals from original decrees.

Inquiry into pauperism.

2. The inquiry into the pauperism of the applicant may be made either by the Appellate Court or under the orders of the Appellate Court by the Court from whose decision the appeal is preferred :

Provided that, if the applicant was allowed to sue or appeal as a pauper in the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred, no further inquiry in respect of his pauperism shall be necessary, unless the Appellate Court sees cause to direct such inquiry.

ORDER XLIV.

Reference.

Reference of question to High Court.

1. Where, before or on the hearing of a suit or an appeal in which the decree is not subject to appeal, or where, in the execution of any such decree, any question of law or usage having the force of law arises, on which the Court trying the suit or appeal, or executing the decree, entertains reasonable doubt, the Court may, either of its own motion or on the application of any of the parties, draw up a statement of the facts of the case and the point on which doubt is entertained, and refer such statement with its own opinion on the point for the decision of the High Court.

XL.—Of appeals from appellate decrees.

XLI.—Of appeals from Orders.]

II. The present Rule reproduces that in the British Indian Code. About the addition of the words "in all matters including the presentation of such application," the Indian Special Committee said :—"Words have been added to avoid the conclusion at which the Madras High Court has recently arrived (I. L. R., 26 Mad , 369)."

In the Madras case referred to, it was held that, in the absence of the words now added, the rule as to the presentation of a pauper's petition (see Or. XXXIII, r. 3) did not apply to pauper appeals.

III. See under Order XXXIII, Rule 1.—
2 T. L. R. App., 7.

IV. For Form of Application to appeal in forma pauperis, see Appendix H, Form No. 10.

For Notice of appeal in forma pauperis, see Appendix H, Form No. 11.

Case Law.

1. Before granting leave to appeal as pauper, the Court must be satisfied that there is something wrong on the face of the decree, or, in the words of the provision, that the decree is contrary to law or some usage having the force of law or is otherwise erroneous or unjust. For this purpose, it is permissible to look into the application, judgment and decree alone and no other record. If the Court is not satisfied, it has no option but to reject the application.

2. The Court may either stay the proceedings or proceed in the case notwithstanding such reference, and may pass a decree or make an order contingent upon the decision of the High Court on the point referred ; but no decree or order shall be executed in any case in which such reference is made until the receipt of a copy of the judgment of the High Court upon the reference.

Court may pass decree contingent upon decision of High Court.

3. The High Court, after hearing the parties if they appear and desire to be heard, shall decide the point so referred, and shall transmit a copy of its judgment, under the signature of the Registrar, to the Court by which the reference was made; and such Court shall, on the receipt thereof, proceed to dispose of the case in conformity with the decision of the High Court.

Judgment of High Court to be transmitted, and case disposed of accordingly.

4. The costs (if any) consequent on a reference for the decision of the High Court shall be costs in the case.

Costs of reference to High Court.

---

The provision is a necessary safeguard introduced by the Legislature for the benefit of litigants who find themselves opposed by paupers, and is apt to be overlooked.—
17 T. L. J., 608.

2. The application referred to in Order XLIII, Rule 1 and the memorandum of appeal are really quite distinct. The application should state facts showing that the applicant is a pauper and that the decree of the lower Court is open to the objections specified in the Rule. The memorandum of appeal is not expected to contain facts. Though the memorandum of appeal accompanies the application, it is not part of it.—
18 T. L. J., 1183.

ORDER XLV.

Review.

Application for review of judgment.

1. (1) Any person considering himself aggrieved—

(a) by a decree or order from which an appeal is allowed, but from which no appeal has been preferred,

(b) by a decree or order from which no appeal is allowed, or

(c) by a decision on a reference from a Court, in non-appealable cases, and who, from the discovery of new and important matter or evidence which, after the exercise of due diligence, was not within his knowledge or could not be produced by him at the time when the decree was passed or order made, or on account of some mistake or error apparent on the face of the record, or for any other sufficient reason, desires to obtain a review of the decree passed or order made against him, may apply for a review of judgment to the Court which passed the decree or made the order.

(2) A party who is not appealing from a decree or order may apply for a review of judgment notwithstanding the pendency of an appeal by some other party except where the ground of such appeal is common to the applicant and the appellant, or when, being respondent, he can present to the Appellate Court the case on which he applies for the review.

Or. XLIV, r. 5 [=S. 567=Or. XLVI, r. 5] Or. XLV, r. 1 [=S. 569=Or. XLVII, r. 1]

See Section 88 Supra.

To whom applications for review may be made.

2. An application for review of a decree or order of a Court, upon some ground other than the discovery of such new and important matter or evidence as is referred to in Rule 1 or the existence of a clerical or arithmetical mistake or error apparent on the face of the decree or order shall be made only to the Judge who passed the decree or made the order sought to be reviewed; but any such application may, if the Judge who passed the decree or made the order has ordered notice to issue under Rule 4, Sub-rule (2), proviso (a), be disposed of by his successor.

Or. XLV, r. 2 [=S. 570=Or. XLVII, r. 2]

1. The corresponding Section of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows:—

"570. To whom applications for review may be made.—Except upon the ground of the discovery of such new and important matter or evidence as aforesaid, or of some clerical error apparent on the face of the decree, no application for a review of judgment shall be made to any Judge other than the Judge who delivered it."

2. In the British Indian Rule, the words "not being a High Court" occur after the words "order of a Court".

3. The British Indian Rule does not contain the words "or order" before the words "shall be made". The words were not in the original Bill and were inserted by the Select Committee.

Case Law.

1. The object of a review being to correct evident error or to consider the merits of fresh facts or evidence which the parties could not have adduced at the original trial, the functions of a Court of Review are not co-extensive with those of a Court of Appeal. A successor in office is therefore incompetent to alter the judgment of his predecessor simply because he could not agree with him on a point of law.—3 T. L. R., 20.

Ref.—6 T. L. R., 78.

2. The suit was for the recovery of certain monies from a Devaswom. The first defendant who contested the suit as the representative of the Devaswom died in the course of the trial; but the plaintiff and the Vakils on both sides were not aware of the death at the time. The suit was decreed in favour of plaintiff in 1090. Subsequently plaintiff became aware of the death of first defendant and he applied for executing the decree impleading the second defendant as the legal representative of the deceased. The application was opposed and the contention raised was accepted by the High Court in second appeal. As his decree was rendered infructuous the plaintiff applied to the Munsiff in 1094 for a review of the previous judgment and for rehearing the suit after impleading the second defendant. The review application was allowed and the suit decreed in favour of plaintiff. The second defendant unsuccessfully appealed to the District Court. He then sought in second appeal to have the decree set aside and also presented a revision petition assailing the order. It was urged on his behalf that the application for review was time-barred; that the Munsiff who allowed the review had no jurisdiction to entertain it under Section 570, as he was not the Munsiff who decided the case at first and as there was no discovery of new and important matter or evidence and no clerical error apparent on the face of the record; and that the order allowing the review contravened the provisions of Section 572, Clause (b) [=Or.

XLV, r. 4] as there was no strict proof that the new and important matter was not within his knowledge when the decree was passed.

Held.—(1) The words "discovery of important matter" used in Section 570 were wide enough to cover a case like the present.

(2) As regards the sufficiency of the proof adduced, it was clear from the progress diary that the respondent as well as the Vakils on both sides were not aware of the first defendant's death on the date the trial was concluded and the suit was finally heard and on the day after when judgment was pronounced.

(3) An application for review presented more than three years after the date of the final decree cannot be admitted under any circumstances.— 40 T. L. R., 26 (=13 T. L. J., 310).

3. The judgment based on a compromise entered into by a minor plaintiff's mother as her next friend was sought to be reviewed by one acting on behalf of the minor on the ground that the compromise was fraudulently entered into by the minor's mother. The application was allowed by the District Judge; but there was no proof whatever of the allegation of fraud committed in connection with the compromise. In appeal by defendants 3 and 4, the order was objected to on the ground that the Judge had no jurisdiction to entertain the application and that even if he had the jurisdiction, it was wrongly exercised in favour of the applicant.

Held.—Only two courses are open to a minor who impugns a decree based on a compromise entered into by the next friend. He may either obtain redress in the suit itself in which judgment was rendered by applying for a review of the judgment or he may institute a fresh suit to set aside the decree. Apart from these, it is not open to him to apply for a revival of the suit.

Section 442 C. P. C., [ =Or. XXXII, r. 7] merely lays down what the effect of a compromise would be when it is entered into without the leave of the Court, and says nothing as to the procedure to be adopted by a minor who impugns a compromise decree as invalid under the Section. The procedure must be governed by the general law, and under that law it is clear that a motion for revival of the suit apart from one for review of judgment is not open to a minor who impugns a compromise decree as fraudulent.

Fraud in connection with the compromise on which a decree is based is 'new and important matter' within the meaning of Section 570, which would give the Judge jurisdiction to grant a review of the judgment of his predecessor in office. But under Section 572 [= Or. XLV, r. 4], an application for review on the ground of discovery of new and important matter or evidence should not be granted without strict proof of such allegation.

Where the predecessor in office has recorded a proceeding in clear terms that he was satisfied that the compromise was for the benefit of the minor, such a certificate should not be brushed aside as mere formality, in the absence of evidence that it was so.

In the face of that certificate, it lay upon the applicant to convince the Court by satisfactory proofs that the compromise was vitiated by fraud or collusion or that the interests of the minor were not properly consulted by the next friend or that the Court was not informed of all the circumstances when it sanctioned the compromise. 41 T. L. R., 213 (= 16 T. L. J., 127).

4. The Insolvency Court's powers of review under Section 45 of the Insolvency Regulation are controlled by the restrictions contained in Order XLV, Rule 2, of the Civil Procedure Code. Hence, a Judge has

Form of applications for review.

3. The provisions as to the form of preferring appeals shall apply, mutatis mutandis, to applications for review.

4. (1) Where it appears to the Court that there is not sufficient ground for a review, it shall reject the application.

Application when granted.

(2) Where the Court is of opinion that the application for review should be granted, it shall grant the same:

Provided that—

(a) no such application shall be granted without previous notice to the opposite party, to enable him to appear and be heard in support of the decree or order, a review of which is applied for; and

(b) no such application shall be granted on the ground of discovery of new matter or evidence which the applicant alleges was not within his knowledge, or could not be adduced by him when the decree or order was passed or made, without strict proof of such allegation.

Where a sale by the Official Receiver is held subject to confirmation by the Court and when the Court cancels the sale on the recommendation of the Official Receiver, the Court is doing only a ministerial act.—
18 T. L. J., 990.

5. The dismissal of a petition for the non-specification of the Order and Rule under which it was presented cannot be treated as a clerical error apparent on the face of the record within the meaning of Rule 2 of Order XLV.— 19 T. L. J., 1135.

1. Sub-Rule (2).—The second Paragraph of the corresponding Section of the old Regulation ran thus :—

"If the Court be of opinion.........it shall grant the same, and the Judge shall record with his own hand his reasons for such opinion :

(a) no such application.........is applied for ;

Where the Judge or Judges, or any one of the Judges, who passed the decree or made the order, a review of which is applied for, continues or continue attached to the Court at the time when the application for a review is presented, and is not or are not precluded by absence or other cause for a period of six months next after the application from considering the decree or order to which the application refers, such Judge or Judges or any of them shall hear the application, and no other Judge or Judges of the Court shall hear the same.

6. (1) Where the application for a review is heard by more than one Judge and the Court is equally divided, the application shall be rejected.

(2) Where there is a majority, the decision shall be according to the opinion of the majority.

7. (1) An order of the Court rejecting the application shall not be appealable; but an order granting an application may be objected to on the ground that the application was—ordered notice to issue under Proviso (a) to this Section, be disposed of by his successor."

II. For Form of Notice to show cause why a review should not be granted, see Appendix H, Form No. 12.

Case Law.

1. Ordinarily when a review is admitted under Section 576 [=Or. XL, r. 8] and no order is made by the Court admitting the application, restricting the extent to which the review of judgment is entertained, the whole case is re-opened, and the parties will thereby be restored in statu quo ante.

The term "opposite party" in Section 572 must necessarily mean that party whose interests are not identical with the petitioner's own, and not necessarily a plaintiff or a defendant, as the case may be, ranged on the opposite side. Hence, notice of review should be given, in the case to 6th defendant who prayed to have the review re-entertained and decided after hearing his contentions. [In the case, 4th defendant applied for a review of judgment and the Court granted it after giving notice to plaintiff alone under Section 572.],—

(2) Where the application has been rejected in consequence of the failure of the applicant to appear, he may apply for an order to have the rejected application restored to the file, and, where it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when such application was called on for hearing, the Court shall order it to be restored to the file upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit, and shall appoint a day for hearing the same.

[There is one more Paragraph in this Section for which see Rule 9 Infra.]

II. In Sub-Rule (1), the words "or by way of revision by the High Court where the suit is triable as a small cause suit" are new and are not found either in the British Indian Code or in the old Regulation. They were added by the Council on the motion of a Non-official Member who said :— "Now an appeal is provided under this Rule from an order granting review when it is against certain specific Sections of the Civil Procedure Code ; and two stages are allowed for preferring such appeal—the first stage being when the review is itself granted and the second stage when the decree is appealed from. Now there are certain cases in which no appeal is allowed, for example, in the case of Small Cause suits. In such cases, my submission is that an alternate method of attack may be provided, enabling one to take the objection at the time of the revision by the High Court. It is only for that purpose that I add this amendment. * * The grant of review cannot be questioned by way of appeal or revision after decree. The stage at which the appeal may be tried has been specified and if a party does not take advantage of it, the High Court will decline to interfere at the final stages of revision with the order granting the appeal. There are cases where no appeal is allowed and it is absolutely necessary, if the party is not advised to prefer an appeal at once, to have some power. If he thinks he has got a strong case, he may not prefer an appeal."— L. C. P., dated 13-2-1925.

2. A District Judge who passed an ex-parte decree ordered issue of notice of a review application put in by defendant to set aside the said decree. The Judge's successor in office disposed of it under Clause (c) of Section 572 [Or. The plaintiff appealed against the said order and it was contended on behalf of the defendant that there was no appeal in this case as it did not fall within any of the three classes of orders from which an appeal is allowed by Section 575.

Held.—(1) The defendant's contention was right as there was no appeal in the case by virtue of Section 575.

A Regulation relating to Marriage, Succession and Partition among the Nanjinad Vellalas

Passed by Her Highness the Maharani Regent of Travancore, under date the 20th June 1926, corresponding with the 6th Mithunam 1101, under Section 14 of Regulation II of 1097.

Preamble.

Whereas it is expedient to define and amend the law relating to marriage, succession and partition among the Nanjinad Vellalas: It is hereby enacted as follows:—

---

I. 1. The need for legislation relating to marriage, family management and inheritance had been felt by the Nanjinad Vellala community, and the demand for a law being enacted on the subject arose as much from a desire to legalise the existing forms of marriage and regularise the vague and ill-defined rights of Ukanthudama and Nankudama as in a feeling that altered economic and social conditions had rendered vast, and even fundamental, changes in the family law necessary for ensuring the progressive welfare of the society. At the third and the sixth session of the Sri Mulam Popular Assembly, representations were made on the subject and the appointment of a Committee of enquiry urged.

A Committee was accordingly appointed in 1910 (G. O. No. 3905, dated 21st July 1910), with the then Dewan Peishkar, Padmanabhapuram, as Convener, and two non-officials as members, to investigate and report if any legislation is necessary and, if so, on what lines, about (1) the circumstances under which divorce is allowed; (2) how far partition is allowed: (3) the extent of the rights called Ukanthudama and Nankudama; (4) the powers of a Karnavan in the management of Tarwad properties; and (5) the nature and conditions of adoption allowed. The report of this Committee, dated the 22nd June 1911, was published in the Government Gazette and the opinion of the community was invited on the recommendations made therein. Briefly, the recommendations of the Committee were that no legislation was required regarding partition and the powers of Karanavans; that dissolution of marriage should be effected not only by the death of either party or by mutual consent, but also by the order of a competent Court which should issue a formal order of dissolution but need not go into the grounds alleged by the applicant claiming divorce and only decide the amount of compensation payable to the respondent: that one-seventh of the deceased member's share in the Tarwad properties together with one-half of his self-acquisitions should be allotted as Ukanthudama; that one-third of the Ukanthudama share be fixed as the Nankudama; and that the adoption of one's wife and children as heirs be allowed without any levy of adiyara fees. These recommendations were substantially accepted by the Government; and, at the meeting of the Legislative Council held on the 5th June 1913, permission was granted to introduce a Bill on the above lines. The Bill was duly published in the Government Gazette and also passed the Select Committee stage. As it was then evident, from the memorials submitted to Government by the members of the Nanjinad Vellala community, that the community wanted a more comprehensive Bill containing provisions relating to the power of testamentary disposition, intestate succession, etc., and that the Bill, as it was, did not satisfy them, it was, by leave, withdrawn, at the meeting of the Legislative Council held on the 20th December 1920. The agitation for the introduction of a more comprehensive measure began immediately afterwards. Representations on the subject were made at the fifteenth and sixteenth sessions of the Assembly: and in reply to an interpellation in the Legislative Council, Government foreshadowed the appointment of a new Committee in order to ascertain accurately the feelings of the community regarding the legislation wanted.

2. The second Committee was appointed with the then Dewan Peishkar of Padmanabhapuram as President and two Nanjinad Vellala gentlemen as members. Subsequently, the Committee was strengthened by the addition of two Anandarava members. Two members from North and Central Travancore were also co-opted.

3. The Committee was to collect the necessary evidence and submit definite proposals as to the changes, if any, that have to be introduced in the customary law relating to (1) the dissolution of marriage, (2) partition, (3) adoption, (4) the rights of Ukanthudama and Nankudama, (5) the powers of the Karanavan, and (6) testamentary and intestate succession obtaining among the community, together with a draft Bill embodying their proposals.

4. The Committee was appointed by G. O. R. O. C. No. 33/ Legis., dated 4th February, 1921. They submitted their unanimous report and a draft Bill with their letter dated 3rd January 1922. The Report was published in the Gazette dated 11th April 1922, and opinions on the recommendations of the Committee were invited from the members of the community affected. These were considered and a Bill introduced in the Legislative Council.

II. The Bill which was thus introduced followed closely the Committee's draft Bill. The Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the Bill said:—"Parts III and IV however have been re-drafted, but in doing so, the principles underlying the Committee's draft has not been materially interfered with. The only modification that has been made is in Clause 16 of the present Bill. While, in the absence of the widow or children of an intestate, the Committee's proposal is that the brothers and sisters and their descendants, that is, the members of the Thavazhee of the intestate are made to succeed the intestate, in the Committee's Bill the mother is omitted though she is a member of the Thavazhee. This omission is, it is believed, only an inadvertent one, and hence the mother's name is also specifically included in Clause 16. * *"

In introducing the Bill, the Official Member in charge said :—" * * It is a matter for gratification that the report of the committee and the draft Bill they appended were unanimous and that there was no dissentient note. It is equally creditable to find that, even after the publication of the report and the draft Bill, no serious opposition has been received from the members of the community excepting a petition signed by about 3 or 4 people. Excepting that, the community as a whole seems to have accepted the report and the draft Bill, and therefore we may safely take it that the draft Bill represents the opinion of the community and safely proceed upon it.

The main changes that are recommended have been discussed and detailed in the report itself and I do not think that it is necessary at all for me to make any lengthy observations thereon. But I may refer to the few important changes that have been made in the Bill with reference to the other Marumakkathaya Bills, namely the Nair or the Ezhava Bill. In the first place, it is stated that, though ordinarily marriage should be in a particular form, namely the talikettu form or the agnisakshi form, a remarriage can take place in ordinary sambandham form between a widower and a widow only. Both the parties should have already been married once and such marriage should have been dissolved either by death or divorce. That is one of the conditions. Perhaps that may be a matter to be threshed out by the Council later on as in the case of the other bills.

Monogamy is to be enforced. With reference to divorce, there seems to be a strong opinion in the community that divorce should not ordinarily be for no reason whatsoever, and, therefore, divorce is proposed to be for specific reasons. * *

The next point of difference is with regard to individual partition. Individual partition is allowed and the only restriction seems to be that during the life-time of the mother no one can claim individual partition, and in the case of even Tarwad property, if a man dies, his wife and children would be entitled to the property that he would have obtained on division before his death. * *"

III. Leave to introduce the Bill was applied for and granted at the meeting of the Council held on 25-11-1922 (L. C. P., Vol. II, P. 501). The Bill was published on 14-11-1922, and introduced and referred to a Select Committee on 30-10-1923 (L. C. P., Vol. IV, Pp. 76-105). The Select Committee's Report was published on 13-1-1925 and presented to the Council on 12-2-1925 (L. C. P., Vol. VI, Pp. 1122-1125). The Report and the amended Bill were considered at the meetings of the Council held on 2, 3 & 5-11-1925 and 20-4-1926 (L. C. P., Vol. VIII, Pp. 40-83, 129-146, 296, 369, 750-757). The Bill was finally read and passed on 23-4-1926 (L. C. P., Vol. VIII, Pp. 1082-1084). The Regulation was published in the Gazette dated 22nd June 1926.

IV. In view to understand the requirements of the community and the main recommendations made by the Second Committee on which the Bill was based, extracts from the Report of that Committee are given below and under the Sections concerned.

"8. The following extract from the Report of the previous Committee contains the accepted traditional account of the beginnings of Nanjinad and also explains the origin of the mixed system of inheritance followed by the Nanjinad Vellala Community :—

'Tradition has it that the tract of country now known as Nanjinad was originally colonised by people from the Coromandal Coast. Several families from Pandy migrated to this land, cleared the jungles by degrees and settled there. The term Nanjinad means the land environed by Nanja lands or one fortified by natural barrriers, * *

'When the Nanjinadians became isolated from their kinsmen beyond the ghats, they began to exchange their social and domestic constitution. Their inheritance became modified, their matrimonial ideas altered, and their caste structure became in course of time an interesting medley of Tamil and Malayalam social characteristics. Thus, the first marriage of the Nanjinad Vellala is purely of the Pandya type, and the second is the Sambandham of the Malayalees. The law of inheritance, so far as it relates to Nankudama and Ukanthudama is of the Pandya Makkathayam system, but in all other respects it is the Marumakkathayam of the Nayars. The dress and ornaments of the females are those of the Tamilians, but the attire and mode of wearing front tufts, &c., of the men are similar to those of the Nayars. The compulsory performance of obsequial ceremonies by the son is a relic of the Makkathayam system. The performance of such rites by nephews in the absence of son is in accordance with the Marumakkathayam custom. In fact, in all their important social and religious customs, the combination of Makkathayam and Marumakkathayam ways can be observed to exist.'

'The following tradition is extant to show how the Nanjinadians, who were Makkathayees before, became Marumakkathayees. There was once a dispute as to the sovereignty of Nanjinad between the Pandyan and Travancore kings. It was contended by the Pandyan King that the whole of Nanjinad was under his sway, that the Pandyan Anai was constructed in memory of a Pandyan King and that, for these and other reasons, the sovereign right vested in him. He also said that the Travancore King and his people are Marumakkathayees, whereas the people of Nanjinad were Makkathayees, like the Pandyan people. This was opposed by the Travancore King who said that the Nanjinadians were Marumakkathayees, that the Pandyan Dam was constructed by the Travancore Government in memory of a Pandyan king who was friendly with his contemporary King of Travancore. The dam was soon after destroyed and made unserviceable. The Nanjinadians deposed to their having become Travancore subjects and made a solemn statement before the Madura Temple that they followed the Marumakkathayam law of inheritance. Subsequently they adopted the Marumakkathayam and widow-marriage customs obtaining in Malabar, retaining some of the Makkathayam customs as they had been followed before.'

"10. If the traditional account is to be believed, the change from the Makkathayam to the Marumakkathayam system of inheritance was an act deliberately undertaken by the community. There is no doubt that the community originally followed the Makkathayam system and that the features of the matriarchal system were subsequently grafted on it. Their having come under the sway of a royal house following the matriarchal system of succession, a rupture with their brethren in the Tamil country, the influence of environments, certain advantages which that system confers on a pre-eminently agricultural community, and latterly the influence of the judiciary appear to have contributed, each in a greater or less degree, to their repudiation one by one of the principles of Hindu law and acceptance of those of the Marumakkathayam law.

"11. The joint family in its fully developed stage is unknown to the community. The first marriage of a Vellala girl is an Agnisakshi marriage. Marriage before puberty is not insisted on, and post-puberty marriage is the rule. The wife generally lives with the husband and not in her family house. Re-marriage of widows is allowed and it is solemnised by the presentation of cloth, a practice adopted from the Marumakkathayees. The widow and her children acquire, on the death of her husband, a title to a portion of the share of

CHAPTER I.

Preliminary

Short title.

1. (1) This Regulation may be called "the Nanjinad Vellala Regulation of 1101."

Application.

(2) It shall apply to all Nanjinad Vellalas domiciled in Travancore, and to such Nanjinad Vellalas not so domiciled as have or shall have marital relation with Nanjinad Vellalas domiciled in Travancore.

(3) It shall come into force on the 1st Chingom 1102.

Definitions.

2. In this Regulation, unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context—

"Marumakkathayam."

(1) "Marumakkathayam" means the system of inheritance in which descent is traced in the female line.

"Tarwad."

(2) "Tarwad" means and includes all the members of a Marumakkathayam family with community of property.

"Thavazhee of a female."

(3) "Thavazhee of a female" means a group of persons consisting of that female and her issue how-low-soever in that female line, or such of that group as are alive.

"Thavazhee of a male."

(4) "Thavazhee of a male" means the thavazhee of his mother.

the deceased in his family property, Ukanthudama, and an issueless widow too has a similar right, Nankudama. No anandaravan can claim partition of the family property and the powers and privileges of karanavans and anandaravans are identical with those in a Nayar tarwad. The obsequial ceremonies of a man are performed by his son or his brother's son in preference to his sister's son. The men ordinarily wear the front tuft, but the women may be said to stick to the old mode of dress and ornaments. The customs and usages of the community are thus a mixture of principles borrowed from the Makkathayees as well as from the Marumakkathayees."

CHAPTER II.

Marriage and its Dissolution.

3. The conjugal union of a Nanjinad Vellala male, subject to the restrictions of consanguinity and affinity according to custom, with a Nanjinad Vellala female, openly solemnised according to recognised custom and usage, whether before or after this Regulation comes into force, shall be deemed to be a valid marriage for all legal purposes:

Provided that no conjugal union, so solemnised after the date on which this Regulation comes into force, in the case of a male who has not completed eighteen years of age, or of a female who has not completed sixteen years of age, shall be deemed to be a valid marriage, unless it takes place with the consent of his or her legal guardian, or unless such conjugal union is adopted and continued after the attainment of eighteen or sixteen years of age, as the case may be, by the party or parties concerned.

Illustrations.

(a) C, a male, commits adultery with B, who has married A, or entices away B, who, he knows, has married A. C is liable to punishment under Section 500 or 501, Travancore Penal Code.

(b) C, a male, marries B, who has married A, during the continuance of A's marriage. Such marriage being void under Section 4, B and C are liable to punishment for bigamy under Section 497, Travancore Penal Code, and abetment thereof respectively.

(c) A, a male, having sufficient means, neglects or refuses to maintain B whom he has married. B is entitled to apply for maintenance under Chapter XXXV, Criminal Procedure Code.

(d) B, a female, who has married A, refuses to cohabit with the latter without just cause. A may bring a civil suit for restitution of conjugal rights.

Sec. 3: The Committee in their report observed :—

"13. The first marriage of Vellala girl is invariably an Agnisakshi Vivaha conducted with the pomp and ceremony suited to the circumstances of the parties. The description given in their report by the previous Committee, reproduced below, is substantially correct and gives a fairly full account :—

"With the change in outlook brought about by modern education, there has been a tendency in some quarters to reduce the period of duration of the ceremonies ; but its importance has not been diminished nor the religious and sacramental character of the rite affected. The tying of a cloth round the head of the bridegroom known as the Urumalkettu and signifying his entry into manhood and fitness for marital connection is observed as a formality preceding the Thalikettu.

"14. The religious marriage has all along been recognised by the community as valid marriage from time immemorial and doubts which recent judicial decisions appear to have thrown upon its legality or binding character should be removed by legislation. * * Marriage according to custom among the community creates a valid union, and should by law be declared binding on the parties thereto."

"15. * There is almost complete unanimity of opinion that the tying of the thali by the bridegroom round the bride's neck at the auspicious hour, muhurtam, with due publicity and the chanting of the mantras under the guidance of the family priest and with intent to marry is the most important and the one essential and operative portion of the whole round of ceremonies. The thali has become the symbol of the marital tie, and, without its being tied, the marriage cannot be deemed to have been performed. Some consider that panigrahanam, i. e., the taking by the father or guardian of the bride's hand and placing it in the bridegroom's hand in token of his consent to the alliance and as a sign of handing over charge is also an essential part. The Committee consider that thalikettu as described above should alone be considered the essential and operative part of the marriage, the one item the non-performance of which would make the marriage void. Panigrahanam is conducted generally by the father; but if the bride's father is not living at the time of the marriage, it is performed by some relation or even friend acting as his representative.

"17. The Nanjinad Vellalas are a homogeneous community and intermarriages with other communities seldom take place. There are rare instances of Makkathaya Vellala men marrying Marumakkathaya Vellala women. Instances of Marumakkathaya Vellala men marrying women belonging to the Makkathaya caste are rarer, as the wife and children could not inherit the husband's property. In the former case, the widow and children succeed to the property of the deceased husband and it goes to augment the Tarwad property. Marriage outside the community is not viewed with favour generally and the community are anxious that their individuality should be kept up. The recognition of such marriages would bring in its train complications about the rights of the wife and children, for even if the Committee's proposals are accepted, the law of inheritance would differ fundamentally from the law now followed by Makkathaya Vellalas. The subsisting marriages, if any, of the kind would, of course, continue and should not become invalid. The Committee agree with the opinion that marriages of the Nanjinad Vellalas within the community alone should be valid and legal in future."

"18. Custom and convention have decreed that marriage between certain relations should be prohibited. Subject to the restrictions regarding consanguinity and affinity imposed by usage, the conjugal union of a Nanjinad Vellala male and female openly solemnised as described above should be binding and valid."

"23. Widow re-marriage is an accepted institution in the community. Among the witnesses, a small number, viz., 8, wanted that perpetual widowhood should be enforced as in the case of Makkathaya Vellalas. But a very large majority of the witnesses are against this proposal. There are a small number of witnesses who would allow a widow to remarry if young or without issue. The Committee agree with the majority that no restriction should be imposed on the existing custom in regard to widow re-marriage.

4. The subsequent marriage of a male or of a female during the continuance of a prior marriage and performed after the coming into force of this Regulation shall be void.

Subsequent marriage when void.

5. A marriage may be dissolved only in one of the following ways, that is to say,—

Dissolution of marriage.

(i) by the death of either party; or

(ii) by mutual consent evidenced by a registered instrument; or

"24. Re-marriage of a widow is usually done by what is known as Sambandham marriage. Sambandham consists of the solemnisation of a re-marriage openly by the presentation of a red cloth to the female by the male on an auspicious day in the presence of near relatives. The ceremony takes place usually at night. The operative portion of the Sambandham is the giving of a colored cloth by the male to the female with intent to marry. Some witnesses have opined that all the ceremonies of the Talikettu marriage should be repeated for Sambandham. This is neither usual nor necessary. The existing custom is that a woman already married by Talikettu and who has since become a widow is re-married by Sambandham. In the case of a man, there are exceptional cases in which his first marriage has been by way of Sambandham. The general and accepted custom, however, is that a man's first marriage is by Talikettu. The Committee considered the question whether it should be free for a man who has not first married by Talikettu to marry a widow by Sambandham. While it is not desirable to impose restrictions on the freedom of a man to marry as he wishes, yet in view of the insistence of monogamy recommended by the Committee and of the very rare exceptions to the rule, the majority of us consider that the sacrament of marriage should be binding equally on man and woman. In other words, the first marriage for both man and woman should be by Talikettu or sacramental marriage, re-marriage alone being performed by Sambandham or social marriage. Although at present it is not unusual for a man to marry more than once by Talikettu or by Sambandham, yet it would conduce to the welfare of society to apply the same rules to man and woman. * * *

"25. For the purposes of re-marriage, a widow should include not only a woman who has lost her husband by death but also a woman who has been legally divorced from her husband.

"26. For all legal purposes, the status of a Sambandham wife should be equal to that of a wife married by Talikettu. This is the view of the majority of witnesses and is also the existing usage. Several of the witnesses have also deposed that the sons by Sambandham marriage perform the obsequies of the father, i. e, for all social religious and legal purposes, the issues by both kinds of marriages being equal. There is no objection to allow this equality of status."

Sec. 5: The Committee said in their Report :—

"22. The Committee have carefully considered the various shades of opinion expressed and they have come to the following conclusions :—

(i) Absolute freedom of divorce should not be allowed ;

(iii) by a formal order of dissolution, as hereinafter provided, on any of the following grounds, namely,

(a) adultery, or
(b) bigamy, or
(c) change of religion, or
(d) incurable disease, physical or mental, or
(e) habitual cruelty to wife.

Petition for dissolution of marriage.

6. (1) A husband or wife may present a petition for dissolution of the marriage under Section 5, clause (iii), stating the facts on which the claim to have such marriage dissolved is founded, in the District Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the respondent resides, carries on business, or personally works for gain, or, if the respondent resides, carries on business, or personally works for gain in any place outside Travancore, in the District Court within whose jurisdiction the petitioner resides.

(2) A wife, though a minor, shall be competent herself to apply for dissolution of marriage if she has completed sixteen years of age.

Notice to be given to respondent.

7. A copy of such petition as aforesaid shall be served on the respondent at the expense of the petitioner, and in the manner provided for the service of summons on a defendant in the Code of Civil Procedure.

Order of dissolution of marriage when and how passed.

8. Three months after the service of the copy as aforesaid—

(1) if the petition is not withdrawn in the meantime, and if the respondent does not agree to the

(iii) Divorce may be effected for adequate reasons and that only through the intervention of the Civil Court except in the case of mutual consent evidenced by a registered document;

(iv) Incurable disease of the husband or wife, lunacy, conversion to another religion, cruelty and unchastity should be considered adequate reasons for divorce;

dissolution of the marriage, the Court shall enquire into the petition and shall allow or dismiss the petition as it thinks fit;

(2) if the petitioner is the husband and his prayer is granted, the Court shall in cases falling under Sub-clause (d) of Clause (iii) of Section 5, award such compensation to the wife or such monthly allowance until her remarriage as would be proper under the circumstances having regard to his position, means and circumstances;

(3) if the petitioner is the wife and her prayer is granted the Court shall award such compensation to the wife or such monthly allowance until her remarriage as would be proper under the circumstances, having regard to the position, means and circumstances of the husband.

Provisions of the Civil Procedure Code applicable to enquiry.

9. The provisions contained in the Code of Civil Procedure shall, as far as possible, apply to an enquiry under Section 8:

Provided that all proceedings under Section 8, either before a Court or before a commission appointed by a Court, shall be held in camera, and that the publication of any account of such proceedings, except the final order and the decree thereon, shall be punishable with simple imprisonment for a term of six months or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees or both.

Order appealable to High Court.

10. Subject to the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure and the Limitation Regulation applicable to appeals from original decrees, an appeal shall lie to the High Court from an order granting or refusing dissolution of marriage, or payment of compensation or monthly allowance under the provisions of Section 8.

Order awarding compensation, etc., executable as a decree.

11. In so far as it awards payment of compensation or monthly allowance or costs, an order of the District Court or an order passed on appeal shall, subject to the provisions of the Limitation Regulation relating to the execution of decrees, be executable as a decree:

Court fee to be levied.

Provided, however, that an order of the District Court awarding compensation, or monthly allowance, shall be executable only on payment of Court fee on the sum adjudged.

CHAPTER III.

Maintenance and Guardianship.

Maintenance of wife and minor children.

12. The wife and minor children, except married daughters under the guardianship of their husbands, shall be entitled to be maintained by the husband or father as the case may be :

Provided that the wife shall not be entitled to maintenance if she lives in adultery or refuses to live with the husband without just cause, or has changed her religion.

Guardianship of minor wife and children.

13. (1) The husband shall be the legal guardian of his minor wife, and, save as regards married daughters under the guardianship of their husbands, the father the legal guardian of his minor children in respect of their person and property. On the death of the father, the mother shall be the legal guardian of the minor children.

(2) Where a female has minor children by a former husband, deceased or divorced, she shall be the legal guardian in respect of their person as also of the separate property belonging to them.

Sec. 12: The Committee in their Report said :—

"41. Although, in the terms of reference, the Committee had not been specifically required to enquire into and report on the question of maintenance and guardianship, they considered it essential that, in a law relating to marriage, inheritance, etc., of the community, provision should explicitly be made on the matter and with that view they gathered evidence on those points also. The general opinion is that, during the life-time of both the parents, the father should be the legal guardian of the minor children and after his death the mother. The husband should be the legal guardian of the minor wife. Failing the father and the mother, the paternal relations should have the right of guardianship in preference to maternal relations, an elder brother of the minors being preferred to the relations of their parent. The Committee concur in these views.

"42. The wife and children should be legally entitled to be maintained by the husband and father respectively. The husband's property will always be liable to the right of maintenance of the wife ; and after his death the property descends to his children subject to this right of maintenance of the widowed mother."

CHAPTER IV.

Intestate Succession.

Property in respect of which a Nanjinad Vellala is considered to have died intestate.

14. For the purpose of this Chapter, a Nanjinad Vellala is considered to die intestate in respect of property of which such person has not made a testamentary disposition which is capable of taking effect.

Where intestate male has left children or lineal descendants of deceased children or both.

15. On the death of an intestate male leaving him surviving children or the lineal descendants of deceased children or both, they shall be entitled to the whole of his property subject to the right of the widow or widows of the intestate for maintenance until her or their death or remarriage.

Rules of distribution of estate under Section 15.

16. The distribution of the estate under Section 15 shall be according to the following rules:—

(i) Sons and daughters shall take the property in equal shares:

Provided that, if a son or daughter shall have predeceased the intestate, the lineal descendants of such child shall take the share which such child would have taken had it survived the intestate.

(ii) Grandchildren shall take in equal shares what their father or mother would have taken had he or she survived the intestate. In like manner, the property shall go to the surviving lineal descendants of the intestate where they are all in the degree of great-grand-children to him or in a more remote degree.

(1) Z dies intestate leaving a son A, a daughter B, and the lineal descendants of a deceased son C. A and B each gets a third of the estate and the lineal descendants of C together get a third of the estate.

(2) Z dies intestate leaving a son A, a daughter B, two grandchildren by a deceased daughter C, and two grandchildren and one great-grandchild by a deceased son D. A and B each gets a fourth of the estate; each of the grandchildren by C gets one-eighth; each of the grandchildren by D gets one-twelfth; and the great-grandchild by D gets one-twelfth of the estate.

tent with Thaivazhi partition and some of the declared adherents of the existing system are not opposed to granting the sons and daughters a greater share in a man's family property and self-acquisition than now. Many have sought individual partition expecting that Makkathayam would inevitably follow as a necessary corollary.

"35. Opinions regarding the powers of the man or woman in respect of the divided share of the Marumakkathayam property allotted to him or her cover a very wide range. * * *

The Committee have carefully considered the various shades of opinion expressed and have come to the conclusion that no restriction whatever should be placed on the powers of alienation of the property vested in any person on partition of the Marumakkathayam family, and that this rule should be followed even after the property descends to one's issue. Partition cannot therefore be claimed by children during the life-time of parents. If either of the parents dies, the property of the deceased should be divided equally among the children, subject to the right of maintenance of the widow if she is the survivor.

"36. The Committee have also come to the conclusion that both male and female children should have equal shares on partition, and that the share which each gets should be the absolute property of the sharer with full powers of disposal. The natural love and affection of one's wife and children should be depended on to provide for them, and the Legislature need not intervene to enforce this necessity and import the complicated questions of Hindu law to safeguard such rights."

21. On the death of an intestate female leaving her surviving her children or the lineal descendants of deceased children, or both, they shall be entitled to the whole of her property.

Where intestate female has left children or lineal descendants of deceased children.

22. On the death of an intestate female leaving her surviving no children, or the lineal descendants of deceased children, but only her husband, the husband shall enjoy the whole of her property until his death or remarriage without any power of alienation.

Where intestate female has left husband only.

23. (1) On the death of an intestate female leaving her surviving no children or lineal descendants of deceased children or husband, or on the death or remarriage of the husband succeeding under Section 22, her property shall devolve on her mother's lineal descendants.

Where intestate female has left mother's lineal descendants only.

(2) In the absence of her mother's lineal descendants, her father shall take the whole.

Where intestate female has left father only.

24. On the death of an intestate male or female leaving him or her surviving none of the heirs mentioned in the preceding Sections, but only the widow or the husband, as the case may be, such widow or husband shall be entitled to the whole of his or her properties.

Where intestate male or female has left none of the heirs mentioned in the preceding Sections.

Provisions of Section 16 to apply to distribution of estate in Sections 21, 20 and 23.

26. For the purpose of this Chapter, the undivided share of a male member of a Tarwad, or of a female member of a Tarwad dying without leaving her surviving any member of her Thavazhee, in his or her Tarwad property, determined as at the time of his or her death, shall be treated as his or her property.

CHAPTER V.

Testamentary Succession.

Nanjinad Vellala to have full testamentary power over separate or self-acquired property.

27. Notwithstanding anything contained in the Wills Regulation, VI of 1074, a Nanjinad Vellala may dispose of by will the whole of his or her separate or self-acquired property.

CHAPTER VI.

Adoption.

Adoption by mutual consent of husband and wife.

28. A husband may, with the consent of his wife, adopt an unmarried male child, if they have no issue, and the adopted son shall have all the rights of a natural born son.

Adoption by widow or widower alone.

29. A widow or widower may also take in adoption an unmarried male child, but such adopted son shall succeed only to the separate or self-acquired property of the adoptive mother or father, as the case may be.

Sec. 27: The Committee observed in their Report:—

"48. The present disability in the matter of wills should be removed. A Nanjinad Vellala should be able to dispose of by will the whole of his or her self-acquired or separate property. The recommendations of the Committee contained in the Chapter on Partition and Intestate succession aim at giving full and absolute powers of disposal in the holder and it should be made possible to effect by means of a testament what can be done by a transaction inter vivos."

Secs. 28 & 29: The Committee say in their Report:—

"40. There exists now a Proclamation enabling Nanjinad Vellalas to adopt a seshakaran on payment of adiyara. This Proclamation is all but become a dead letter because during the last half a century there have been few instances of such adoption. The reason appears to be the prohibitive rate of adiyara required to be paid under the Proclamation. Escheat of property is evaded by transactions inter vivos such as gifts and purchase of property in the name of wife and children. The statement relating to escheat cases in the community embodied in Appendix IX would prove this. The last heir of a Marumakkathayam property transfers the same to his wife and children during his life-time and thus defeats the escheat right of Government. If, as recommended by the Committee above, individual partition of Marumakkathayam property and the descent of the same by Makkathayam succession are allowed, adoption as Seshakaran will not be required in future. For a childless couple to continue the line about to become extinct, adoption is necessary and it is the custom obtaining in Makkathayam families. The question for consideration is whether, during the life-time of the husband and wife

CHAPTER VII.

Partition of Tarwad Property.

30. Subject to the claims, if any, of the heirs arising under Chapter IV, to the undivided share of any deceased member of a Tarwad determined as at the time of his or her death, every member of a Tarwad shall be entitled to claim his or her share of the properties of the Tarwad.

Right to claim partition.

31. Every member of a Tarwad shall be entitled on division to so much of the properties of the Tarwad as will fall to his or her share if—

Share on partition.

(1) one-half of the properties were divided per capita among all the members of the Tarwad living at the time of division, and

(2) the other half were divided per stirpes, i. e., among the male children then living of the common ancestress and their sisters, the Thavazhee of each daughter being entitled to the share of such daughter:

Provided that, if any daughter of the common ancestress were dead, the Thavazhee of such daughter will take what such daughter would be entitled to if she were alive at the time of division:

Provided further that, if the common ancestress were alive at the time of division, she would be entitled to a share equal to that of hers.

there should be the consent of both for adoption or either of them could adopt a child as he or she thinks fit. The consensus of opinion is that husband and wife should adopt with mutual consent only. The Committee agree to this view. But on the death of either, the survivor may be allowed to adopt an heir to his or her property alone. A small minority of witnesses are agreeable to the adoption of a female child. The Committee do not approve of this suggestion but agree with the majority of witnesses in thinking that a male child alone should be adopted. One important reason which has weighed with the Committee in coming to this decision is that the male child is alone competent to perform the obsequies of the parent, while a female child will go into the family of her husband after marriage. The Committee further think that an unmarried male child alone should be adopted. They whould recommend that the levy of adiyara fees be discontinued."

Sec. 31 : 1. The provisions as to partition contained in the Bill as introduced in the Council were :—

"9. Subject to the provisions of Section 11, every member of a Tarwad may claim or be compelled to divide from any other member of the Tarwad.

"10. Tarwad property shall be divided equally among all its members.

"11. No claim for partition of Tarwad property shall accrue to any person during the life-time of the mother of such person."

Explanation.—Property of the Tarwad means so much of the property as belongs to the Tarwad deducting the claim , if any, of the heirs, arising under Chapter IV, to the undivided share of any deceased member of the Tarwad.

Illustrations.

If in a family composed as indicated in the above table, the value of the Tarwad property were Rs. 24,000, one-half, i. e., Rs. 12,000, will be divided equally among B, C, D, E and F, each getting Rs. 2,400. The other half will be divided into twelve equal shares among B to P, each of them getting Rs. 1,000. Thus B, C and D will each get Rs. 3,400. The fourth share of Rs. 2,400 will be divided equally between E and G, and each of them will get Rs. 1,200 therefrom plus Rs. 1,000 being the share per capita, or Rs. 2,200 in all. F and K will each get one-third of the fifth share of Rs. 2,400 or Rs. 800 therefrom plus Rs. 1,000, being the share per capita, or Rs. 1,800 in all. H, L, M, N and P will each get one-fifth of Rs. 800 or Rs. 160 therefrom plus Rs. 1,000, being the share per capita, or Rs. 1,160 in all.

(b) If, in illustration (a), A also were living, one-half will be divided into six shares each getting Rs. 2,000 and the other half into thirteen shares. Thus, A will get Rs. 2,000 plus one-thirteenth of Rs. 12,000.

(b) If, in illustration (a), F were dead at the time of partition, K will be entitled to get one-half of Rs. 2,400 plus one-eleventh of Rs. 12,000.

2. The Select Committee modified the provisions as follows :—

"30. Every member of a Tarwad shall be entitled to claim his or her share of the properties of the Tarwad.

"31. Tarwad property shall be divided equally among all its members."

The Committee said :—

Clauses 9 and 11. The restriction contained in clause 11 of the Bill about a person's right to claim partition during the life-time of the mother was not found in the original Bill as drafted by the Nanjinad Vellala Committee. It seems to have been introduced in the present Bill on a misapprehension of clause 11 of the Committee's draft Bill. We, therefore, think that clause 11 may be deleted and consequently the words "subject to the provisions of Section 11" in clause 9 have also to be deleted.

Substitute the following for clause 9 in the Bill :—

"12. Every member of a Tarwad shall be entitled to claim his or her share of the properties of the Tarwad."

Clause 10. This is the most important provision in the whole Bill. There is a difference of opinion as to the method of partition provided for in the clause. This difference of opinion may be stated shortly as follows :—

It is asserted by one party that usage is in favour of allowing members of the same grade in a tarwad to share equally irrespective of the number of children or descendants which any female member of the same grade may have. In other words, this party claims per stirpes partition. According to the other party, every member of a tarwad irrespective of his or her grade in the tarwad has an equal right and should therefore share equally. In other words, this party claims per capita partition. The report of the Nanjinad Vellala Committee as well as the Bill drafted by them support the latter view. * *

We have heard deputations from both parties on this subject. We have read the various memorials presented to us and we have also examined the documents produced before us as establishing their respective contentions. As this seems, however, to be the only important point on which there is difference of opinion among the members of the community, we have thought it necessary to examine this question in some detail. The reasons for per stirpes partition are stated to be as follow :—

(1) The Nanjinad Vellalas were originally Makkathayees who have subsequently adopted Marumakkathayam law. This will appear from—

(a) the fact that wife and children have a right of Ukanthudama :

(b) the fact that a daughter has a right of Stridhanam at the time of marriage ;

(c) the ceremonials observed on the occasion of marriage ; and

(d) the circumstance that the marriage expenses of a male are a charge on the tarwad property.

(2) Partition frequently takes place in a tarwad and an examination of such documents will disclose the usage of per stirpes partition.

The reasons for per capita partition are shortly these :—

(1) Nanjinad Vellalas are Marumakkathayees with certain usages which have crept into the system.

(2) The Courts have always been systematically applying the principles of the Marumakkathayam law to the community except in a few well-recognised cases of usage to the contrary.

(3) Every member of a tarwad has a right to maintenance and all adult members irrespective of their grade are entitled to get the same equally (11 T. L. J. 358) ; and, if per stirpes partition were allowed, it will seriously affect vested rights.

(4) The Nanjinad Vellalas style themselves as Marumakkathayees in all documents.

(5) Out of 311 witnesses examined by the Committee, 224 were for per capita partition.

(6) The Committee's report was unanimous.

(7) The Bill, as drafted by the Committee, was not objected to by any member of the community.

(8) A difference of opinion became manifest only when the Bill was introduced into the Council.

We have discussed and considered the various points placed before us and we think that per capita division is the just and more reasonable course to adopt. If the documents produced showed a definite usage as to per stirpes partition, we would have hesitated to accept this view. But the documents do not prove any definite usage at all. There are documents evidencing per stirpes partition, there are also documents evidencing per capita partition, and there are again documents which establish neither the one nor the other. We

Property acquired by gift or bequest from father or husband before or after the Regulation.

32. Property acquired by gift or bequest from the father or husband, whether before or after the commencement of this Regulation, shall, for the purposes of this Chapter, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, be treated as the Tarwad property of the donees or devisees and of their Thavazhee.

CHAPTER VIII.

Supplemental Provisions.

Wife and children not entitled to Nankudama and Ukanthudama after commencement of this Regulation.

33. The wife and children of a Nanjinad Vellala dying after the commencement of this Regulation shall not be entitled to the customary rights of Nankudama and Ukanthudama.

are therefore unable to find that a definite usage with regard to per stirpes partition has been established, so as to affect the vested rights of the members of a Marumakkathayam tarwad.

We are of opinion that the unanimous and carefully prepared report of the Committee should be followed.

The only thing that is clear from the evidence is that a Karanavan gets something more than others at the time of partition. We have given effect to this by providing for the same in this Chapter.

3. When the Bill was considered by the Council, the provisions were subject to prolonged discussion. The existing Section was substituted for the provision made by the Select Committee, on the motion of a Non-official member, after full discussion. The amendment was the result of a compromise which admitted the principles of the opposing views expressed on the subject.— L. C. P., dated 5-11-1925.

"43. The rights of Ukanthudama and Nankudama are a trace of Makkathayam system which the community originally followed. The following extract from the Report of the previous Committee describes the nature of these rights and how they have been till then upheld by decisions of Courts of law :—

'Ukanthudama.—The claim of the son performing the obsequial ceremonies to a portion of the father's family and self-acquired properties, is known as the right of Ukanthudama. This is a remnant of the old custom by which the sons receive a portion of their father's properties and relinquish their claims to the father's Tarwad properties, just like the co-parceners of a Makkathayam family divide their shares and separate themselves by partition. (Vide judgment in A. S. No. 195 of 1050 of the Travancore High Court.). In settling the Ukanthudama, the ancestral properties and recent self-acquisitions of the donor are taken together and divided among the co-parceners of that family, and from the portion of each co-parcener a moiety amounting from 1/10 to 1/7 is given away to his wife and children as Ukanthudama. Issueless men and women are not taken into account in the above allotment of family properties. The amount of Ukanthudama varies according to the earning capacity of the member, for whose sake the grant is made, i. e., the children of an earning member are generally given a seventh part and those of a non-earning member, a tenth part of the share of the member. In rare cases, a fourth part is given with the consent of all co-parceners and this may be in the case of a man who has been the sole earning member of the family. The father on no account can deprive the sons of the above right and it is not affected by any previous gift which the father has made the son in his life-time (Vide 23 T. L. R. p. 197 and judgment in O. S. No. 105 of 1057 of the Nagercoil Zillah Court). If during the life-time of a Karanavan one of his nephews dies with issue, the properties are divided among his mother and her brothers and her share is again sub-divided among her sons including the dead man from whose share is granted the Ukanthudama due to his children. If a man possesses many wives and all of them beget children, the issue by each wife are entitled to an equal share of the Ukanthudama (Vide IV T. L. R. pages 125 & 126). The allotment of Ukanthudama is according to the number of children and not according to the number of wives. Thus, if a man had two wives B & C and if B has two sons and C only one, two-thirds of the Ukanthudama fixed will go to B and one-third to C. The Ukanthudama due to wives and children of a deceased man from his family and self-acquired properties is a fixed amount and this does not increase with the number of wives and children, but the distribution is regulated by the number of children possessed by each (vide A. S. No. 14 of 1060 of the Travancore High Court and IV T. L. R.). From the years of 1076 to 1085, 200 Ukanthudama documents have been registered in the State. If a wife is divorced by her husband by means of the vidumuri and if she has children, such children are also entitled to Ukanthudama (vide judgment in O. S. No. 54 of 1063 of the Nagercoil Zillah Court). As re-marriage is permitted in the case of both man and woman, the issue of the re-married parties are also entitled to Ukanthudama. But the issue of a woman by a second husband cannot claim a right to the Ukanthudama amount of the issue of that woman by her first husband, during the former's life-time. Of course, after his death, the latter become entitled to it. Though Ukanthudama is mainly a Makkathaya custom, the gift is not subject to partition by its lapsing into a Marumakkathaya Tarwad. (Vide 16 T. L. R., pages 85 and 86.).

'There is also a modified form of Ukanthudama which is known in that community as Yapia (യാപ്യ) Ukanthudama. By this system, a portion of the Tarwad properties is set apart by the unanimous consent of the Karanavan, his wife and children and his co-parceners and nephews, for the maintenance for the Karanavan during his life-time and that portion is to be given as the Ukanthudama of his children after his death. The alienation by the Karanavan of such properties does not require the consent of the other members of his family, but requires the consent of the wife and children.

'Nankudama.—Next comes the right of a childless widow. Such a widow is entitled to maintenance from her husband's family in the shape of money allowance or properties yielding a specified amount. This right is called Nankudama. But childless young widows who have a prospect of re-marriage do not, as a rule, claim Nankudama nor do they remove the Thali tied at the time of their first marriage. There is a difference of opinion among the members of the community as to the nature of the right called Nankudama. One view is that it is the right of a childless widow for maintenance. Another view is that it is not merely an award for maintenance. It was no doubt originally meant for a widow's maintenance, but subsequently it took the shape of a right, claimable by the widow, just as Ukanthudama.

'The right is settled with reference to the status and assets of the deceased as well as with reference to the requirements of the widow. The re-marriage of the widow does not deprive her of this claim, but this is a source of social degradation to her and her family, and consequently such of the widows who have a prospect of re-marriage do not generally demand or accept the Nankudama gift.'

"'45. The right of Ukanthudama arises in the widow and children only on the death of the husband and father. It was originally granted out of love as the term signifies; but latterly the intervention of the Courts has been freely sought to enforce the right. Nankudama is said to be the right of the issueless widow for maintenance till her death or re-marriage. Several of the witnesses are for fixing the Ukanthudama at a fixed proportion of the deceased person's share in the family property or the whole of that share and a share of his self-acquisition or the whole of that too.' * * If individual partition is granted and Makkathayam succession accepted, the necessity for fixing the rights of Ukanthudama and Nankudama and their ratios to each other and to the family property ceases. If that is not done, the community would not be satisfied with a law defining those rights only. They would, in that case, leave the questions alone to be decided by the Courts in each case. The Committee do not therefore consider it necessary to make any recommendations on those points."

1. The assets available for Ukanthudama have to be divided equally among the children of a Nanjinad Vellala, whether male or female, and whether by one wife or more. Where a father leaves self-acquisition of considerable value, the child's share will be larger (i. e., 1/7) and where he leaves no self-acquisition or where the acquisition is not worth much, the share will be 1/10.

A decree obtained by an Anandarayan not in management of family affairs and on a document standing in his own name, cannot be treated as family property.—

Yappium Ukanthudama grants are as absolute as Nankudama and Ukanthudama grants and pass to the heir of the grantees on their death.

Held.—For determining the share of a deceased member for the purpose of estimating the Ukanthudama due to his children, the number of male members of the same grade as the deceased who were alive at the time of death should alone be taken into account. Held,—As the 1st defendant was entitled to credit for the money paid as Ukanthudama to the children of another deceased brother and as plaintiffs' father made no self-acquisition, the plaintiffs were entitled to get one-tenth of one-third of the value of Tarwad properties.

of defendant as Ukanthudama. The plaintiff claimed the property exclusively on the ground that her sister having died, the said sister's interest devolved on her by the principle of survivorship.

Held.—Nanjinad Vellalas being essentially governed by the Marumakkathayam law, there was no reason for holding that the presumption arising in respect of transactions between Marumakkathayees, pure and simple, did not arise in the case of Nanjinad Vellalas. The plaintiff, therefore, was not entitled to claim the property which must be held to belong to the Sub-Tarwad of which the defendant was the Karanavan.— 27 T. L. R., 86.

10. In view of the current of rulings that the Nanjinad Vellalas are essentially Marumakkathayees and the presumptions arising in the case of transactions between Marumakkathayees, pure and simple, arise in the case of Nanjinad Vellalas also ; there is no reason why the rule of Marumakkathayam Law that the self-acquisitions of a member of the Tarwad lapse to his Tavazhi in preference to the common Tarwad should not be held to apply to the Nanjinad Vellalas also (F. B.).— 6 T. L. J., 453.

35 T. L. R., 360.

12. In a suit for Ukanthudama dues, where the Tarwad properties of the deceased father lie in Travancore and Cochin, there is nothing to prevent the plaintiffs from saying that they will be satisfied with a charge for their claim on the Travancore properties. This does not, however, have the effect of compelling them to restrict the calculation of their claim on the value of those properties alone. There is no legal bar to the plaintiffs to ask the Court to take the value of the Cochin properties, admittedly belonging to the said Tarwad or in respect of which the nature of the Tarwad's right, such as it is, is not disputed, also into account in making the calculation.—

13. A suit for Ukanthudama dues by the son of a deceased Nanjinad Vellala father falls within the second part of Article 109 of the Limitation Regulation, and the period of limitation applicable is 12 years from the death of the father.— 11 T. L. J., 36.

14. In the appeal, the plaintiff—appellant, a childless Nanjinad Vellala woman, prayed for having the amount awarded to her by the lower Court as Nangudama enhanced. During the pendency of the appeal, the appellant died. Her daughter's son, thereupon, applied to be impleaded as her representative and to be allowed to prosecute the appeal :

Held.—The application was not maintainable under Sections 349 and 551 of C. P. C., in as much as the 'right to sue' did not survive. The expression 'right to sue' meant the right to bring a suit asserting a right to the same relief which the deceased plaintiff asserted at the time of the death. In the case, it could not be said that, if the plaintiff had died before the institution of the suit, her representative could have brought a suit for the recovery of the Nangudama which she would have been entitled to recover from her husband's estate. The claim for Nangudama was only a personal claim which ceased to be enforceable except when the same had been perfected by a judgment. So far as the claim for enhanced Nangudama was concerned, the plaintiff's suit had to be considered to have been dismissed ; in other words, it had to be considered not to have been perfected by a judgment.—

15. The suit was by the widow and children of one Aiyyamperumal, a deceased Nanjinad Marumakkavazhi Vellala, for recovery of Ukanthudama out of the latter's Tarwad properties. Aiyyamperumal had a brother Manickavasagam, who had predeceased him leaving a wi‹‹w and children behind, and these latter h‹‹ been given their Ukanthudama about 20 years prior to the date of suit. The questions that arose for decision were (1) what was the share of Aiyyamperumal in the Tarwad properties which would form the basis for the calculation of Ukanthudamai and (2) whether the Ukanthudamai was one-seventh or one-tenth of the said share.

Held.—(1) The predeceased brother had also to be taken into account for calculating the share in the Tarwad properties due to Aiyyamperumal because the widow and children of such brother were also entitled to Ukanthudamai. Accordingly, the share of Aiyyamperumal for the purpose of calculating Ukanthudama was one-half of the value of the Tarwad properties at his death.

(2) The Ukanthudama due to the children of a deceased Nanjinad Marumakkavazhi Vellala father is one-tenth of the said father's share in his Tarwad properties.—

16. A Nanjinad Marumakkathayee Vellala father died leaving three daughters. One of the daughters also died leaving children. The members of the Tarwad of the deceased father executed an Ukanthudama deed in favour of the two surviving daughters. The question for decision was whether the Ukanthudama deed enured to the benefit of the children of the deceased daughter also.

Held.—The Ukanthudama is analogous to a Makkathayam gift in an ordinary Marumakkathayam Tarwad, and enures to the benefit of the members of the sub-tarwad formed by the wife of the person whose Tarwad property is conveyed on Ukanthudama and her descendants in the female line.—
39 T. T. R., 196
(= 13 T. L. J., 190.)

17. Ukanthudama claimable by the children of a deceased Nanjinad Vellala following the Marumakkathayam system of inheritance is one-tenth of his share of the Tarwad properties and not one-seventh (F. B.).—
38 T. L. R., 295
(= 14 T. L. J , 95).

18. The principle of the Full Bench decision reported in 18 T. L. J., 747 with reference to Section 39 of the Nair Regulation would apply to a Nanjinad Vellala family as well, as it determined when the status of division is attained in a Marumakkathayam family to the members of which a right to claim a partition has been granted by statute.—

A Regulation to make provision for the Regulation of Exhibitions by means of Cinematographs,

Passed by Her Highness the Maha Rani Regent of Travancore, under date the 10th Edavam 1102, corresponding with the 24th May 1927, under Section 14 of Regulation II of 1097.

Preamble. Whereas it is expedient to make provision for regulating exhibitions by means of cinematographs:

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Regn. I of 1102: I. (1) Objects and Reasons.—"The Bill is designed to ensure proper control of cinematograph exhibitions with particular regard to the safety of those attending them, and to prevent the presentation to the public of improper or objectionable films. The special danger from fire which attends cinematograph exhibitions, as has been illustrated by terrible catastrophes due to this cause in other countries, renders it important to secure, in the interests of the safety of spectators, a proper regard to the structural conditions of the premises utilised.

The Bill accordingly provides that no exhibition shall be given except in accordance with the conditions of a license granted by the prescribed authority. This license is intended to ensure that the intentions of the Regulation are complied with and that adequate precautions are taken for the safety of persons attending the exhibition which it covers. The Bill also provides for the constitution of authorities which will be required to pass all films intended for exhibition in the State and which will have power to refuse the necessary certificate in the case of any film, the production of which in public is open to objection for the reasons already given.

The Bill includes the ordinary rule-making provision and enables the Government to exempt any cinematograph exhibition or class of cinematograph exhibitions from the provisions of the law. Finally, it makes provision for the punishment of offences against the Regulation or the rules made thereunder.

The Bill is drafted on the lines of British Indian Act, II of 1918, but special provision is made here to exempt cinematograph exhibitions, not being of an indecent character given in private dwelling houses, from the operation of the proposed enactment."—

(2) In introducing the Bill in the Council, the Official Member in charge said:—

"Two main purposes are sought to be achieved by this Bill. One is to ensure the safety of those who attend cinematograph exhibitions. The cinema has become a very popular amusement; and as a famous writer said recently in an article in a newspaper, it is a most momentous invention of this age next in importance only to the wireless. Naturally the cinematograph exhibitions are largely attended and it is necessary to look after the safety and protection of those who attend such performances. There must not be overcrowding, there must be sufficient ventilation, accommodation for latrine, etc., and above all, the people who attend must be protected from fire. The cinematograph apparatus is of an easily inflammable material and we have very often read of fires in cinematograph houses. One of the provisions of the Bill therefore is that the cinematograph exhibitions should be conducted only in licensed permises, one of the main conditions of the license being that sufficient arrangements should be taken to ensure the safety of the people who attend the performances.

Another important provision of the Bill and another object sought to be achieved by the proposed enactment is to prohibit the exhibition of improper films. The exhibition by means of cinematograph creates such a deep impression and such a thorough communion with the thing exhibited in the minds of those who attend that many, especially children, become permanently imbued with the spirit of what is exhibited. It is therefore necessary that the films that are exhibited are of a proper nature lest the morals of those who attend the cinemas, especially the younger folk, be depraved by exhibition of indecent scenes. I may say also that the cinematograph may be made an instrument for propagating seditious matter or such matter as would wound religious feelings of particular communities. I do not think therefore that it requires much argument from me to convince the House that the State must have some control over the exhibition by means of cinematograph and the character of the films exhibited. Provision is therefore made in the Bill that one of the conditions of the license should be that only such films as have been certified by a competent authority as fit for public exhibition are exhibited in cinema houses. I believe therefore that the Bill will be readily accepted by the House.

Short title, extent and commencement.

(2) It extends to the whole of Travancore.

(3) It shall come into force on the 1st Thulam, 1103.

I may however say that there are some provisions in the Municipal Regulation relating to the issue of licenses to houses meant for public entertainment and it may be that some of those provisions overlap with those of the present Bill. I have therefore made a provision that the Government may constitute any person as the authority to give these licenses. Even the Municipal Chairman may be appointed as a competent authority though the District Magistrate will ordinarily be the licensing authority."

The Committee's Report was published on 16-3-1926. It was presented to, and considered by, the Council on 20-4-1926 (L. C. P., Vol. VIII, Pp. 757-779) and 23-11-1926 (*L. C. whole or any part of a Province other authority for the purposes of this Act."

In the original Bill, the above Section was adopted with the omission of the words "or in a Presidency Town......of Police."

(2) The Select Committee recast the Section as it now stands in the Regulation. They said:—"We are of opinion that, in Municipal areas, the licensing authority should be the Municipal Councils who even now grant licenses under the Municipal Regulation. In other areas, the District Magistrate or such other authority as may be constituted by the Government may be the licensing authority. Whoever may be the authority that may grant the license, that authority has to conform to the provisions of this Regulation and the objects of this enactment will not therefore be defeated."— S. C. R.

Sec. 5 : Sub-section (3) of Section 5 in the Indian Act is:—"(3) Subject to the foregoing provisions of this Section, and to the control of the Local Government, the licensing authority may grant......as it may determine."

The above was adopted in the original Bill and approved by the Select Committee. When the Bill was considered by the Council, the wording was changed on the motion of a Non-official Member. In regard to the substitution of the words "Subject to the provisions of this Regulation" for the words "Subject to the foregoing provisions of this Section", he said:—"That would cover probably all aspects of the case, in view of the subsequent amendments to be proposed. It would be more comprehensive and more accurate."

As regards the substitution of the words "rules framed by" for "control of", he said

Punishment for contravention of this Regulation and Rules made thereunder.

6. If the owner or person in charge of a cinematograph uses the same or allows it to be used, or if the owner or occupier of any place permits that place to be used, in contravention of the provisions of this Regulation or the Rules made thereunder, or of the conditions or restrictions upon or subject to which any license has been granted under this Regulation, he shall be punishable, on conviction by a competent Court, with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees and, in the case of a continuing offence, with a further fine which may extend to one hundred rupees for each day during which the offence continues, and his license (if any) shall be liable to be revoked by the licensing authority.

that the expression "subject to the control of Government" was very vague. If the Government, through their Chief Secretary, write to the licensing authority, to grant a license, that would be control of Government."

The Official Member in charge opposed the second amendment. He said:—"The provisions of the Bill are intended more or less for policing the exhibitions of cinemas. Some latitude should be given to the Government for controlling the grant of licenses. * *"

Discussion followed, and the Deputy President who presided at the meeting, in distinguishing the wording in the British Indian Act, pointed out:—"India is a continent in itself, and the power of making rules is vested in the Governor-General in Council.Therefore, it may not be possible for the Governor-General in Council to frame the rules for all the Provinces alike. What is suitable to one Province may not be suitable to another. Therefore, they wanted to have some control given to the local Governments. In Travancore, I don't think any such contingency is likely to arise. * * I believe the Regulation and the Rules that may be framed by the Government will be quite enough for the Government to exercise whatever control they may find necessary. * *."— L. C. P., dated 20-4-1926.

Sec. 6: The original Bill had the following Sub-section:—"(2) If any person is convicted of an offence punishable under this Regulation committed by him in respect of any film, the convicting Court may further direct that the film shall be forfeited to the Government." This was adopted from the Indian Act.

When the Bill was considered by the Council, a motion was made by a Non-official Member to delete the Clause. He said:—

"As a general rule, on conviction, the convicting Court is empowered under this Sub-clause to confiscate the film in respect of which the offence has been committed. My objection to this Sub-clause is of a two-fold nature. The first is that, as a general proposition, I would oppose the punishment of confiscation, for though there are provisions in the Travancore statutes for confiscation of property when some offences specified in that behalf by the statute are committed, it appears to me a very harsh sort of punishment to confiscate the offender's property. It hits more his family than the offender himself. It may be a varying punishment also. For example, under the Forest Regulation, we have got cases where for the simple omission of taking out a license for the transport of timber from one place to another, a confiscation of property worth Rs. 4000 was ordered by a 3rd Class Magistrate in addition to his inflicting all possible punishments that he could on the offender. * *

Under the rule, if the conditions of the license have been transgressed, a perfectly

7. (1) Our Government may, by Notification in Our Government Gazette, constitute a Board consisting of officials and non-officials for the purposes of examining and certifying films as suitable for public exhibition. The certificate of the Board shall be valid in such area as may be specified in the certificate.

Certification of films.

(2) If the Board after examination considers that a film is suitable for public exhibition, it shall grant a certificate to that effect to the person applying for the same and shall cause the film to be marked in the prescribed manner.

(3) If the Board is of opinion that a film is not suitable for public exhibition, it shall inform the person applying for the certificate of its decision and such person may, within thirty days from the date of such information, appeal for a reconsideration of the matter by Our Government, whose decision shall be final.

(4) The District Magistrate may, after recording his reasons in writing, by order, suspend the certificate of any film pending the orders innocent film may be forfeited. That is one aspect of my general objection against the punishment of confiscation. Secondly, on the merits of the Clause itself, it is extremely hazy and iniquitous, for the exhibition of a film may take place not only at the instance of the owner of the film, but at the instance of any other person who may come into possession of such film by means fair or foul. Suppose a lessee holds a film from a lessor; he transgresses a particular license. An offence has been committed in respect of it; or, say, a thief has stolen it and goes to a distant part of Travancore obtains a license from the licensing board and exhibits it and he subsequently transgresses the conditions of the license. If the lessee or the thief is proceeded against by the Criminal Court or ultimately found guilty, is it a punishment for the lessee or the thief to have the film confiscated? They would only be glad and the real owner would be the sufferer.

Sub-clause (2) of Clause 6 runs as follows.—

"If any person is convicted of an offence punishable under this Regulation committed by him in respect of any film, the convicting Court may further direct that the film shall be forfeited to Government."

Now, various persons may be convicted under this Regulation in respect of the exhibition of any particular film, and 'such persons' may also include the owners of houses which are not licensed by the licensing authority for the exhibition of films in their houses. Suppose the owner of the house where a film is exhibited is punished under this Regulation, in respect of the exhibition of that film without license, is it reasonable or proper, is it even equitable to confiscate the film over which he has absolutely no proprietary interest whatsoever? When these hazy instances are also tacked under Sub-clause (2), the enactment becomes very hazy, and the real offender who cares nothing for the confiscation of the property is not the real sufferer. For this reason also, I would urge the deletion of this Sub-clause from the Bill."

The Official Member in charge opposed the amendment. A long discussion followed, and finally the Sub-section was omitted.— L. C. P., dated 20-4 & 23-11-1936.

of Our Government, and during such suspension the film shall be deemed to be an uncertified film. He shall forthwith forward a copy of his order to Our Government and Our Government may, in their discretion, either discharge his order or by Notification in Our Government Gazette direct that the film shall be deemed to be an uncertified film in the whole or any part of Travancore.

(5) Our Government may, of their own motion, by Notification in Our Government Gazette, direct that a certified film shall be deemed to be an uncertified film in the whole or any part of Travancore.

(6) The exhibition of a film to which any order or direction under Sub-section (4) or (5), is for the time being applicable shall, in the area to which such order or direction relates, be deemed to be a contravention of the condition mentioned in Section 5 (2).

Power to make Rules.

8. (1) Our Government may make Rules for the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of this Regulation.

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, Rules under this Section may provide for—

(a) the regulation of cinematograph exhibitions for securing the public safety;

(b) the procedure of the authorities constituted for examining and certifying films as suitable for public exhibition, and all matters ancillary thereto, and the fees to be levied by those authorities; and

(c) any other matter which by this Regulation is to be prescribed.

(3) All Rules made under this Regulation shall be published in Our Government Gazette, and, on such publication, shall have effect as if enacted in this Regulation.

Power to exempt.

9. Our Government may, by order in writing, exempt, subject to such conditions and restrictions as they may impose, any cinematograph exhibition or class of cinematograph exhibitions from any of the provisions of this Regulation or of any Rule made thereunder.

Saving as to cinematograph exhibitions in private dwelling-houses.

10. Notwithstanding anything contained in the foregoing Sections, the provisions of this Regulation shall not apply to any cinematograph exhibition not being of an indecent character given in a private dwelling-house to which the public are not admitted, whether on payment or otherwise.

REGULATION I OF 1103.

A Regulation to amend the Hackney Carriage Regulation, VI of 1089,
Passed by Her Highness the Maha Rani Regent of Travancore under date the 26th Medam 1103, corresponding with the 8th May 1928, under Section 14 of Regulation II of 1097.

Whereas it is expedient to amend the Hackney Carriage Regulation, VI of 1089, for the purposes hereinafter appearing; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Regn. I of 1103 : I. (1) Objects and Reasons.—"When a hackney carriage is licensed under the Hackney Carriage Regulation, the Registering Officer has, under Section 14 (1), to cause the register number of the carriage to be painted on some conspicuous part of the carriage or on a plate to be affixed on some conspicuous part of the carriage. Under that provision, this plate has to be, and is being, supplied by the Registering Officer. Although a fee may be levied when the painting or the plate is renewed under Section 14 (2) of the Regulation, doubts have been felt whether such a fee can be levied at the outset when the painting is done, or the plate supplied, under Sub-section (1). Again, drivers' badges (in metal) have to be supplied, to licensed drivers under Sub-sections (1) and (4) of Section 23 of the Regulation. There is no express provision in the Regulation for recovering the cost of the same. Similarly, fare plates have to be supplied for being affixed on hackney carriages under Bye-law 18 of the Bye-laws passed under the Regulation; and the affixture of such plates on some conspicuous part of the carriage is also necessary in the interests of the public. But there is no express provision authorising the recovery of the cost of such plates.

"2. The cost of supplying the plates of all the classes referred to is not negligible and is sure to increase year by year. In order to enable the cost being recovered from the parties concerned, the appropriate Sections of the Regulation are sought to be amended by this Bill."— S, O & R.

(2) In introducing the Bill, the Official Member in charge said :—

"The Hackney Carriage Regulation was passed with a view to control and license the hackney carriages as well as their drivers. Under the provisions in the Regulation and the bye laws passed thereunder, when a hackney carriage is licensed, a number-plate has to be affixed to the carriage to show the register number of the carriage and, when a driver is licensed, he has to be given a driver's badge. Further, under the bye-laws, a fare-plate showing the authorised fares for the carriages from one place to another has also to be affixed in the carriages themselves. These three things, viz., the number-plates, the drivers' badges and the fare-plates cost some money to the Government. The Regulation does not expressly provide for the realisation of the cost of these plates from the owners of the hackney carriages. This Bill is introduced with a view to enable the Government to realise the cost of these plates, which is estimated to be seven Chackrams each on an average, from the parties to whom these are granted. This is the principle of the Bill in brief.

Coming to certain details, I may bring to the notice of the Council that Section 14 of the Regulation authorises the numbering of hackney carriages and I shall read that Section for the information of the House :—

"14. (1) Upon the registration of any hackney carriage, the Registering Officer shall cause to be painted on some conspicuous part of the carriage or on a plate to be affixed on some conspicuous part of the carriage its number in the register and the number of passengers it is licensed to carry.

(2) If the words or figures so painted become indistinct or are obliterated during the term of the license, the owners of the carriage shall be bound to produce it before the Registering Officer and apply to have such words or figures renewed. If the plate so affixed shall have been lost or stolen, the owners of the carriage shall be bound to apply to the Registering Officer to have a new plate affixed. The charge for such painting or new plate shall be seven chackrams."

I am not quite sure whether the above provision was not intended to apply to the plates first supplied as well as to the plates that may be supplied afterwards. However, the cost of the plate will be about seven Chackrams, and the amendment that I propose to make in regard to this Section is practically to transfer the last sentence of Sub-section (2) into a new Sub-section so that the provision relating to the levy of seven Chackrams may apply to the plates originally issued, as well as to those issued afterwards.

In regard to the drivers' badges, Section 23 says :

"(1) The Registering Officer shall, at the time of granting a license to any driver of a hackney carriage, furnish him with a metal badge punched or marked with the number of his license."

* * * *

And later on, Sub-section (4) says :—

"(4) Whenever the number on any badge becomes indistinct or is obliterated during the term of the license, and also whenever any badge is lost or stolen, the person to whom the license relating to any such badge has been granted shall deliver such badge or notify its loss and shall produce such license to the Registering Officer and such person shall then be entitled to have a new license and badge delivered to him upon payment of half the fee mentioned in Section 18. Such new license shall be in force for the year of registration."

* * * *

Here also, it will be noticed that nothing is mentioned as to the cost of the badge to be supplied to the driver. Under the Regulation a doubt has arisen as to whether the badge should be supplied at the cost of the Government or not. * *

Then, what Section 30 says is this:—

"(1) The owner or driver of every hackney carriage may demand and receive for the hire of such carriage such fares as may be fixed and published by the Registering Officer, with the sanction of Our Government duly notified.

Provided that any agreement entered into to accept a fare lower than the fare so fixed shall be binding."

In bye-law 18, it is laid down—

"An abstract of the fares printed on enamelled plates shall be affixed under the orders of the Registering Officer in a conspicuous place in each hackney carriage after such carriage has been licensed."

So, a fare-plate has to be affixed to each carriage when it is licensed. But nothing is mentioned as to the cost of the plate and from whom it has to be recovered. If this Section is construed literally, it would mean that the Government have to pay for these plates. It is only reasonable and proper that when any Department of Government is called upon to do any service to any party, the Government should get the value of the service rendered. The plates do cost some money, which is not negligible, and I hope the House will accept the principle of the Bill."—L. C. P., dated 29-7-1927.

REGULATION I OF 1103.

Short title and commencement.

1. This Regulation may be called the Hackney Carriage (Amendment) Regulation, 1103, and it shall come into force at once.

Amendment of Section 14.

2. In Section 14 of the Hackney Carriage Regulation, VI of 1089, (hereinafter referred to as "the said Regulation") the last sentence in Sub-section (2) shall be omitted and the following shall be inserted as Sub-section (3), namely :—

Charge for the painting or plate.

"(3) The fee for the painting or the plate, done or supplied under Sub-section (1) or Sub-section (2) shall be seven Chackrams, payable to the Registering Officer."

Amendment of Section 32.

3. In Section 32 of the said Regulation, after Sub-section (3), the following Sub-sections shall be inserted, namely :—

Fare plates.

"(4) The Registering Officer shall also cause an abstract of the fares referred to in Sub-section (1) to be prepared in English and the Vernacular language of the place and printed on enamelled plates and such plates shall be issued to applicants on payment of a fee of seven Chackrams for each plate.

Fare plates to be affixed on carriages.

(5) Every hackney carriage shall have such a plate affixed, and, as often as any portion of the printing on any such plate becomes indistinct or obliterated, re-affixed on a conspicuous part of the carriage in accordance with the directions of the Registering Officer.

Penalty for plying for hire without fare plate.

(6) If any hackney carriage stands or plies for hire without such a plate affixed or re-affixed as required by Sub-section (5), the owner and driver thereof shall be punishable with fine not exceeding twenty rupees."

II. The Bill was published in the Gazette dated 2-11-1926. It was introduced and referred to a Select Committee on 29-7-1927 (L. C. P., Vol. XI, Pp. 28-31). The Select Committee's Report was presented to, and considered by, the Council on 2-12-1927 (L. C. P., Vol. XII, Pp. 148-154). The Report was not published, as the Committee thought that the Bill had not been so altered as to require re-publication. For the Report, see L. C. P. Vol. XII. The Bill was finally read and passed on 16-4-1928 (L. C. P., Vol. XII, P. 454). The Regulation was published in the Gazette dated 15-5-1928.

IRRIGATION REGULATION AMENDMENT

REGULATION II OF 1103.

A Regulation further to amend the Irrigation Regulation, III of 1072, as amended by Regulations VI of 1090 and V of 1097,

Passed by Her Highness the Maha Rani Regent of Travancore under date the 26th Medam 1103, corresponding with the 8th May 1928, under Section 14 of Regulation II of 1097.

Whereas it is expedient further to amend the Irrigation Regulation, III of 1072, as amended by Regulations VI of 1090 and V of 1097, for the purposes hereinafter appearing; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Regn. II of 1103 : I. (1) Objects and Reasons.—"Section 23 of the Irrigation Regulation of 1072 provides that 'whenever, by local custom, any work for purposes of agriculture should be done by the joint labour or cost of the proprietors of all the lands benefited by such work, if any of such proprietors fails or neglects to do his share of the work or contribute his share of the cost or labour ', the Peishkar or any Officer authorised in that behalf may investigate the matter and pass such order as he deems fit. The Section further provides that, if that order directs a defaulting proprietor to execute a portion of any work and if such defaulting proprietor fails to execute it, the estimated cost of the work directed to be done may be recovered from the defaulter as arrears of land revenue. But the order passed by the Peishkar or other Officer need not always be one to do any specific portion of a work. It may also be, as very often it has to be, to contribute a portion of the cost involved in a work that ought to be done by joint cost as, for example, when the Peishkar has to order one of the many proprietors of a punja padom to pay a rateable portion of the cost incurred by the others in draining the entire padom of the water in it. In such cases, the Section does not lay down how the amount ordered by the Peishkar or other Officer to be paid by the defaulting proprietor is to be recovered. This Bill is therefore framed to authorise the recovery, by the Revenue Recovery processes, of such and other amounts ordered to be paid under the provisions of the Section. Occasion has been taken also to make it explicit that the Peishkar or other Officer may pass orders directing the payment of any portion of the cost involved in a work".— S. O & R.

(2) In introducing the Bill, the Official Member in charge said :—

"I shall now briefly explain the object of the Bill. The object is simple. But it may require some explanation. I shall begin with explaining the object of Section 23 itself, that is, the Section that is now sought to be amended. In Travancore, as elsewhere, agricultural lands lie in one block very commonly and these blocks are cultivated by their proprietors jointly. This is a common feature in Travancore and a very illustrative case may be cited in the cultivation of punja lands in Kuttanad. These fields lie without any apparent boundary marks and lie contiguous to one another. Two of the most important works to be done in the cultivation of these are, one, the putting up of ring bunds and two, the draining off of the water in these fields. As is probably known to all the members of the House, the ring bunds are put up by the joint efforts of all the cultivators and all of them benefit thereby. It is put on their joint cost and joint labour. The water also is drained by the proprietors jointly. To say that one proprietor may put up the bund himself and drain the water himself so far as his own field is concerned, is very inequitable. To do so, is very much more than to put it himself and others together. Therefore, in practice, all these works are done jointly. Where there are a number of proprietors and one of them is unwilling to contribute his share of the cost of putting up the bund or draining the water, leaving to the other proprietors to put up the bund or drain the water and incur the cost themselves, the question may arise as to whether the cost may not be recovered from the recalcitrant. No doubt, it may be said that they need put up the bund only around their own lands. But that is not the practice and that will cost more than if it were done for the recalcitrant owners' lands also. If thus bunds are put up by the others and the water is drained, naturally, the field of the recalcitrant will also be benefited. That is to say, the benefit thereof goes to the recalcitrant owner too. Section 23 lays down that when any of the proprietors fails or neglects to do his share of the work which ought to have been done by joint cost or joint labour and when the other owners are obliged to put the bund or drain the water, then the Division Peishkar or any other officer, specially authorised in this behalf, may make such order as he thinks fit. The Section further lays down that the Dewan Peishkar may himself execute the work and recover the cost. It will be noticed from Section 23 that there is a fundamental difference between the two sorts of works, viz., the putting up of the bund and the draining of the water. If there is 10,000 running feet of bund to be put up, one owner may take 2,000 feet, another 1,000, another 3,000 and so on. But in the case of draining water, it is not possible to say that one proprietor should drain so much of the water. Because of this difference, we can only say how the cost will have to be apportioned. Therefore two different provisions are necessary. Section 23 lays down only that if any recalcitrant owner fails to do a definite share of the work, that work may be carried out under the orders of the Division Peishkar, but it is silent as to what the proprietor or the recalcitrant owner should pay in the other case. It may be that Rs. 10,000 will be required for draining the water. But what is the share of the cost he is to pay? It is true an order may be passed by the Division Peishkar under Section 23 for apportioning the cost of draining the water; but it does not lay down expressly how that proportion of money may be recovered from the recalcitrant proprietor. The object of this amendment therefore is to make it clear that such money also may be recovered from the defaulting proprietor under the Revenue Recovery Regulation. With this explanation, if the members of the House will kindly read the Section as would be amended, which I have caused to be printed and circulated, they will see the purport of the amendment. Section 23 reads thus:

'23. Whenever, by local custom, any work for purposes of agriculture should be done by the joint labour or cost of the proprietors of all the lands benefited by such work, if any of such proprietors fails or neglects to do his share of the work or contribute his share of the cost or labour, it shall be lawful for the Division Peishkar or any officer specially authorised in this behalf, on the application of a reasonable number of proprietors interested in such work or injured by such failure or neglect, to investigate the matter and pass such order as he deems fit' etc.

Thus, it will be noticed that two classes of work are referred to in the first portion of the Section, namely, work done by joint labour and by joint cost. The second part then runs thus:

'If the order directs that the defaulting proprietor shall execute a portion of the work, it shall distinctly specify the portion of the work to be executed, the time within which it should be done and the estimated cost of such work. On the defaulting pro-

(a) in the first sentence, the following shall be added at the end, namely—

prietor refusing or failing to execute the work within the time prescribed in the order, the cost of the work may be recovered from such defaulter, as arrears of land revenue and the work executed under the orders of the Division Peishkar or such officer as aforesaid'.

This refers to the case where the work itself has to be done in specific shares. But the Section is silent in regard to works which have to be done as a whole, the cost alone being apportioned. The Section as it stands would apply to the case of putting up a ring bund. But it will not apply to the case of the draining of the water. Therefore, I have added at the end in the Section the necessary amendments. At the end of the first part of the Section, the following may be added :—

'and may also, by such order, direct the defaulting proprietor to execute any portion of the work or pay any portion of the cost of the work'.

At the end of the second portion the following has to be added :—

'Any sum of money ordered to be paid under the provisions of this Section may also be recovered from the defaulting proprietor as arrears of land revenue and the amount so recovered paid to the party entitled to it'. * *" L. C. P., dated 29-7-1927.

The Select Committee's Report was presented to, and considered by, the Council on 6-12-1927 (L. C. P., Vol. XII, P. 360). A Regulation to provide for the Regulation and Inspection of Mines and for the prospecting for Metals and Minerals

Passed by Her Highness the Maha Rani Regent of Travancore, under date the 26th Medam 1103, corresponding with the 8th May 1928, under Section 14 of Regulation II of 1097.

Whereas it is expedient to provide for the Regulation and Inspection of Mines and for the prospecting for Metals and Minerals: It is hereby enacted as follows :—

---

Regn. III of 1103: I. (1) Objects and Reasons.—

"1. The objects of this Regulation are:—(a) to enable prospecting for minerals in the State,

(b) the regulation of labour in mines, and

(c) the inspection of mines.

Though the mines in actual working now are only surface mines, where elaborate precautions may not be necessary to safeguard the interests of the labourers so as to insure their health and safety, there wer[illegible] other mines in existence before, the wo[illegible]ing of which cannot be said to have [illegible] the[illegible] abandoned, and other min[illegible] [illegible]ght [illegible]lso."—S. C. R.

into existence, where regulating labour was and might become necessary. There is no statute in force enabling the Government to safeguard the interests of labour and of lessees of mines. In British India the first Act passed in relation to mines was replaced by Act No. IV of 1923. The provisions and principles of the Act have been adopted in so far as they are applicable in Travancore.

"2. No notes on clauses are deemed useful. It may, however, be pointed out that payment of compensation is provided for in case any damage might be caused by prospecting in land belonging to private individuals. Power is also taken to acquire land or any limited interest in land either permanently or for any limited time, when such acquisition is found necessary, to avoid likelihood of damage to ownership of surface rights or to enable the successful working of a mine. Provision is made for payment of adequate compensation which might be fixed either by agreement or by the decision of a District Court, subject to appeal to the High Court. It is not desirable that the Land Acquisition Regulation should apply to such limited methods and extent of acquisition, and no definition of what might be regarded as adequate compensation in such cases is attempted, in order that the Courts may so frame the decision in each individual case as to accord with the equities of such case."— S. O & R.

(2) In introducing the Bill, the Official Member in charge said :—

"I understand that there are seven mines ; but some of them are not working though they may be worked again. It is also necessary that there should be provision to enable the Government or its servants to prospect for minerals on private grounds. As it is, it is only with the consent of a private person that entry may be made in a private compound. No prospecting for minerals could be done at present in private lands. It has led to considerable difficulties and it has not always been possible to get the owner's permission to his land for the purpose of prospecting for minerals. According to the Bill, any Government Officer may enter upon any land for prospecting for minerals. Provision for the payment of sufficient compensation for any damage done to the land has also been made. In cases of difficulty, reference may be made to a Board which is to decide the amount of compensation finally. And thus provision may be made so as to regulate labour and to safeguard the health and safety of the labouring classes. The other provision is the Chapter regulating the penalty for non-obedience of the various Chapters in the Bill, while the last Chapter deals with the rules to be framed by the Government. The Bill is a simple one and I do not think it is likely to be contentious." * * *

"The Bill does not attempt to confirm ownership of mines at all. If the ownership vests in the Government now, it will be so even after the Bill is passed. If the ownership of mines vests in a private individual, it will continue to do so even after the present Bill is passed ; so that it has nothing to do whatsoever with the ownership. The first portion of the Bill is purely about prospecting and nothing else. Whether a mine belongs to a private individual or to the Government, it is absolutely necessary that the Department of Geology should prospect for minerals on private gardens and private lands and for that purpose enter upon and make the necessary excavation, etc., in them. A question was asked whether there was any objection on the part of any particular individual. There may or may not be objection. Once you begin to make excavations, there may be serious objections. The only safeguard necessary is that, whatever loss or damage accrued to the party, it should be sufficiently compensated for by the Government interfering with the ownership of land. That has been provided for."—

II. The Bill was published in the Gazette dated 25-3-1924. It was introduced in the ### Preliminary.

1. (1) This Regulation may be called "The Travancore Mines and Minerals Regulation".

Short title, extent and commencement.

(2) It extends to the whole of Travancore.

(3) It shall come into force at once.

2. (1) In this Regulation, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context—

Definitions.

(a) "Agent", when used in relation to a mine, means any person appointed or acting as the representative of the owner in respect of the management of the mine or of any part thereof, and, as such, superior to a manager under this Regulation:

(b) "Child" means a person under the age of fourteen years:

(c) A person is said to be "employed" in a mine who works, under appointment by, or with the knowledge of, the manager, whether for wages or not, in any mining operation, or in cleaning or oiling any part of any machinery used in or about the mine, or in any other kind of work whatsoever incidental to, or connected with, mining operations:

Council and referred to a Select Committee on 4-6-1924 (L. C. P., Vol. IV, Pp. 819-832) and 3-11-1925 (L. C. P., Vol. VIII, Pp. 146-147). The Committee's Report was published in the Gazette dated 27-7-1926. It was presented to, and considered by, the Council on 26 & 27-4-1926. (L. C. P., Vol. X, Pp. 469—491, 529—588), 30-11 and 2-12-1927 (L. C. P., Vol. XII, Pp. 73-79, 114-148). The Bill was finally read and passed on 16-4-1928 (L. C. P., Vol. XII, Pp. 452-454). The Regulation was published in the Gazette dated 15-5-1928.

Preamble: The Indian Act provides for the regulation and inspection of mines. The Regulation has added the words "and for the prospecting of metals and minerals"; and a separate Chapter—(II), not found in the Indian Act, has been inserted to provide for prospecting. See Statement of Objects and Reasons, Supra.

Sec. 2 (1) (b): In the Indian Act, a child means a person under the age of thirteen years. This definition was adopted in the original Bill. The Select Committee, in reporting on the Bill, substituted "fourteen" for "thirteen". They said :—"A child is defined in the Travancore Factories Regulation as a person under the age of fourteen years. The same may be adopted for the purposes of this enactment also."—S. C. R.

(d) "Gazette" means the Travancore Government Gazette:

(e) "Inspector" means an Inspector of Mines appointed under this Regulation and includes a District Magistrate when exercising any power or performing any duty of an Inspector which he is empowered by this Regulation to exercise or perform:

(f) "Mine" means any excavation whether subterranean or not, where any operation for the purpose of searching for, or obtaining, minerals has been or is being carried on, and includes all works, machinery, tramways and sidings, whether above or below ground, in or adjacent to or belonging to a mine:

Provided that it shall not include any part of such premises on which a manufacturing process is being carried on, unless such process is a process for coke-making or the dressing of minerals:

(g) "Owner", when used in relation to a mine, means any person to whom a lease or license is given by the Government to work a mine or to prospect for metals or minerals and includes a contractor who may be engaged to do any work or part of it:

(h) "Prescribed" means prescribed by Rules made under this Regulation:

(i) "Qualified medical practitioner" means any person declared by the Government by Notification in the Gazette to be a qualified medical practitioner for the purposes of this Regulation:

Sec. 2 (1) (f): The original Bill adopted the definition in the Indian Act which does not contain the words "whether subterranean or not." These words were inserted by the Select Committee.

Sec. 2 (1) (g): The Indian Act defines the term thus:—" 'Owner', when used in relation to a mine, means any person who is the immediate proprietor or lessee or occupier of the mine or of any part thereof, but does not include a person who merely receives a royalty, rent or fine from the mine, or is merely the proprietor of the mine subject to any lease, grant or license for the working thereof, or is merely the owner of the soil and not interested in the minerals of the mine; but any contractor for the working of a mine or any part thereof shall be subject to this Act in like manner as if he were an owner, but not so as to exempt the owner from any liability."

(j) "Serious bodily injury" means any injury which involves, or in all probability will involve, the permanent loss of the use of, or permanent injury to, any limb, or the permanent loss of or injury to the sight or hearing, or the fracture of any limb or the enforced absence of the injured person from work for a period exceeding twenty days:

(k) "Week" means the period between midnight on Saturday night and midnight on succeeding Saturday night.

(2) (a) For the purposes of this Regulation the expression "mineral" shall not include common sand, common clay, laterite, or gravel.

(b) Our Government may, by Rules made from time to time, declare any substance to be not a mineral for the purposes of this Regulation.

Sec. 2 (2): This Sub-section is not found in the Indian Act. It was not in the original Bill. When the Bill was considered by the Council, the Sub-section was added on the motion of the Official Member in charge who said:—

"When the definition of 'mine' was in debate in this House, I drew the attention of this House to the fact that the main object of the Government in passing this Regulation was to regulate the labour conditions. The proprietory right over the minerals was already dealt with by another enactment, the Minerals Proclamation and we are not concerned with that in this Bill. Our dominant object is to provide for labour conditions. Therefore it was necessary to give a wide import to the term "Minerals" and thereby also to "Mines." Restrictions imposable on mines in general may, it was feared, be imposed on quarries from which clay and laterite are quarried. I gave an assurance that such matters may be excluded from the term 'minerals' and therefore such quarries from "mines" too. * If the main object of the Bill is to regulate labour conditions then granite cannot be excluded. In the working of granite, blasting may be necessary and the breaking of granite blocks into blue metal may have to be done. The conditions of labour in these operations are not always such as should be left without control. Therefore I did not want to exclude granite from the category of minerals. If that is excluded, then granite quarry can never be a mine. Then women and children can go and work there and Government can exercise no restriction there. * *

"The House apprehended that if mineral is not defined, then clay and laterite quarries will also go into the category of mines and Government would impose restrictions thereon. Therefore I agreed that I would bring in an amendment. It will be dangerous to exclude granite from "minerals." If a granite quarry can never be a mine, then none of the conditions and restrictions imposed by this Bill will apply.

I have put in another clause, Clause (b) to say that Government may exclude any substance from being classed as mineral."—

CHAPTER II.

Prospection for Metals and Minerals.

Notice before prospecting land not belonging to Government.

3. (1) Whenever it appears to any officer of the Government appointed in this behalf that any metal or mineral may be found beneath the surface of any land, which is not land belonging to the Government, and that the examination of the sub-soil in such land is necessary or desirable, such officer shall give notice, in the manner prescribed, of his intention to survey the land and examine the sub-soil.

(2) It shall be lawful to the officer who gives notice under Sub-section (1) at any time after fourteen days of the date of such notice—

(a) to enter upon and survey such land;

(b) to dig or bore into the sub-soil, and to take samples of such sub-soil;

(c) to place marks, and cut trenches, and where necessary to cut down and clear away any part of any standing crop, fence or jungle;

(d) to do all other acts necessary to ascertain the existence and extent of any metal or mineral believed to exist in such land.

(3) The acts referred to in Sub-section (2) may be performed either by the officer who gives notice, or such other person whom he authorises in writing to perform such acts.

Payment of compensation.

4. (1) The officer mentioned in Section 3 shall, at the time of such entry, pay or tender payment for any damage which may be done by the acts aforesaid; and in case of dispute as to the sufficiency of the amount so tendered, he shall at once refer the dispute to the decision of the Dewan Peishkar of the Divison in which the land is situate and shall forward with his reference a written statement of the particulars of the damage anticipated and of the amounts tendered in respect of each of such particulars. The Dewan Peishkar or, if so authorised by him, any Division Assistant or Tahsildar subordinate to him shall adjudge the amount of the compensation and payment shall be made accordingly.

Chapter II: See note under Preamble.

(2) Nothing in this Section shall debar any party dissatisfied with the amount adjudged as hereinbefore provided for from suing in Our Civil Courts for the determination and decree of a proper amount of compensation in respect of the damage anticipated at the time of the tender or in respect of any damage not so anticipated.

Power of Government to make Rules.

5. The Government may make Rules—

(a) as to the mode of service of notice under Section 3;

(b) the mode of enquiry to be made in cases of reference under Section 4; and

(c) generally to carry out the provisions of this Chapter.

Inspectors.

Inspectors.

6. (1) The Government may, by Notification in the Gazette, appoint a duly qualified person to be the Inspector of Mines throughout Travancore.

(2) The Inspector of Mines appointed under this Section shall be deemed to be a public servant within the meaning of the Travancore Penal Code.

(3) No person shall be appointed to be an Inspector or having been appointed shall continue to hold such office who is or becomes directly or indirectly interested in any mine or mining right in Travancore.

(4) When Rules are made under this Regulation, the Inspector shall give information to owners, agents and managers of mines as to any Rules which concern them respectively, and as to the places where copies of such Rules may be obtained.

Powers of District Magistrates.

7. The District Magistrate may exercise the powers and perform the duties of an Inspector subject to the general or special orders of Government:

Provided that nothing in this Section shall be deemed to empower a District Magistrate to exercise any of the powers conferred by Section 17 or Section 30.

Powers of Inspector of Mines.

8. The Inspector may—

(a) make such examination and enquiry as he thinks fit, in order to ascertain whether the provisions of this Regulation and of the Rules and bye-laws and of any orders made thereunder are observed in the case of any mine;

(b) with such assistants (if any) as he thinks fit, enter, inspect and examine any mine or any part thereof at all reasonable times by day or by night, but not so as unreasonably to impede or obstruct the working of the mine;

(c) examine into and make inquiry respecting the state and condition of any mine or any part thereof, the ventilation of the mine, the sufficiency of the bye-laws for the time being in force relating to the mine and all matters and things connected with or relating to the safety of the persons employed in or about the mine.

Managers.

13. (1) Save as may be otherwise prescribed, every mine shall be under one manager who shall have the prescribed qualifications and shall be responsible for the control, management and direction of the mine and the owner or agent of every mine shall appoint himself or some other person having such qualifications to be such manager.

(2) if any mine is worked without there being a manager for the mine as required by Sub-section (1), the owner and agent shall each be deemed to have contravened the provisions of the Section.

Duties and responsibilities of owners, agents and managers.

14. (1) The owner, agent and manager of every mine shall be responsible that all operations carried on in connection therewith are conducted in accordance with the provisions of this Regulation and of the Rules and bye-laws and of the orders made thereunder.

(2) In the event of any contravention of any such provisions by any person whomsoever, the owner, agent and manager of the mine shall each be deemed also to be guilty of such contravention unless he proves that he had taken all reasonable means, by publishing and to the best of his power enforcing those provisions, to prevent such contravention:

Provided that the owner or agent shall not be so deemed if he proves—

(a) that he was not in the habit of taking, and did not in respect of the matter in question take, any part in the management of the mine;

(b) that he had made all the financial and other provisions necessary to enable the manager to carry out his duties; and

(c) that the offence was committed without his knowledge, consent or connivance.

(3) Save as hereinbefore provided, it shall not be a defence in any proceedings brought against an owner or agent of a mine under this Section that a manager of the mine has been appointed in accordance with the provisions of this Regulation.

CHAPTER V.

Provisions as to Health and Safety.

15. There shall be provided and maintained for every mine, latrine and urinal accommodation of such kind and on such scale, and such supply of water fit for drinking, as may be prescribed.

Medical appliances.

16. At every mine in respect of which the Government may, by Notification in the Gazette, declare this Section to apply, such supply of ambulances or stretchers, and of splints, bandages and other medical requirements, as may be prescribed, shall be kept ready at hand in a convenient place and in good and serviceable order.

Powers of Inspectors when causes of danger not expressly provided against exist or when employment of persons is dangerous.

17. (1) If, in any respect which is not provided against by any express provision of this Regulation or of the Rules or bye-laws or of any orders made thereunder, it appears to the Inspector that any mine, or any part thereof or any matter, thing or practice in or connected with the mine, or with the control, management or direction thereof is dangerous to human life or safety, or defective so as to threaten, or tend to, the bodily injury of any person, he may give notice in writing thereof to the owner, agent or manager of the mine, and shall state in the notice the particulars in which he considers the mine or part thereof, or the matter, thing or practice, to be dangerous or defective and require the same to be remedied within such time as he may specify in the notice.

(2) If the Inspector is of opinion that there is urgent and immediate danger to the life or safety of any person employed in any mine or part thereof, he may, by an order in writing containing a statement of the grounds of his opinion, prohibit, until the danger is removed, the employment in or about the mine or part thereof of any person whose employment is not in his opinion reasonably necessary for the purpose of removing the danger.

(3) The Inspector making a requisition under Sub-section (1) or an order under Sub-section (2) shall forthwith report the same to the Government and shall inform the owner, agent or manager of the mine that such report has been so made.

Power of Government to appoint Court of inquiry in cases of accidents.

19. (1) When any accidental explosion, ignition, outbreak of fire or irruption of water or other accident has occurred in or about any mine, the Government, if they are of opinion that a formal inquiry, into the causes of and circumstances attending the accident, ought to be held, may appoint a competent person to hold such inquiry; and may also appoint any person or persons possessing legal or special knowledge to act as assessor or assessors in holding the inquiry.

(2) The person appointed to hold any such inquiry shall have all the powers of a Civil Court under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1100, for the purpose of enforcing the attendance of witnesses and compelling the production of documents and material objects; and every person required by such person as aforesaid to furnish any information shall be deemed to be legally bound to do so within the meaning of Section 169 of the Travancore Penal Code.

CHAPTER VI.

Hours and Limitation of Employment.

Hours of employment.

21. No person shall be employed in a mine—

(a) on more than six days in any one week,

(b) if he works above ground, for more than fifty-four hours in any one week,

---

Sec. 21: The corresponding Section 21 of the Indian Act is as follows:—"No person shall be employed in a mine—(a) on more than six days in any one week, (b) if

(c) if he works below ground, for more than forty-two hours in any one week, and

(d) for more than eleven hours a day.

he works above ground, for more than sixty hours in any one week, (c) if he works below ground, for more than fifty-four hours in any one week."

(1) This was adopted in the original Bill and passed by the Select Committee. When the Bill was considered by the Council, "fifty-four" was substituted for "sixty" in Clause (b) and "forty-two" for "fifty-four" in Clause (c), on the motion of a Non-official Member who said :—

"The object of this Bill, is mainly to safeguard the interests of the labourers. As that position is admitted by all, I hope that the suggestion of a decrease in the number of hours of work will be approved. Mining operations are very exhausting work for the labourers and it is well-known that our country is a very hot and moist one where the powers of endurance of the people cannot be expected to be as great as in colder countries. I learn that in colder countries such as England an eight-hour day is the maximum limit of work for miners. They want to reduce that to a further extent. Such being the case in a hotter country like ours the work should not be so great as is fixed in this Sub-clause. In the Sub-clause sixty hours per week is provided, that is, ten hours per day. I ought to have substituted forty-eight but as a compromise I suggest fifty-four, that is one hour less a day than the number of hours prescribed. A week consists of six working days. If fifty-four hours are provided for one week, it works out at nine hours per day. I hope that is only a very moderate amendment. This is in regard to work above the ground.

Sub-clause (c) deals with work below the ground. Work below the ground is much more difficult and exhausting than work above the ground. That is admitted by the fact that a less number of hours is prescribed for work below the ground than for work above the ground. In that case, I have suggested that the number of hours should be limited to forty-two because it is more exhausting work. As the main object of the Bill is to safeguard the health and convenience of the labourers I hope these amendments will be accepted".—

(2) On the motion of another Non-official Member, Clause (d) was newly added. The mover said :—

"It will be admitted by all that mining work entails more hazards and is more unhealthy than factory work of other kinds. When we admit this, it consequently follows that mining work should be regulated more stringently than factory work. * * But, Sir, after all, now we have reached the provisions relating to the regulation and limitation of labour and what do we find ? We find that the Factory Regulation passed long ago is much in advance of the Bill that is placed before us to-day. In the Factory Regulation, there are provisions regulating the period of work, the number of hours of daily work, conditions on which women and children should be employed, etc. But here we have none of them. Sir, the object of limiting the number of hours of work is to protect the health and eventually the life of the labourer. In the present Bill, we have a provision limiting only the number of working hours in a week. But will this provision alone give the desired effect, if a labourer continued to work 18 or 19 hours a day ? I do not think that there are many in this House who have ever gone into a mine and studied the working conditions there. * * But, Sir, those who have studied the conditions of work in mines say that this weekly limit is not of any practical

22. Nothing in Section 21 shall apply to persons who may by Rules be defined to be persons holding positions of supervision or management employed in a confidential capacity.

Supervising staff.

23. In case of an emergency involving serious risk to the safety of the mine or of persons employed therein, the manager may, subject to the provisions of Section 17, permit persons to be employed in contravention of Section 21 on such work as may be necessary to protect the safety of the mine or of the persons employed therein :

Exemption from provisions regarding employment.

Provided that, where such occasion arises, a record of the fact shall immediately be made by the manager and shall be placed before the Inspector at his next inspection of the mine.

24. No child shall be employed in a mine, and no woman or child shall be allowed to be present in any part of a mine which is below the ground.

Restriction as to women and children.

use whatsoever. The miners, I understand, do not work for more than 3 or 4 days a week, to finish the week's work, which means 18 hours or so a day. Thus you will see that unless we limit the number of hours of work per diem, we will not be satisfying our fundamental object, namely, limitation of labour. Further, there is also the fear that unless such daily work is limited, the provisions of clauses (b) and (c) may be easily evaded by a skilful miner by working three days in one mine and finishing his work there and then going to another mine and work there for the remaining days of the week. * Therefore it is more necessary to limit the hours of work in a day than the number of hours in a week. Lastly, I will submit that I have put the daily hours of work at such a high figure as eleven as I very much wish that the principle of the Regulation of the daily hours of work that is recognised in the Factory Regulation be accepted here also."—

Sec. 24 : Section 26 in the Indian Act runs thus :—" No child shall be employed in a mine, or be allowed to be present in any part of a mine which is below ground". The original Bill adopted this provision. When the Bill was considered by the Council, the provision was altered in the manner now enacted, on the motion of a Non-official member who said :—

"The employment of women in mines is a question that has been agitating the minds of every legislator for a pretty long period. * The main feature of any mining legislation in all civilized countries seems to be the prohibition of the employment of women underground. In England, this prohibition was placed in 1842. Sir, in our new Bill which is being considered now, i. e., 85 years after England prohibited the employment of women underground and all the civilized countries throughout the world have followed this prohibition in their legislatures, it is very surprising to find that not only have we not made any provision for the prohibition of employment of women, but we have not even thought of regulating the period of work or labour which has been provided for in the Factories Regulation. Sir, I respectfully beg to submit, that, from

25. No woman shall be employed in a mine before six o'clock in the morning or after six o'clock in the evening.

Restriction as to the employment of women.

what I heard from the learned Law Member yesterday, the prohibition of the employment of children in mines and being present in any part of a mine below ground, is bodily imported from the British Indian Act, without caring to go through the object of this provision in the British Indian Act.

"The prohibition of employment of children was included in the British Indian Act with the object of later on prohibiting the employment of women in the mines. *

"Assembly Debates, page 706, 20th September 1222. I will read it.

'We have taken the first step. We have tentatively proposed that children up to the age of 13 should not be allowed in a mine at all. The effect of that may be to reduce the employment of women in the mines, for women who are mothers very probably will not go down the mines at all if they cannot take their young children with them. That is the first step, and a time may come when Local Governments may think it possible to utilise the powers which they have under clause 30 (d) of this Bill to prohibit the employment of women in mines altogether'.

"From the speech of Sir Charles Innes, which I read yesterday, it is clearly seen that the object of introducing that clause was to prohibit the employment of women in due course. Sir, I believe this House will agree with me in thinking that the employment of women underground will produce very harmful effects on their family life as well as their morality. A woman who works underground goes to work early in the morning with her husband and returns late in the evening. Under these conditions, she cannot be a good wife nor a good mother. And what happens to the miner who does not get any comfort at home when he returns? He seeks a kind of relief and rest and for that he takes resort to the grog shop. Sir, it is said that the high percentage of drinking amongst the miners is due to the employment of women underground. When a man becomes addicted to drink, he spends all his money. He wants additional income and therefore he compels his wife much against her wish to work underground in a mine. Thus you will see the man drinks because the woman goes underground to work with him and does not give him the happiness of home and family and the man forces her to work because he wants money to drink. Therefore, Sir, if this vicious circle is to be broken the employment of women underground should be prohibited. Again, Sir, the learned Law Member has failed to benefit himself by the repentance expressed by Sir Charles Innes in not prohibiting the employment of women at the beginning. The following passage which I shall read for the information of the House, will bear testimony to my statement.

'This question of the employment of women in mines has a very old history. As far back as the nineties, we were warned by the Secretary of State that it would be wise in the infancy of coal mining to prohibit at once the employment of women in mines. Unfortunately, we did not take the step then. The Secretary of State warned us that the longer we delayed that step the more difficult it would become, and that is exactly the position that we are now in.'

"If therefore we wish to benefit by the repentance expressed by Mr. Innes, I think we had better prohibit the employment of women even at the beginning."—

Sec. 25 : This Section is not in the Indian Act. When the Bill was considered by the Council, the Section was added on the motion of a Non-official member who said :—

"We have now by a previous clause prohibited the employment of women in mines

26. (1) If any question arises between the Inspector and the manager of any mine as to whether any person is a child, the question shall, in the absence of a certificate as to the age of such person granted in the prescribed manner, be referred by the Inspector for decision to a qualified medical practitioner.

Disputes as to age.

(2) Every certificate as to the age of a person which has been granted in the prescribed manner and any certificate granted by a qualified medical practitioner on a reference under Sub-section (1) shall, for the purposes of this Regulation, be conclusive evidence as to the age of the person to whom it relates.

27. For every mine there shall be kept in the prescribed form and place a register of all persons employed in the mine, of their hours of work, of their days of rest and of the nature of their respective employments.

Register of employees.

(e) for regulating the manner of ascertaining by examination or otherwise, the qualifications of managers of mines underground. In the Factory Regulation we have the provision that no woman should be employed before 6 o'clock in the morning or after 6 o'clock in the evening. I think it is a very wholesome provision that women should not be allowed to work in any place outside their homes after 6 o'clock in the evening and before 6 o'clock in the morning. Therefore I move the amendment.— L. C. P., dated 27-4-1927,

(1) The owner, agent or manager of a mine may, and shall, if called upon to do so by the Inspector, frame and submit to the Inspector a draft of such bye-laws, not being inconsistent with this Regulation or any Rules for the time being in force, for the control and guidance of the person acting in the management of, or employed in, the mine as such owner, agent or manager may deem necessary to prevent accidents and provide for the safety, convenience and discipline of the persons employed in the mine.

Bye-laws.

(2) If any such owner, agent or manager—

(a) fails to submit within two months a draft of bye-laws after being called upon to do so by the Inspector, or

Disobedience of orders.

37. Whoever contravenes any provision of this Regulation or of any Rule, or bye-law or of any order made thereunder for the contravention of which no penalty is hereinbefore provided shall be punishable with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees and, in the case of a continuing contravention, with a further fine which may extend to one hundred rupees for every day of which the offender is proved to have persisted in the contravention after the date of the first conviction.

Contravention of law with dangerous results.

38. (1) Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, whoever contravenes any provision of this Regulation or of any Rule, or bye-law or of any order made thereunder, shall be punishable, if such contravention results in loss of life, with imprisonment which may extend to one year, or with fine which may extend to two thousand rupees, or with both; or, if such contravention results in serious bodily injury, with imprisonment which may extend to six months or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees or with both; or, if such contravention otherwise causes injury or danger to workers or other persons in or about the mine, with imprisonment which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees or with both.

(2) Where a person having been convicted under this Section is again convicted thereunder, he shall be punishable with double the punishment provided by Sub-section (1).

(3) Any Court imposing, or confirming in appeal, revision or otherwise, a sentence of fine passed under this Section may, when passing judgment, order the whole or any part of the fine recovered to be paid as compensation to the person injured, or, in the case of his death, to his legal representative:

Provided that, if the fine is imposed in a case which is subject to appeal, no such payment shall be made before the period allowed for presenting the appeal has elapsed, or if an appeal has been presented, before the decision of the appeal.

Prosecution of owner, agent or manager.

39. No prosecution shall be instituted against any owner, agent or manager for any offence under this Regulation except at the instance of the District Magistrate or on complaint made by a person aggrieved by the offence.

Sec. 39: The words "or on complaint made by a person aggrieved by the offence" are not found in the Indian Act. They were added by the Council on the motion of a Non-official Member who said:—

"Prosecutions under this Regulation should not be left to the mere discretion of the District Magistrate, especially because the question is one between capital and labour. The capitalist or the owner of the mine will be an influential man and therefore the District Magistrate may not in some cases launch or order any prosecution, while the aggrieved party who is a labourer, may go without any remedy. In all such cases, to safeguard the interests of the labouring classes, it is highly necessary that the aggrieved party, the labourer himself or, if the labourer is killed his relative who is aggrieved, should be allowed to launch a prosecution."—

40. No Court shall take cognizance of any offence under this Regulation unless complaint thereof has been made within six months of the date on which the offence is alleged to have been committed.

Limitation of prosecution.

41. No Court inferior to that of a Magistrate of the First Class shall try any offence under this Regulation which is alleged to have been committed by any owner, agent or manager of a mine or any offence which is by this Regulation made punishable with imprisonment.

Cognizance of offences.

42. (1) If the Court trying any case instituted at the instance of the District Magistrate under this Regulation is of opinion that the case is one which should, in lieu of a prosecution, be referred to a commission, it may stay the criminal proceedings, and report the matter to the Government with a view to such reference being made.

Reference to commission in lieu of prosecution in certain cases.

(2) On receipt of a report under Sub-section (1), the Government may refer the case to a commission, or may direct the Court to proceed with the trial.

CHAPTER IX.

Miscellaneous.

43. The Government may, by a Notification in the Gazette, exempt any local area or any mine or group or class of mines or any part of a mine or any class of persons from the operation of all or any specified provisions of the Regulation:

Power to exempt from operation of Regulation.

Provided that no local area or mine or group or class of mines shall be exempted from the provisions of Section 24, unless it is also exempted from the operation of all the other provisions of this Regulation:

Provided, further, that any such exemption may, on the occurrence of any public emergency, be granted by the Government by an order in writing.

44. The Government may reverse or modify any order passed under this Regulation by an authority subject to their control.

Power to alter or rescind orders.

45. No suit, prosecution or other legal proceeding whatever shall lie against any person for anything which is in good faith done or intended to be done under this Regulation.

Saving.

46. (1) Whenever the rights in respect of the surface of any land are considered necessary for the prospecting for any mineral or the successful working of any mine or for any other purpose under this Regulation, the Government may, on payment of adequate compensation, acquire such right to such an extent and for such time as may be deemed fit by Government. A certificate in writing signed by the Chief Secretary to the Government shall be conclusive evidence that the acquisition of any right as stated therein is necessary, and no Civil Court shall question the right to make such acquisition.

Acquisition of land.

(2) The compensation due on acquisition may be fixed by agreement, or where no agreement is arrived at, by the decision of the District Court within whose local limits such land is situate on a reference made by an officer empowered by the Government in this behalf or on an application made by the party aggrieved. After such reference or application the provisions of the Land Acquisition Regulation shall, as far as may be, apply to the proceedings before the Courts.

(3) An appeal shall lie to the High Court from the decision of the District Court, and payment shall be made according to the final decision.

(4) The provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1100, and of the Travancore Limitation Regulation shall apply, as far as may be, to proceedings in the District Court and in the High Court.

Sec. 46 : This does not occur in the Indian Act.

REGULATION I OF 1104.

A Regulation further to amend the Abkari Regulation, IV of 1073, as amended by Regulation IV of 1074.

Passed by Her Highness the Maha Rani Regent of Travancore, under date the 12th February 1929, corresponding with the 1st Kumbham 1104, under Section 14 of Regulation II of 1097.

Whereas it is expedient to amend the Abkari Regulation, IV of 1073, as amended by Regulation IV of 1074, for the purposes hereinafter appearing; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Regn. I of 1104 : I. (1) Objects and Reasons.—"The object of the amendments proposed in this Bill is in general to effect a more far-reaching control of the use of intoxicating drugs, especially cocaine and allied preparations. The definition of "intoxicating drug" occurring in Section 3 (11) of the Regulation is sought to be amended by making specific mention of the coca plant as a material from which intoxicating substances may be prepared. As there may be cases in which the intoxicant nature of any preparation or substance may be disputed, an "explanation" is also proposed to be added to confer power on Government to declare any substance to be an intoxicating drug. The cultivation of the ganja and the coca plants is proposed to be absolutely prohibited, and clauses 3, 4, 5 and 6 of the Bill relate to this prohibition. Clause 7 of the Bill relates to an amendment of Section 67 of the Regulation. As Section 67 stands, medical practitioners may, without any of the restrictions of the Regulation, deal in medicines containing intoxicants for medicinal purposes. Even if it is considered necessary in any case to exercise control, as it may very often be, there is no legal provision for doing so either generally or in respect of specific persons or specific articles, except in the matter of sales which may be controlled under the latter part of Section 67. It is proposed therefore to take power for Government to control the traffic in intoxicants in fit cases even in respect of medical practitioners and the medical drugs dealt with by them. Occasion has been taken also to take power for Government to exempt any person or any article from the provisions of the Regulation in any fit case and to make it clear that medical practitioners may be permitted to hold possession of liquor also and prepare it into medicines."— S O & R.

(2) In introducing the Bill, the Official Member in charge said :—

"The central object of the Bill is to provide for a more effective control of the traffic in, and the use, possession and transport of, intoxicants. Of these, cocaine is the most harmful and it is intended by this Bill to suppress it as much as possible consistently with medicinal requirements and the convenience of the public. There are already some restrictions in this respect in the Regulation and Rules now in force. But the International Opium Convention laid down inter alia that very strict control of cocaine and other intoxicants should be provided for; and by the Treaty of Versailles the British Empire has agreed to give effect to the provisions of this Convention. One of these provisions is to control strictly the traffic in cocaine; and the main principle of the Bill is for such control. The definition of "intoxicating drugs" contained in Section 3 of this Regulation is at present as follows :—

"'Intoxicating drug' includes ganja, bhang, and every preparation and admixture of the same and every intoxicating drink or substance prepared from any part of the ganja plant, from grain, or from other material and not including in the term 'liquor' but does not include opium or anything included within the meaning of that word as defined in Regulation VI of 1063."

This definition is proposed to be amended by making specific reference to the produce of the coca plant as an intoxicating drug. Power is proposed also to be taken for Government to declare as intoxicants any substances the intoxicant nature of which may be contested.

The cultivation of the ganja plant is now strictly prohibited. It is proposed to prohibit also the cultivation of coca plant likewise. Even now the cultivation of the ganja plant and the coca plant is prohibited by the rules. But it is proposed to provide for the prohibition in the Regulation itself. And as a consequence, the amendments in clauses 4, 5 and 6 arise. They are self-evident and do not require explanation except perhaps in respect of clause 4." * * *

"Another amendment is in respect of Section 13, a clause of which is—

"A cultivator or owner of any plant from which an intoxicating drug is produced may sell without a license those portions of that plant from which the intoxicating drug is manufactured or produced to any person licensed under this Regulation to sell, manufacture or export intoxicating drugs:"

Now that the cultivation of the ganja and coca plants is to be prohibited this clause is not necessary, and it is proposed to be deleted.

Another amendment that is proposed is in regard to Section 67 of the Regulation. That Section as it stands gives absolute exemption in regard to medical drugs and druggists and medical practitioners and the like from all the restrictions of the Regulation. Section 67 reads thus :—

"Nothing in the foregoing provisions of this Regulation applies to the manufacture, possession, sale or supply of any bona fide medicated article for medicinal purposes by medical practitioners, chemists, druggists, apothecaries or keepers of dispensaries; but it shall be lawful for Our Government at any time by Notification to prohibit the sale of any such article within any defined local area, except under a license which shall be granted on payment of such fees and subject to such conditions as Our Government may deem fit to prescribe."

It will thus be seen that druggists for instance may deal in cocaine without any control whatsoever. It is felt that such absolute exemption is not necessary. The Hague authorities have also specially pointed out that even in such cases there must be some provision of law for exercising control. It is therefore proposed to amend Section 67 accordingly, and along with that it is desired also to make it clear, that when an intoxicating drug is given to a sick person by a doctor that sick person also is exempted in respect of the medicine dispensed to them. As the Law now stands a doctor who keeps a drug, say cocaine, and dispenses it to a sick person is exempt, but his patient cannot keep the drug because he is not exempt. It is therefore proposed to exempt such persons also from the operation of the Regulation and at the same time to keep some reserve power to the Government to control the possession and sale of intoxicants in all cases necessary. Provision is also made to grant exemptions, in cases necessary, to doctors and medical men keeping liquor and bhang and preparing them into medicines. I hope the Bill will be a non-controversial one and I commend it to the acceptance of the House."—

PROBATE AND ADMINISTRATION

A Regulation to provide for the Grant of Probate of Wills and Letters of Administration to the estates of deceased persons

Passed by Her Highness The Maha Rani Regent of Travancore, under date the 25th Kumbhom 1105, corresponding with the 8th March 1930, under Section 14 of Regulation II of 1097.

Preamble. Whereas it is expedient to provide for the grant of probate of wills and letters of administration to the estates of deceased persons; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Regn. II of 1105: I. (1) Objects and Reasons. "As the law of Travancore stands at present, there is no means of conferring upon anybody a complete and conclusive title as the representative of the estate of a deceased person, Not that no one can claim any right as the representative of a deceased person or that he cannot get a declaration of his representative capacity, but such recognition or declaration though it may be binding on the parties to the litigation in which he got it is not binding against the whole world or other people and is liable to be impeached at the instance of other parties. Since the disruption of the joint family system and the rules of descent in separate shares introduced by the recent social legislation affecting the Nayars, Ezhavas and Nanjinad Vellalas, the bulk of the people of Travancore, generally speaking, can claim individually and separately to the estate of a deceased ancestor. The necessity, therefore, of some person being able to administer the estate of a deceased without giving rise to trouble and litigation and creating doubtful titles has become increasingly great. The heirs may be very numerous. Their interests may differ in degree, some of them may be minors or otherwise incapacitated, others may be residing at a distance; the titles of some may be disputed; the settlement of claims against the estate may thus be a matter of endless complication; the making of a satisfactory title to any portion of it, which it may be necessary to sell, may be impossible. Much the same will be the case even when a deceased person has left a will, unless it be possible to prove a title under the will in such a way that it may be binding as against the whole world. The ordinary device of meeting the situation adopted in other countries is to empower a principal Civil Court to grant to some proper person letters of administration to the estate of a deceased individual if he died intestate or a probate if he died leaving a will appointing executors, the person to whom the grant of the letters of administration or the probate was made being conclusively constituted thereby the representative of the deceased, with power to deal with the estate in such a complete and indubitable manner as the persons who deal with him are absolutely protected and can claim absolute title, and no trouble or litigation or dispute of title will thereafter arise on the ground of the title of the representative being open to question. It is to provide for the grant of such probate and letters of administration that this Bill is designed.

"2. In the case of wills, further, under the Travancore Wills Regulation, VI of 1074, a law of probate has been contemplated. In order that a will may be operative under that Regulation, it must be either registered or deposited in a registry as provided for by the Travancore Registration Regulation, II of 1087, or it must be admitted to probate, that is to say, proved according to the law for the grant of probates. It has been recently held by a Full Bench of the Travancore High Court (in C. M. Appeal No. 148 of 1101) that a will that has not been either registered or deposited as mentioned above is absolutely inoperative for want of a law of probate in Travancore. This has made it all the more necessary to enact a law of probate. Again, a law of probate and administration has been contemplated by our Limitation law also. (See Article 33 of the First Schedule to the Travancore Limitation Regulation, VI of 1100).

"3. It is probably necessary to refer to the effect of the Succession Certificate Regulation, IX of 1090, in this connection. The purpose and object of that Regulation though somewhat allied are considerably different from those of the present Bill. First of all, the grant of a certificate under that Regulation applies only to the debts (and securities) due to a deceased person and not to all his property; and secondly, though a debtor who pays the debt to a certificate-holder as representing the deceased creditor is absolutely protected against claims made by any body else in respect of the same debt, and, to that extent, the certificate is a conclusive title to represent the deceased, yet it is not conclusive as to the title to the property represented by the debt, nor is it an authority to administer the entire estate of the deceased or even any portion of it. A probate or letters of administration stand on a different and superior footing. And it is further expressly provided that when they conflict with a succession certificate, the latter must be deemed to have been superseded by the former.

"4. Although it is desirable to clothe a person with a conclusive title as the representative of a deceased individual by granting him probate or letters of administration; yet it may be hard to insist on it as essential in every case (as is done in some countries), inasmuch as it may tend to impose on a multitude of poor and ignorant people, even in cases where there is no difficulty or dispute, an unnecessary amount of trouble and expense. It is not therefore proposed by this Bill to make it compulsory that probate or letters of administration must necessarily be obtained to establish title to any property of a deceased person, as is laid down by the Indian Succession Act, 1925, Sections 212 and 213.

"5. This Bill is drawn closely on the lines of the law of probate and administration as it prevails in British India as regards Hindus and Mahomedans, generally. This law was contained in the Probate and Administration Act, 1881, which, with certain other allied enactments, has now been consolidated in the Indian Succession Act, 1925. The Bill follows also the lines of the Mysore Probate and Administration Regulation, 1914, and the Cochin Probate and Administration Regulation, 1096, which too are drawn closely on the lines of the enactment in British India.

"6. In regard to the court fees payable for the grant of a probate or letters of administration, the law in British India has been adopted in this Bill, according to which no fee whatever is payable if the value of the property in respect of which the grant of probate or letters of administration is made is Rs. 1,000 or less. Beyond that, up to a value of Rs. 10,000, two per cent. of the value, and beyond that, two and one-half per cent. up to a value of Rs. 50,000, and beyond that, a fee of three per cent. has been prescribed in the Bill, as in British India. It is also expressly provided that if after the grant of a succession certificate in respect of any property included in an estate, a grant of probate or letters of administration is made in respect of the same estate, the fee payable in respect of the latter grant shall be reduced by the amount of the fee paid in respect of the former grant. As said above, it is not compulsory that every one that wants to establish a right derived by succession from a deceased person should take advantage of the proposed law. But to those who would avail themselves of it, the resulting gain in quieting titles and obviating litigation as to the ownership of property cannot be overrated. It is only such people that have to pay the fee. They would thus voluntarily, and usefully, pay to the public treasury a part of the money which they now have to spend perhaps uselessly, in litigation."—

(2) In Introducing the Bill, the Official Member in charge said :—

"The Bill as its title would indicate is intended to provide for the grant of probate of wills and letters of administration to the estates of deceased persons. The title and the Bill contain certain technical expressions not in vogue in Travancore and not perhaps readily understood here although in other countries, which have had a probate and administration law for long, they might be readily understood. Of these expressions, I think, I may at the very outset explain what probate of wills and letters of administration mean. I take it that the word "will" does not require explanation. It, of course, means the legal declaration of the intentions of the testator, i. e., the person executing the will, with regard to his property which he desires to carry into effect after his death. But a will has to be proved, so that its purport may be carried out or enforced against those who would dispute it, and this brings us to the word "probate of a will."

"Probate" used as a noun literally means "proof." Both the words "probate" and "proof" are derived from the same root 'probare' whose past participle is 'probatus'. Technically probate means the official proof of a will, to put it in a brief way. To go into a little more detail 'probate' means the determination of the Court before which the will is produced and propounded that the paper, purporting to be a will, is the will and testament of the deceased and its admission thereupon to record as such. It determines or implies that, the instrument is genuine and regular in form and execution and that the testator was competent to execute the will. Of course, a will may, if registered, be proved in Travancore even now as between party and party in a Court of Law. But that proof will avail only as between themselves and it has to be proved, again if another party contests it. But in the case of the proof called probate the proof is conclusive and is binding on the whole world. If the will is however an unregistered one, no proof whatever of the will is allowed by law owing to the fact that there is no probate law now in Travancore. That has been ruled recently by a Full Bench of the High Court. In this Bill, as in corresponding Statutes elsewhere, the word "probate" means not exactly the proof of the will but a copy of the will so proved and authenticated by the Court with its seal together with the express grant of legal authority to carry out the provisions of the will. Probate is thus an instrument of Court and is granted to an executor appointed under the will.

I would come next to the term "letters of administration." Letters of administration also mean an instrument of Court, being the written instrument granted by a Court authorising the grantee, who is called the administrator, to administer the goods and estates of a deceased person. Members may know what the administration of the estate of a deceased person means. It means, generally speaking, the management and disposal under legal authority, of the estate of a deceased person whether by the executor or administrator, the correct expression for the management and disposal by the executor being strictly "execution", which expression however is not now generally used. Those who have long been under the Marumakkathayam system or the joint family system may not readily appreciate what is involved in the administration of an estate. For, in a Tarwad or joint family, there is strictly no estate to be administrated. The Tarwad or family is a corporation and it never dies. The Tarwad or family property belongs to the corporation. The Karanavan or Kartha, the manager or the man in possession may die individually but legally, and in regard to the estate, the Karanavan never dies—just in the same way as a king never dies. What is proclaimed on the death of the king "The king is dead, long live the king" may be appositely described of the Karanavan of the Tarwad and the Kartha of a family. Thus, to say that the 'Karanavan is dead, long live the Karanavan' will be quite correct legally. In such a condition of things, the succeeding man, the Karanavan or Kartha, simply steps into the shoes of the deceased man and represents the corporation and he has legal authority to manage the entire family property. He is the man to be legally in possession of the properties. He is the man legally bound to pay the maintenance to those entitled to it, to discharge debts, to collect debts, to redeem properties, to surrender properties, to defend suits, to prosecute suits and so on. But imagine for a moment a man dying leaving a few children and that he is one whose property would in law descend to the children in equal or in varying shares, one who is able to dispose of the property by will as is the case with almost every community in Travancore now. Such a man dies leaving an estate and nobody can straightaway say 'I represent the estate'. There are many people who would claim rights to the estate and in different degrees and kinds. There may be sons and daughters. He may have left a will and there may be legatees. There may be creditors and so on. All of them have rights in the estate. The variations in rights may be caused also by the difference in law applicable to the man who leaves the estate. It may differ amongst Nayars, Christians, Mahomedans, Vellalas and Ezhavas. After the recent social legislations affecting the Nayars, Ezhavas and Vellalas, the members of almost every community in Travancore leave an estate when they die, and it has to be taken and divided by different persons and ūtilised by different men for different purposes. Who will do all these or cause all these things to be done? Who has the legal authority to take charge of the estate and carry out all the purposes to which it is subject? One child by himself, even the eldest, cannot do it. For what is his special right or authority over others? And then there may be legatees and there may be creditors and they may not all agree as to the disposal of the estates. Who then will represent the estate and who is the man that will have legal authority to take charge of and to manage the estate if any debts have to be paid? Which of the children will pay and how will he pay out of the estate? It may be that all the children are not available to dispose the estate. Some may be in different parts, some may be minors, some may be perverse and may not agree and some may dishonestly disagree. But debts have to be paid and probably a property has to be sold for it. Even a lakh of rupees worth of property, it is well known, will be lost entirely if even 10,000 rupees debts cannot be paid promptly. But who will sell the property and pay off the debts? Then again, who will distribute the property among the heirs and legatees or meet other charges on the estate? Who will give maintenance to those entitled? Who has the right to collect debts, to prosecute suits and defend suits? All these acts as said already form part of the administration of the estate. When there are many heirs and many demands, somebody must be clothed with legal authority to do all these, and this management and disposal of the estate by him is called the administration of the estate. The letters of administration grant a legal and formal authority to the grantee, the administrator, to so administer the estate, the authority being one that will not be allowed to be questioned and one that will prevail against all the heirs and legatees and in fact against the whole world.

Now if members will kindly turn to Chapter I of the Bill and read the definitions they may readily follow what is stated.

It is the executor under a will that gets the probate, and the man who gets the letters of administration is the administrator.

These executors and administrators are the unquestionable representatives of the deceased and they stand in the shoes of the deceased. The estate vests in them and they can do all that is necessary for the estate in the same way as would have been done by the deceased man himself. Once such a representative has been created none can say that anybody else is the representative. Clause 4 and others provide for this. I am not going to trouble the House by reading all the clauses. But one or two may be read.

Thus then, the central object of the Bill is to provide for the creation of an unquestionable representative of a deceased's estate, a representative whose title has to be accepted by every one, the heirs, the legatees and all, one who has got ample powers but one who acts more or less under the control of the Court, one with whom any person may deal with safety, without any fear of his representative character being ever called into question, one who could sell properties, if need be, to pay off debts, one who could provide for the maintenance of Stridhanam and one who could pay legacies and distribute the assets, and so on. Such a power for the creation of a legal representative exists in other countries. It existed very long ago in England, it having been exercised by the Ecclesiastical Courts. But by the passing of the Probate Acts of 1857 and 1858 the powers came to be exercised by the King's Court in England. Law has been enacted for the purpose in British India long ago applying to various communities, and also in Mysore in the year 1914, and in Cochin in the year 1921. And this Bill is framed on the lines of the law in British India, Mysore and Cochin.

But it may be asked, what is the good in creating a representative especially one whose title is conclusive, one whose title to deal with the property is unquestionable and will be accepted by the whole world including all the Courts of law. The ordinary rule, of course, is that a declaration of any title obtained from a Court is binding only as between the parties to that action but not as against others. But a grant of probate or letters of adminstration confer on the grantee a title that is complete and conclusive, as against the whole world, as the representative of the estate of the deceased. Members may readily see the advantages of clothing any person with such an unquestionable title if they will only imagine the difficulties in administering an estate. Take for example the simple case of an estate having to pay a debt. The estate may be worth a lakh of rupees and debt may be but only rupees ten thousand, and some property has to be alienated for the purpose of paying the debts. If the debt is not paid the whole estate may be sold by the Court at the instance of the creditors. So somebody must sell some portion of the estate. Can one son by himself do it? There may be others and minor sons too, some living at a distance, sons who are not in amicable terms with the others and then there may be legatees; there may be too some whose claim to the estate, either as son or as legatees, may be disputed. In such circumstances, if one or more of these persons sell or mortgage a portion of the property, who will be there to purchase it? For, an unqustionably legal title cannot be conveyed. And if anybody comes forward to purchase, he will not offer a fair price; for he must provide for possible litigation about the title he gets. But if there is an unquestionable representative any person can safely deal with such representative. The representative can readily sell or mortgage a reasonable portion of the estate and pay the debt, and the purchaser or mortgagee gets an unimpeachable title and so he readily offers a fair price. So also in regard to the other demands on the estate, such as leggacies, shares, maintenance charges, etc. When there is an unchallengable representative, he can give all the legacies, he can distribute the shares, he can provide for the maintenance charges, he can prosecute suits, he can collect debts and so on. Not only so ; he is bound to do all these and the Bill provides that he should do all these more or less under the control and supervision of the Court. There will be no necessity for any unnecessary litigation. There will be absolutely no trouble and difficulty for anybody. And even helpless women and children will be quite safe.

In other countries where there is a probate and administration law it is especially provided that no right to the estate of the deceased persons can be established in a Court of law against anybody, or in any circumstance, unless probate or letters of administration have been granted in respect of the estate. In other words, if ever a question relating to the estate or any title derived from the estate goes to a Court, there must be a probate or letters of administration ; else the Court will not hear the claim. It is felt that to make a similar provision here may be hard on the people. It may be desirable to provide a machinery for clothing a person, if anybody wants it, with a complete and conclusive title as the representative of an estate. But it may be hard to insist on it as a condition precedent in every case inasmuch as it may tend to impose on a multitude of poor and ignorant people, even in cases where there is no difficulty or dispute, an unnecessary amount of trouble and expense. It is therefore not made compulsory in this Bill that every one who wants to establish a right to any part of a deceased's estate should resort to this proposed law and obtain a grant of probate or administration. But if once a grant is obtained, the grantee gets a complete and conclusive title and the advantages of having such an unquestionable representative of a deceased man's estate have been adverted to. To those therefore who would take advantage of the provisions of this proposed law, the resulting benefits in quieting title and obviating litigation cannot be exaggerated ; and it is hoped that as the law begins to be understood and appreciated by the people they will take largely to its provisions.

It is proposed to charge a small fee for the grant of probate and letters of administration in the same way as in the case of the succession certificates. I believe it will not be felt to be too much having regard to the advantages to be derived by the grant of probate and letters of administration. Probate is to be granted by the District Court. Provision is made here for the grant being made by others called delegates ; and they will exercise this power only in cases where there is not much controversy. In cases of controversy and dispute the District Court will inquire and there will be a regular appeal therefrom. Probably it may be urged that there is no necessity for this legislation so long as there is already provision for the grant of succession certificates. I have explained it fully in the statement of objects and reasons and I believe I need not read it over now. The House may be aware that if a man wants to sue for a debt due to his deceased father or other relative of whom he claims to be the representative, such person will have to obtain succession certificate before he files the suit. It may be asked, which will prevail as between a succession certificate and a probate or letters of administration. In such cases it is provided that the probate should prevail, and the reason is that the succession certificate is granted only on a summary inquiry. It has also been provided that in cases where probate or letters of administration have been obtained there is no necessity for getting a succession certificate and as said just now, when the succession certificate and the probate or letters of administration conflict with each other the latter should prevail. At present the fee charged for a succession certificate is 1½% at the outset and 2% for extension of the certificate. Under this Bill, no fee whatever will be charged for probates and letters of administration relating to estates worth rupees one thousand or less. In other cases a fee of 2½% is proposed to be charged and a graded scale of higher fees has also been provided for, for larger estates. I do not think the fee will be considered too much in the light of the advantages to be derived by the grant of probate and letters of administration. These will avoid a lot of trouble and unnecessary and useless litigation and one should not grudge to pay a little for such advantages. The measure is a new one in Travancore but is a very useful one, and I hope that it will commend itself to the House."— L. C. P., dated 6-12-1927.

II. It was introduced in the Council and referred to a Select Committee on 6-12-1927 (L. C. P. Vol. XII, Pp. 380-390). The Committee's Report was published on 3-4-1928. It was presented to, and considered by, the Council on 16-4-1928 (L. C. P., Vol. XII, Pp. 461-470). The Bill was finally read and passed on 21-1-1930.

Sec. 3: Specific legacy.—Section 142 of the Indian Succession Act defines the expression thus:—"Where a testator bequeaths to any person a specified part of his property, which is distinguished from all other parts of his property, the legacy is said to be specific." This is followed by a number of illustrations.

Probate. "Probate" means the copy of a will certified under the seal of a Court of competent jurisdiction with a grant of administration to the estate of the testator:

(i) A has left no will. He has died intestate in respect of the whole of his property.

(ii) A has left a will, whereby he has appointed B his executor; but the will contains no other provisions. A has died intestate in respect of the distribution of his property.

(iii) A has bequeathed his whole property for an illegal purpose. A has died intestate in respect of the distribution of his property.

(iv) A has bequeathed 1,000 rupees to B and 1,000 rupees to the eldest son of C, and has made no other bequest; and has died leaving the sum of 2,000 rupees and no other property. C died before A without having ever had a son. A has died intestate in respect of the distribution of 1,000 rupees.

Demonstrative legacy.—Section 150 of the Indian Act defines the expression thus:—"Where a testator bequeaths a certain sum of money, or a certain quantity of any other commodity, and refers to a particular fund or stock so as to constitute the same the primary fund or stock out of which payment is to be made, the legacy is said to be demonstrative.

Explanation.—The distinction between a specific legacy and a demonstrative legacy consists in this, that—where specified property is given to the legatee, the legacy is specific: where the legacy is directed to be paid out of specified property, it is demonstrative." This definition is also followed by illustrations.

General powers of administration.

94. An executor or administrator may, in addition to, and not in derogation of, any other powers of expenditure lawfully exercisable by him, incur expenditure—

103. The executor or administrator shall collect, with reasonable diligence, the property of the deceased and the debts that were due to him at the time of his death.

Expenses to be paid before all debts.

104. Funeral expenses to a reasonable amount, according to the degree and quality of the deceased and death-bed charges including fees for medical attendance and board and lodging for one month previous to his death, shall be paid before all debts.

Expenses to be paid next after such expenses.

105. The expenses of obtaining probate or letters of administration, including the costs incurred for or in respect of any judicial proceedings that may be necessary for administering the estate, shall be paid next after the funeral expenses and death-bed charges.

108. Debts of every description must be paid before any legacy.

Debts to be paid before legacies.

109. If the estate of the deceased is subject to any contingent liabilities, an executor or administrator is not bound to pay any legacy without a sufficient indemnity to meet the liabilities whenever they may become due.

Executor or administrator not bound to pay legacies without indemnity.

110. If the assets, after payment of debts, necessary expenses and specific legacies, are not sufficient to pay all the general legacies in full, the latter shall abate or be diminished in equal proportions; and, in the absence of any direction to the contrary in the will, the executor has no right to pay one legatee in preference to another, nor to retain any money on account of a legacy to himself or to any person for whom he is a trustee.

Abatement of general legacies.

111. When there is a specific legacy, and the assets are sufficient for the payment of debts and necessary expenses, the thing specified must be delivered to the legatee without any abatement.

Non-abatement of specific legacy when assets sufficient to pay debts.

112. Where there is a demonstrative legacy, and the assets are sufficient for the payment of debts and necessary expenses, the legatee has a preferential claim for payment of his legacy out of the fund from which the legacy is directed to be paid until such fund is exhausted, and if, after the fund is exhausted, part of the legacy still remains unpaid, he is entitled to rank for the remainder against the general assets as for a legacy of the amount of such unpaid remainder.

CHAPTER IX.

Of Assent to a Legacy by Executor or Administrator.

Assent necessary to complete legatee's title.

115. The assent of the executor or administrator is necessary to complete a legatee's title to his legacy.

Illustrations.

(a) A, by his will, bequeathes to B his Government paper, which is in deposit with the Imperial Bank of India. The Bank has no authority to deliver the securities nor B a right to take possession of them, without the assent of the executor or administrator.

(b) A, by his will, has bequeathed to C his house in Trivandrum in the tenancy of B. C is not entitled to receive the rents without the assent of the executor or administrator.

Effect of executor's assent to specific legacy.

116. The assent of the executor or administrator to a specific bequest shall be sufficient to divest his interest as executor or administrator therein and to transfer the subject of the bequest to the legatee, unless the nature or the circumstances of the property require that it shall be transferred in a particular way.

This assent may be verbal, and it may be either express or implied from the conduct of the executor or administrator.

Illustrations.

(a) A horse is bequeathed. The executor requests the legatee to dispose of it, or a third party proposes to purchase the horse from the executor, and he directs him to apply to the legatees. Assent to the legacy is implied.

(b) The interest of a fund is directed by the will to be applied for the maintenance of the legatee during his minority. The executor commences so to apply it. This is an assent to the whole of the bequest.

(c) A bequest is made of a fund to A, and after him to B. The executor pays the interest of the fund to A. This is an implied assent to the bequest to B.

(d) Executors die after paying all the debts of the testator but before satisfaction of specific legacies. Assent to the legacies may be presumed.

(e) A person to whom a specific article has been bequeathed takes possession of it and retains it without any objection on the part of the executor. His assent may be presumed.

Conditional assent.

117. The assent of an executor or administrator to a legacy may be conditional, and if the condition is one which he has a right to enforce, and it is not performed, there is no assent.

Illustrations.

(a) A bequeathes to B his lands of Quilon which at the date of the will, and at the death of A, were subject to a mortgage for 10,000 rupees. The executor assents to the bequest on condition that B shall within a limited time pay the amount due on the mortgage at the testator's death. The amount is not paid. There is no assent.

(b) The executor assents to a bequest on condition that the legatee shall pay him a sum of money. The payment is not made. The assent is nevertheless valid.

Assent of executor to his own legacy.

118. When the executor or administrator is a legatee, his assent to his own legacy is necessary to complete his title to it, in the same way as it is required when the bequest is to another person, and his assent may in like manner be express or implied.

Implied assent.

Assent shall be implied if in his manner of administering the property he does any act which is referable to his character of legatee and is not referable to his character of executor or administrator.

Illustration.

An executor takes the rent of a house or the interest of Government securities bequeathed to him, and applies it to his own use. This is assent.

Effect of executor's assent.

119. The assent of the executor or administrator to a legacy gives effect to it from the death of the testator.

Illustrations.

(a) A legatee sells his legacy before it is assented to by the executor. The executor's subsequent assent operates for the benefit of the purchaser, and completes his title to the legacy.

(b) A bequeathes 1,000 rupees to B with interest from his death. The executor does not assent to this legacy until the expiration of a year from A's death. B is entitled to interest from the death of A.

120. An executor or administrator is not bound to pay or deliver any legacy until the expiration of one year from the testator's death.

Executor when to deliver legacies.

Illustration.

A by his will directs his legacies to be paid within six months after his death. The executor is not bound to pay them before the expiration of a year.

CHAPTER X.

Of the Payment and Apportionment of Annuities.

121. Where an annuity is given by the will, and no time is fixed for its commencement, it shall commence from the testator's death, and the first payment shall be made at the expiration of a year next after that event.

Commencement of annuity when no time fixed by will.

122. Where there is a direction that the annuity shall be paid quarterly or monthly, the first payment shall be due at the end of the first quarter or first month, as the case may be, after the testator's death, and shall, if the executor or administrator thinks fit, be paid when due; but the executor or administrator shall not be bound to pay it till the end of the year

When annuity, to be paid quarterly or monthly, first falls due.

123. Where there is a direction that the first payment of an annuity shall be made within one month or other division of time from the death of the testator, or on a day certain, the successive payments are to be made on the anniversary of the earliest day on which the will authorises the first payment to be made; and, if the annuitant dies in the interval between the times of payment, an apportioned share of the annuity shall be paid to his representative.

Dates of successive payments, when first payment directed to be made within given time, or on day certain.

---

CHAPTER XI.

Of the Investment of Funds to provide for Legacies.

124. Where a legacy, not being a specific legacy, is given for life, the sum bequeathed shall at the end of the year be invested in such securities as the High Court may by any general rule authorise or direct, and the proceeds thereof shall be paid to the legatee as the same shall accrue due.

Investment of sum bequeathed where legacy, not specific, given for life.

125. Where a general legacy is given to be paid at a future time, the executor or administrator shall invest a sum sufficient to meet it in securities of the kind mentioned in the last preceding Section.

Investment of general legacy, to be paid at future time.

The intermediate interest shall form part of the residue of the testator's estate.

126. Where an annuity is given and no fund is charged with its payment or appropriated by the will to answer it, a sum sufficient to produce the annuity shall be invested for that purpose in such securities as the High Court may by general rule authorise or direct.

Procedure when no fund charged with or appropriated to annuity.

127. Where a bequest is contingent, the executor or administrator is not bound to invest the amount of the legacy, but may transfer the whole residue of the estate to the residuary legatee (if any) on his giving sufficient security for the payment of the legacy if it shall become due.

Transfer to residuary legatee of contingent bequest.

128. Where the testator has bequeathed the residue of his estate to a person for life with a direction that it shall be invested in certain specified securities, so much of the estate as is not at the time of his death invested in securities of the specified kind shall be converted into money and invested in such securities.

Investment of residue bequeathed for life with direction to invest in specified securities.

129. Such conversion and investment as are contemplated by the last preceding Section shall be made at such times and in such manner as the executor or administrator thinks fit; and, until such conversion and investment are completed, the person who would be for the time being entitled to the income of the fund when so invested shall receive interest at the rate of six per cent per annum upon the market value (to be computed as at the date of the testator's death) of such part of the fund as has not been so invested.

Time and manner of conversion and investment.

130. Where, by the terms of a bequest, the legatee is entitled to the immediate payment or possession of the money or thing bequeathed, but is a minor, and there is no direction in the will to pay it to any person on his behalf, the executor or administrator shall pay or deliver the same into the Court of the District

CHAPTER XII.

Of the Produce and Interest of Legacies.

131. The legatee of a specific legacy is entitled to the clear produce thereof, if any, from the testator's death.

Legatee's title to produce of specific legacy.

Exception.—A specific bequest, contingent in its terms, does not comprise the produce of the legacy between the death of the testator and the vesting of the legacy. The clear produce of it forms part of the residue of the testator's estate.

Illustrations.

(a) A bequeaths his flock of sheep to B. Between the death of A and delivery by his executor the sheep are shorn, or some of the ewes produce lambs. The wool and lambs are property of B.

(b) A bequeathes his Government of India securities to B, but postpones the delivery of them till the death of C. The interest which falls due between the death of A and the death of C belongs to B, and must, unless he is a minor, be paid to him as it is received.

(c) The testator bequeathes all his four per cent. Government of India promissory notes to A when he shall complete the age of 18. A, if he completes that age, is entitled to receive the notes, but the interest which accrues in respect of them between the testator's death and A's completing 18, forms part of the residue.

132. The legatee under a general residuary bequest is entitled to the produce of the residuary fund from the testator's death.

Residuary legatee's title to produce of residuary fund.

Exception.—A general residuary bequest contingent in its terms does not comprise the income which may accrue upon the fund bequeathed between the death of the testator and the vesting of the legacy. Such income goes as undisposed of.

Illustrations.

(a) The testator bequeathes the residue of his property to A, a minor, to be paid to him when he shall complete the age of 18. The income from the testator's death belongs to A.

(b) The testator bequeathes the residue of his property to A when he shall complete the age of 18. A, if he completes that age, is entitled to receive the residue. The income which has accrued in respect of it since the testator's death goes as undisposed of.

133. When no time has been fixed for the payment of a general legacy, interest begins to run from the expiration of one year from the testator's death.

Interest when no time fixed for payment of general legacy.

Exception.—(1) Where the legacy is bequeathed in satisfaction of a debt, interest runs from the death of the testator.

(2) Where the testator was a parent or a more remote ancestor of the legatee, or has put himself in the place of a parent of the legatee, the legacy shall bear interest from the death of the testator.

(3) Where a sum is bequeathed to a minor with a direction to pay for his maintenance out of it, interest is payable from the death of the testator.

134. Where a time has been fixed for the payment of a general legacy, interest begins to run from the time so fixed. The interest up to such time forms part of the residue of the testator's estate.

Interest when time fixed.

Exception.—Where the testator was a parent or a remote ancestor of the legatee, or has put himself in the place of a parent of the legatee and the legatee is a minor, the legacy shall bear interest from the death of the testator, unless a specific sum is given by the will for maintenance, or unless the will contains a direction to the contrary.

135. The rate of interest shall be six per cent. per annum.

Rate of interest.

136. No interest is payable on the arrears of an annuity within the first year from the death of the testator, although a period earlier than the expiration of that year may have been fixed by the will for making the first payment of the annuity.

No interest on arrears of annuity within first year after testator's death.

137. Where a sum of money is directed to be invested to produce an annuity, interest is payable on it from the death of the testator.

Interest on sum to be invested to produce annuity.

CHAPTER XIII.

Of the Refunding of Legacies.

138. When an executor or administrator has paid a legacy under the order of a Court, he is entitled to call upon the legatee to refund in the event of the assets proving insufficient to pay all the legacies.

Refund of legacy paid under Judge's order.

139. When an executor or administrator has voluntarily paid a legacy, he cannot call upon a legatee to refund in the event of the assets proving insufficient to pay all the legacies.

No refund if paid voluntarily.

140. (1) When the time prescribed by the will for the performance of a condition has elapsed, without the condition having been performed, and the executor or administrator has thereupon, without fraud, distributed the assets, in such case, if further time has, under Sub-section (2), been allowed for the performance of the conditions, and the condition has been performed accordingly, the legacy cannot be claimed from the executor or administrator, but those to whom he has paid it are liable to refund the amount.

Refund when legacy becomes due on performance of condition within further time allowed.

(2) Where the will requires an act to be performed by the legatee within a specified time, either as a condition to be fulfilled before the legacy is enjoyed, or as a condition upon the non-fulfilment of which the subject-matter of the bequest is to go over to another person, or the bequest is to cease to have effect, the act must be performed within the time specified unless the performance of it be prevented by fraud, in which case such further time shall be allowed as is requisite to make up for the delay caused by such fraud.

141. When the executor or administrator has paid away the assets in legacies, and he is afterwards obliged to discharge a debt of which he had no previous notice, he is entitled to call upon each legatee to refund in proportion.

When each legatee compellable to refund in proportion.

Sec. 140: Section 358 of the Indian Act does not contain Sub-section (2).

142. Where an executor or administrator has given such notices as the High Court may, by any general rule, prescribe, for creditors and others to send in to him their claims against the estate of the deceased, he shall, at the expiration of the time therein named for sending in claims, be at liberty to distribute the assets, or any part thereof, in discharge of such lawful claims as he knows of, and shall not be liable for the assets so distributed to any person of whose claim he shall not have had notice at the time of such distribution :

Distribution of assets.

Provided that nothing herein contained shall prejudice the right of any creditor or claimant to follow the assets, or any part thereof, in the hands of the persons who may have received the same respectively.

Creditor may follow assets.

143. A creditor who has not received payment of his debt may call upon a legatee who has received payment of his legacy to refund, whether the assets of the testator's estate were or were not sufficient at the time of his death to pay both debts and legacies and whether the payment of the legacy by the executor or administrator was voluntary or not.

Creditor may call upon legatee to refund.

144. If the assets were sufficient to satisfy all the legacies at the time of the testator's death, a legatee who has not received payment of his legacy, or who has been compelled to refund, under the last preceding Section, cannot oblige one who has received payment in full to refund, whether the legacy were paid to him with or without suit, although the assets have subsequently become deficient by the wasting of the executor.

When legatee, not satisfied or compelled to refund under Section 143, cannot oblige one paid in full to refund.

145. If the assets were not sufficient to satisfy all the legacies at the time of the testator's death, a legatee who has not received payment of his legacy must, before he can call upon a satisfied legatee to refund, first proceed against the executor or administrator if he is solvent; but if the executor or administrator is insolvent or not liable to pay, the unsatisfied legatee can oblige each satisfied legatee to refund in proportion.

When unsatisfied legatee must first proceed against executor, if solvent.

146. The refunding of one legatee to another shall not exceed the sum by which the satisfied legacy ought to have been reduced if the estate had been properly administered.

Limit to refunding of one legatee to another.

Illustration.

A has bequeathed 240 rupees to B, 480 rupees to C, and 720 rupees to D. The assets are only 1,200 rupees and if properly administered would give 200 rupees to B, 400 rupees to C, and 600 rupees to D. C and D have been paid their legacies in full, leaving nothing to B. B can oblige C to refund 80 rupees and D to refund 120 rupees.

147. The refunding shall, in all cases, be without interest.

Refunding to be without interest.

148. The surplus or residue of the deceased's property after payment of debts and legacies shall be paid to the residuary legatee when any has been appointed by the will.

Residue after usual payments to be paid to residuary legatee.

149. Where a person not having his domicile in Travancore has died leaving assets both in Travancore and in the country in which he had his domicile at the time of his death,

Transfer of assets from Trvancore to executor or administrator in country of domicile for distribution.

and there has been a grant of probate or letters of administration in Travancore with respect to the assets there and a grant of administration in the country of domicile with respect to the assets in that country, the executor or administrator, as the case may be, in Travancore after having given such notices as are mentioned in Section 142 and after having discharged, at the expiration of the time therein named, such lawful claims as he knows of, may, instead of himself destributing any surplus or residue of the deceased's property to persons residing out of Travancore who are entitled thereto, transfer, with the consent of the executor or administrator, as the case may be, in the country of domicile, the surplus or residue to him for distribution to those persons.

Illustrations.

(a) The executor pays out of the estate an unfounded claim. He is liable to make good the loss caused by the payment.

(b) The deceased had a valuable lease renewable by notice, which the executor neglects to give at the proper time. The executor is liable to make good the loss.

Probate and administration to be granted only under this Regulation.

Sec. 153: This Section does not occur in the Indian Act. Sub-section (2) was added by the Council, on the motion of a Non-official Member who said :—"In probate proceedings and in proceedings in relation to letters of administration it is often a question whether the executor and the persons who may enter the caveat with respect to the will, are liable personally or the estate should be rendered liable for the costs in connection with the proceedings. That is often a question that crops up before the Court, but unfortunately the British Indian Act itself does not provide anything for that. Again, the question of costs has been noticed by the Bombay High Court where their Lordships observed that as it stands no power is vested in a Court to award costs on anything like the higher scale and such proceedings are dealt with as miscellaneous case for the purpose of costs.

In England they have got graduated scales with respect to the costs. It is clear that if the case is such as the Court would deem it necessary to order the payment of costs from the estate of the deceased, the Court should have power in that behalf. If the Court finds that one of the parties before the Court is to be blamed in connection with the protraction of the proceedings or the very origination of the proceedings, then the Court may make him personally liable for the costs incurred by the opposite side. The costs as between party and party and party and pleader may be provided for by the Court for the purposes of this Regulation. Therefore I suggest that the High Court may be allowed to regulate the costs.

* * * *

"The identical section in the British Indian Act has been the subject of comment. In the matter of suits, there is a basis to calculate the costs. That is, the institution fee would generally be the guiding factor. But in this matter no such foundation is available. The contentions may be very serious and interests involved may be very heavy. In such a case whether the matter should be treated as a mere miscellaneous proceeding by the Courts of Travancore is a question for consideration. The Bombay High Court deplored that they have no power to treat it except as a miscellaneous proceeding. Such being the case when property of very serious value is in litigation before the Court in connection with the probate sought for, the High Court may be requested to frame rules for the award of costs. That is the object of the amendment. I thought that such a provision was necessary and I press it."— L. C. P., dated 16-4-1928,

155. In Section 3 of the Succession Certificate Regulation, IX of 1090, in the first sentence, the following shall be added, namely:—

Grant of probate or administration to supersede certificate under Regulation IX of 1090.

Provided that when any certificate is superseded under this Section all payments made to the holder of such certificate in ignorance of such supersession shall be held good against claims under the probate or letters of administration.

"CHAPTER I-A.

Probate and Letters of Administration.

Notice of application for probate or letters of administration to be given to Revenue authorities and procedure thereon.

13-A. (1) Where an application for probate or letters of administration is made to any Court, the Court shall cause notice of the application to be given to the Division Peishkar.

(2) The Division Peishkar within the local limits of whose revenue jurisdiction the property of the deceased or any part thereof is, may at any time inspect, or cause to be inspected, and take or cause to be taken copies of the record of any case in which application for probate or letters of administration has been made; and if, on such inspection or otherwise, he is of opinion that the petitioner has under-estimated the value of the property of the deceased, the Division Peishkar may, if he thinks fit, require the attendance of the petitioner (either in person or by agent), and take evidence and inquire into the matter in such manner as he may think fit, and if he is still of opinion that the value of the property has been under-estimated, may require the petitioner to amend the valuation.

(3) If the petitioner does not amend the valuation to the satisfaction of the Division Peishkar, the Division Peishkar may move the Court before which the application for probate or letters of administration was made to hold an inquiry into the true value of the property:

Provided that no such motion shall be made after the expiration of six months from the date of the exhibition of the inventory required by Section 102, Travancore Probate and Administration Regulation, 1105.

(4) The Court, when so moved as aforesaid, shall hold or cause to be held an inquiry accordingly and shall record a finding as to the true value, as near as may be, at which the property of the deceased should have been estimated. The Division Peishkar shall be deemed to be a party to the inquiry.

(5) For the purpose of any such inquiry, the Court or person authorised by the Court to hold the inquiry may examine the petitioner for probate or letters of administration on oath (whether in person or by commission) and may take such further evidence as may be produced to prove the true value of the property. The person authorised as aforesaid to hold the inquiry shall return to the Court the evidence taken by him and report the result of the inquiry, and such report and the evidence so taken shall be evidence in the proceedings, and the Court may record a finding in accordance with the report unless it is satisfied that it is erroneous.

(6) The finding of the Court recorded under Sub-section (4) shall be final, but shall not bar the entertainment and disposal by the Division Peishkar of any application under Section 13-F.

(7) Our Government may make rules for the guidance of the Division Peishkar and persons deputed by them in the exercise of the powers conferred by Sub-section (2).

Relief where too high a court fee has been paid.

13-B. Where any person, on applying for the probate of a will or letters of administration, has estimated the property of the deceased to be of greater value than the same has afterwards proved to be, and has consequently paid too high a court fee thereon, if within six months after the true value of the property has been ascertained such person produces the probate or letters to the Division Peishkar of the Division in which the probate or letters has or have been granted, and delivers to the Division Peishkar a particular inventory and valuation of the property of the deceased, verified by affidavit or affirmation, and if the Division Peishkar is satisfied that a greater fee was paid on the probate or letters than the law required, the said Division Peishkar may—

(a) cancel the stamp on the probate or letters, if such stamp has not been already cancelled :

(b) substitute another stamp for denoting the court fee which should have been paid thereon : and

(c) make an allowance for the difference between them as in the case of spoiled stamps, or repay the same in money, at his discretion.

Relief where debts due from a deceased person have been paid out of his estate.

13-C. Whenever it is proved to the satisfaction of the Division Peishkar that an executor or administrator has paid debts due from the deceased to such an amount as, being deducted out of the amount or value of the estate, reduce the same to a sum which, if it had been the whole gross amount or value of the estate would have occasioned a less court fee to be paid on the probate or letters of administration granted in respect of such estate than has been actually paid thereon under this Regulation, the Division Peishkar may return the difference, provided the same be claimed within three years after the date of such probate or letters :

but, when, by reason of any legal proceeding, the debts due from the deceased have not been ascertained and paid, or his effects have not been recovered and made available, and in consequence thereof the executor or administrator is prevented from claiming the return of such difference within the said term of three years, the Division Peishkar may allow such further time for making the claim as may appear to be reasonable under the circumstances.

Relief in cases of several grants.

13-D. Whenever a grant of probate or letters of administration has been or is made in respect of the whole of the property belonging to an estate, and the full fee chargeable under this Regulation has been or is paid thereon, no fee shall be chargeable under the same Regulation when a like grant is made in respect of the whole or any part of the same property belonging to the same estate.

Whenever such a grant has been or is made in respect of any property forming part of an estate, the amount of fees then actually paid under this Regulation shall be deducted when a like grant is made in respect of property belonging to the same estate, identical with or including the property to which the former grant relates.

Probates declared valid as to trust property, though not covered by court fee.

13-E. The probate of the will or the letters of administration of the effects of any person deceased shall be deemed valid and available by his executors or administrators for recovering, transferring, or assigning any movable or immovable property whereof or whereto the deceased was possessed or entitled, either wholly or partially, as a trustee, notwithstanding the amount or value of such property is not included in the amount or value of the estate in respect of which a court-fee was paid on such probate or letters of administration.

Provision for case where too low a court fee has been paid on probates, etc.

13-F. (1) Where any person, on applying for probate or letters of administration, has estimated the estate of the deceased to be of less value than the same has afterwards proved to be, and has in consequence paid too low a court fee thereon, the Division Peishkar of the Division in which the probate or letters has or have been granted may, on the value of the estate of the deceased being verified by affidavit or affirmation, move the District Judge who granted the probate or letters of administration to hold an enquiry.

(2) The Judge after following the procedure prescribed in Section 13-A, sub-sections (4) and (5), may record a finding as to the valuation of the estate. The Court may direct that the probate or letters of administration be duly stamped on payment to the Division Peishkar of the full court fee which ought to have been originally paid thereon in respect of such value, and of the further penalty, if the probate or letters is or are produced within one year from the date of the grant, of not more than twice, or if it or they, is or are produced after one year from such date of not more than five times, such proper court fee without any deduction of court fee originally paid :

Provided that, if the application be made within six months after the ascertainment of the true value of the estate and the discovery that too low a court fee was at first paid on the probate or letters, and if the Court is satisfied that such fee was paid in consequence of a mistake, or of its not being known at the time that some particular part of the estate belonged to the deceased, and without any intention of fraud or to delay the payment of the proper court fee; the Court may remit the said penalty, and cause the probate or letters to be duly stamped on payment only of the sum wanting to make up the fee which should have been at first paid thereon.

(3) The District Judge shall communicate his decision to the Division Peishkar.

Administrator to give proper security before letters stamped under Section 13-E.

13-G. In the case of probate or letters of administration on which too low a court fee has been paid at first, the Division Peishkar shall not cause the same to be duly stamped in manner aforesaid, until the executor or administrator has given such security to the Court by which the probate or letters of administration has or have been granted as ought to have been given on the granting thereof, in case the full value of the estate of the deceased had been then ascertained.

Executors, etc., not paying full court fee on probate, etc., within six months after discovery of under-payment.

13-H. Where too low a court-fee has been paid on any probate or letters of administration in consequence of any mistake, or of its not being known at the time that some particular parts of the estate belong to the deceased, if any executor or administrator acting under such probate or letters does not, within six months after the discovery of the mistake, or of any effects not known at the time to have belonged to the deceased, apply to the Division Peishkar, and pay what is wanting to make up the court fee which ought to have been paid at first on such probate or letters, he shall forfeit the sum of two hundred rupees, and also a further sum at the rate of ten rupees per cent. on the amount of the sum wanting to make up the proper court-fee.

Payment of court fees in respect of probates and letters of administration.

13-I. (1) No order entitling the grant of probate or letters of administration shall be made upon an application for such grant until the petitioner has filed in the Court a valuation of the property in the form set forth in the third schedule, and the Court is satisfied that the fee mentioned in Article X of the first schedule has been paid on such valuation.

(2) The grant of probate or letters of administration shall not be delayed by reason of any motion made by the Division Peishkar under Section 13-A, Sub-section (3).

13-J. (1) Any excess fee found to be payable on an inquiry held under Section 13-A, Sub-section (5), and any penalty or forfeiture under Section 13-H, may, on the certificate of the Division Peishkar, be recovered from the executor or administrator as if it were an arrear of land revenue by any Tahsildar in any part of Travancore.

Recovery of penalty.

(2) The Division Peishkar may remit the whole or any part of any penalty or forfeiture as aforesaid, or any part of any penalty under Section 13-F, or of any court fee under Section 13-F, in excess of the full court-fee which ought to have been paid.

13-K. Nothing in Section 3 or Section 19 shall apply to probate or letters of administration."

Sections 3 and 19 not to apply to probates and letters of administration.

159. In the Court Fees Regulation, VI of 1087, Schedule II, after Article VII, the following Article shall be inserted, namely :—

Insertion of a new Article "VII-A" in the Court Fees Regulation.

"VII-A., Caveat „ Five rupees."

160. In the Court Fees Regulation, VI of 1087, after Schedule II, the following schedule shall be added, namely :—

III. CRIMINAL CIRCULARS.

It has come to the notice of the High Court that copies of documents signed by the presiding Officers of the subordinate Criminal Courts prepared either for delivery to the parties or their Vakils or for preservation in the office do not mention the name of the signatory and his official designation and that the provisions of the High Court Proceedings dated 19th Kumbhom 1075 enjoining legibility of signatures of all Judges, Munsiffs and Magistrates are not acted up to.

The High Court therefore invite the attention of all the subordinate Criminal Courts to the Proceedings referred to above and direct that the signatures of the presiding Officers of the subordinate Criminal Courts appearing in documents signed by them shall be legible and that copies of such documents prepared either for delivery to the parties or their Vakils or for preservation in the office shall mention the name of the signatory and his official designation.— *Cr. ## REGULATION I OF 1068 (Revenue Recovery).

GOVERNMENT NOTIFICATIONS.

(R. Dis. No. 327/29/Rev., dated 7th February 1929.)

It is hereby notified for the information of the public and for the guidance of the Officers of the Land Revenue Department that, under sanction of Her Highness the Maha Rani Regent, the following procedure is laid down in regard to the collection of land revenue due to one Taluk from Pattadars resident in other Taluks:—

(1) Ordinarily only the demand notice under Section 23-A of the Revenue Recovery Regulation shall in the first instance be served on defaulters who are resident in a Taluk other than that in which the land is situate and the Tahsildar of the Taluk where the defaulter resides shall be required only to have the notice duly served and not to realise the amount covered by the notice.

(2) The revenue due on any land shall be paid to the Proverthicar of the Pakuthi where the land is situate either in person or by money order or through an agent. The voluntary payment of revenue in a Pakuthi or Taluk other than that in which the land is situate shall in no circumstances be accepted.— T. G. G., dated 12-2-1929, Pt. I, P. 345.

It has come to the notice of Government that, in cases of sales of immovable properties for arrears of Public Revenue, the defaulters sometimes remit the dues in the Taluk before the expiry of 30 days, but make no formal application for setting aside the sale, as expressly required by Section 33-A (1) of the Revenue Recovery Regulation I of 1068. The public are hereby informed that unless a written application for setting aside the sale is presented to the Division Peishkar as required by that Section when making the deposit, the sale is liable to be confirmed in spite of such deposit and action in strict conformity with the provisions of the Section is therefore necessary to entitle them to the relief sought for. It is also hereby notified that a written application addressed to the Dewan Peishkar may at the time of making the deposit be presented to the Tahsildar who will transmit the same to the Division Peishkar for orders. The application is liable to payment of a court fee of half a rupee under the Court Fees Regulation and should be filed in the Tahsildar's Office.—

REGULATION VIII OF 1090 (Insolvency).

The following instructions are issued by the High Court for the guidance of the Courts and Official Receivers in the exercise of their powers under the provisions of the Insolvency Regulation.

(Dated 9th December 1929.)

1. The Head Ministerial Officer of the District Courts shall examine whether the requirements of Rule 3 of the Rules dated 4th November 1920 and such other Rules as may be in force on the date of the presentation of the petition, regarding the particulars to be specified in a debtor's application are strictly complied with, and if there be any defect therein, have them cured promptly as laid down in Rule 18 of the Civil Courts Guide.

2. Applications by Official Receivers shall not be taxed except when they are made under a particular provision in the Regulation on motions made by them as parties in other proceedings. Vakalaths executed by them engaging Vakils to conduct cases shall, however, be taxed.

3. The Official Receiver shall remit forthwith all realisations on account of the estates administered by him on chellans from Court. On no account shall he retain with him an amount in excess of the maximum sum allowed to be retained with him.

4. In the applications for chellans, the Official Receiver shall state the amount realised, the amount appropriated towards expenses already incurred on account of the estates concerned, the amount proposed to be retained for emergent purposes in connection therewith and the amount intended to be remitted to the Treasury to the credit of the estate. These details shall also be entered in the ledger maintained by the Official Receiver (Form No. 22).

5. The District Judge shall see that the chellans applied for by the Official Receivers are issued expeditiously and take severe notice of the conduct of the clerks concerned whenever any delay is occasioned by them.

6. When the Court passes an order of adjudication in an insolvency proceeding, a vesting order shall be issued to the Official Receiver within one week from the date of the order of adjudication. In the monthly statements submitted by the District Courts to the High Court a specific statement shall be made as to whether the abovesaid requirement has been satisfied in all the cases in which orders of adjudication have been passed; it shall also set forth the reason for non-compliance with the same in each of the cases where the above said rule is not conformed to.

7. The Courts shall prepare the schedule of creditors within a period not exceeding four months as required by Section 23 (1) of the Regulation and not delegate it to the Official Receivers. A copy of the schedule shall be posted in the court house as required under clause 2 of the Section and objections, if any, presented under Section 25, shall be duly heard and disposed of as expeditiously as possible. The Courts shall state in their monthly returns submitted to the High Court, the number of cases in which the time-limit fixed above has been transgressed and the reasons therefor.

8. As soon as vesting orders are passed the Official Receiver shall within a month take possession of the properties after proper identification and deliver them over to lessees who may be appointed after inviting bidders. The Official Receiver shall not be in direct possession of such properties except with the written sanction of the Court. The Official Receiver shall maintain a Register (Form No. 30) of such leases and report to the Courts from time to time detailed information regarding the same.

9. The Official Receiver shall ordinarily conduct sales of properties in public auction except in cases where permission has been obtained from the Courts in writing for disposing of the same otherwise. Such sales shall not be held on Sundays or other recognised holidays. The notice regarding the sale of properties shall contain a provision reserving the right to adjourn the same if there is not a sufficient number of bidders or if the highest bid is not adequate. If there are not sufficient bidders, except when creditors with substantial interests are present and agree that the amount of the bid is adequate, the first auction should always be adjourned to secure more bidders and a second auction should also be adjourned if the amount of the bid is less than half the upset price. The fact of such adjournment with the reasons thereof shall be specifically recorded in the auction list and the date of adjournment duly notified. If the adjournment is for more than a week, a fresh proclamation shall invariably be issued.

10. The Official Receiver shall not under any circumstance bid at sales or acquire directly or indirectly any interest in the properties sold in auction.

11. The Official Receiver shall endeavour to recover book debts or debts under promissory notes, bonds or other instruments by legal proceedings instituted with the previous auction of the Courts. The sale of such debts in public auction shall not be undertaken except under the orders in writing of the Court after being satisfied that legal proceedings are too costly or inadvisable.

12. If any amount in excess of that retained with the Official Receiver on account of a particular estate is required for meeting the expenses and the necessary funds are available in the treasury belonging to the particular estate, such excess amount shall be drawn by cheques from Court in cases where the expenses are considered admissible by the Court.

13. The Official Receiver shall not incur expenses except in respect of issue of notices and the like without sanction of the Court, and in cases of emergency, meet such expenses and have them ratified by the Courts within a week of incurring the same.

14. The commission claimable by the Official Receiver is leviable only on the amount to be distributed as dividend, the surpluses, if any, out of the realization after discharge of the debts repayable to the debtor not being taken into account for this purpose. The application for commission shall be in Form No. 28.

15. The Official Receiver shall, on no account, be allowed to take commission in respect of secured debts, except in cases where the secured creditor relinquishes his security for the general benefit of the creditors as contemplated by Section 32 of the Regulation, and the properties are sold free of encumbrances. In such cases, the sales should be conducted with the permission of the Court in writing.

16. The Official Receiver is not entitled to claim commission in cases of composition arrangements, since the money paid as the result of such arrangements, is not money realized by the Official Receiver.

17. Questions of apportionment of the commission in case of change of Official Receiver shall be decided by the Court subject to an appeal to the High Court.

18. When orders relating to commission are passed, the Court shall examine whether any portion of the commission is liable to be credited to Government under Rule 4 of the Rules dated 14th August 1922, as revised, and if so, pass the necessary orders for crediting the same to Government and issue cheques to the Official Receiver only in respect of the balance.

19. If more than one application is made during any month for commission, the amount liable to be credited to Government shall be determined in respect of each application and cheques issued in each case after making the calculation as indicated above.

20. A Register in Form No. 31 shall be maintained in the Court for the purpose of verification of the amount of commission.

21. The Official Receiver shall devote a page in his ledger for showing the details regarding the estates out of the funds of which the sum of Rs. 200 allowed to be retained by him is made up.

22. New ledgers need not be opened for every year. The same ledger may be continued from year to year, separate pages being allotted for an index of the estates administered.

23. The Official Receiver shall maintain a cash book (Form No. 27) as provided for under Rule II of the Rules dated 4th November 1920, noting down the opening balance, the total receipts, the total disbursements and the closing balance for each day.

24. The daily balances of the journal should be struck, and verified with those in the cash book every day. The balances of each estate should be struck and entered in the ledger at the close of every year. The pages of the journals, ledgers and cash books to be maintained by the Official Receiver shall be machine numbered.

25. The only item that can be entered on the credit side of the office charge account shall be the amounts leviable towards commission made up of 5 per cent. of the moneys to be distributed as dividends from time to time as laid down in Rule 4 of the Rules dated 14th August 1922 in the case of each estate. The item of debit in this account shall include the amount actually paid to the Official Receiver towards commission and such other amounts as may be directed by the Court to be entered therein. The balance will consist of the amount that has to be credited to Government.

26. In the matter of the administration of the estate, the following instructions will be followed :—

(a) The Receiver shall thoroughly investigate each case and form his own opinion on matters which come to his knowledge and shall not wait to be moved by creditors. If a creditor desires proceedings to be taken which the Receiver regards as doubtful, the latter shall report the matter to the Court which, if it thinks fit, may direct the required action to be taken upon the creditor indemnifying the Receiver against the costs.

(b) When the Receiver is of opinion that a transfer of property or payment by an insolvent may be voidable or fraudulent, he shall report the matter to the Court and obtain directions as to the steps to be taken.

(c) No arrangements shall be agreed upon or compromise effected by the Receiver without the previous sanction of the Court, and such sanction shall be granted only after proper enquiry as provided for in Section 20 (h) of the Regulation.

(d) Every application by a Receiver or interim Receiver to the Court for directions shall be by a written report of the facts connected with the case. If the Court considers that notice has to be issued, it shall direct him to apply by petition in the usual manner.

(e) The Receiver is an officer of the Court and is bound to take the orders of the Court in all matters of doubt or difficulty.

27. The Official Receiver shall meet the initial expenses on account of notices, etc., from the 10 Rs. deposited as provided for elsewhere. For the other expenses, the creditors may be called upon to advance the necessary amounts to meet the expenses, such advance with interest at 6 per cent. per annum being a first charge on the realizations from the estate.

28. The Official Receiver shall submit a monthly statement of account showing all the receipts and disbursements in the cases in which he is the receiver. Such statements shall be forwarded to the Court before the 10th of the succeeding month. The Court shall specify the receipt of this statement in the monthly statements submitted to the High Court by it.

29. If the Courts in the exercise of the powers vested in them under Rule II of the Rules dated 4th November 1920, appoint special auditors to audit the accounts of an estate, they should fix the remuneration for the work and pay it, from the assets of that estate. If the accounts of the several estates are so audited, the Courts should apportion such remuneration and debit the same to the several estates concerned.

30. The Courts should as far as possible transfer to the Official Receivers all estates to be administered under this Regulation in cases where Receivers other than Official Receivers have been appointed. If this cannot be done, periodical reports of progress of the administration should be obtained and the closing of the proceedings expedited as much as possible. The Courts shall see that the collections made by such receivers are remitted to the Treasury promptly. The Rules of conduct relating to Official Receivers will apply mutatis mutandis to other Receivers also.

31. The Official Receivers shall maintain machine-numbered counterfoil receipt books and grant receipts to parties when any money is received from them.

32. The Courts shall see that the penal provisions contained in Section 42 of the Regulation are enforced by them in appropriate cases to ensure a proper and efficient working of the Regulation. They are further required to see that the provisions of clause 2 of Section 14 and of Section 47 of the Regulation are strictly followed in cases falling thereunder.

33. The Courts are directed to maintain B diaries regularly with respect to the proceedings in Insolvency petitions.

34. The Courts will see that the money remitted to the Treasury in connection with any estate is not entered in the general Judicial Register, maintained by them. A separate Register (Form 32) shall be opened allowing not less than a page for each of the Insolvency petitions in which money is realized. A repayment Register (Form No. 33) shall also be maintained.

35. The District Judge shall inspect the Insolvency Registers of his Court and the books and registers maintained by the Official Receiver attached to his Court not less than once in each quarter of each year and forward a report to the High Court embodying the result of such inspection.

37. A licensee shall be responsible that all electric supply lines, fittings and apparatus belonging to him, or under his control, which may be on a consumer's premises, are maintained in a safe condition, and shall take all due precautions to avoid risk of causing fire on such premises by reason of his electric supply-lines, fittings or apparatus or any defect therein.

Cut-out on consumer's premises.

38. A licensee shall insert a suitable cut-out in each service-line (other than an earthed neutral conductor or the earthed external conductor of a concentric cable) within a consumer's premises, in an accessible position as close as possible to the point of entry. Such cut-out shall be contained within an adequately enclosed fire-proof receptacle;

Provided that, where more than one consumer is supplied through a common service-line, each individual consumer (if he so requires) shall be given an independent cut-out at the point of junction to the common service.

Service-line on consumer's premises.

39. The following provisions shall apply to service-lines and any apparatus in connection therewith on a consumer's premises, viz :—

(1) All such lines being underground lines, and all apparatus in connection therewith placed by a licensee shall be so insulated and protected as to be secure under all ordinary conditions against electrical, mechanical, chemical, or other injury to the insulation and against access of moisture.

(2) From the point where any service-line enters a building, or becomes accessible without the aid of a ladder or other special appliance, such line and all apparatus in connection therewith, shall be insulated and protected in the manner prescribed by Sub-rule (1).

(3) Any metal forming part of the electric circuit of any such line shall not, unless connected with earth, be exposed so that it can be touched.

Precautions to be adopted by owners.

(1) where bare conductors are used in a building, they shall be inaccessible without the aid of a ladder or other special appliance and shall have switches provided for rendering them dead whenever necessary;

(2) no repair of any part of any electrical apparatus shall be effected, while the part is charged to a pressure, exceeding low pressure, except by an authorized person;

(3) the supply of energy to every vehicle, travelling crane or the like shall be efficiently controlled by a suitable switch, so that by its means all pressure can be cut off from all apparatus concerned and from any device in connection therewith;

(4) trailing cables for portable motors shall be specially flexible, heavily insulated and protected from mechanical injury ; where the protection is by means of metallic covering, the covering shall be in metallic connection with the frame of the motor.

Electric supply-lines and apparatus.

42. All circuits and apparatus shall be so arranged by the person to whom the same belong that there shall be no danger of any part thereof becoming accidently charged to any pressure beyond the limits of pressure for which it is intended.

Crossing metallic substances.

43. Where an electric supply-line crosses, or is in proximity to, any metallic substance, such precautions as an Electric Inspector may approve, shall be taken by the licensee or the owner, as the case may be, against the possibility of the metallic substance becoming charged ;

Provided that, where the electric supply.line was laid or erected previous to such metallic substance, the cost incurred in taking such precautions shall be refunded to the licensee or owner, as the case may be, by the person to whom the metallic substance belongs.

56. (1) A high pressure circuit, other than an aerial line, shall not be brought into use unless the insulation of every part thereof has withstood the continuous application, during one minute, in the case of every electric supply-line, machine, device or apparatus, of a pressure 100 per cent. greater than the maximum pressure to which it is intended to be subjected in use ; and the licensee or owner, as the case may be, shall duly record the results of each test and shall forward the result to an Electric Inspector :

that it will not be accessible, in such a manner as to contravene the provision of Sub-rule (2), either during or after the execution of the work, and may recover the reasonable cost of such alteration from the person from whom the notice was received :

Provided that the licensee or owner, as the case may be, may, before so altering the aerial line, require the person from whom the notice was received to deposit the estimated cost of such alteration :

Provided further that an Electric Inspector may, if he is satisfied that the aerial line has been so guarded as to secure the protection of persons and property from injury or risk of injury, permit the work to be executed prior to, or, in the case of a temporary addition or alteration, without the alteration, of the aerial line.

(4) Where an aerial line is on a consumer's or an owner's premises, the height from the ground or from any mineral or refuse dump, and from parts of buildings or structures to which persons have access shall (unless the conductors are adequately guarded) be not less than 15 feet or such greater height as may be necessary to prevent danger.

64. (1) (a) Where an aerial line crosses or is in proximity to (i) any telegraph wire, or (ii) an aerial line belonging to some other person, the licensee or owner (as the case may be) shall ensure that his aerial line is so protected as to guard against the possibility of it coming into contact with the telegraph wire or other aerial line.

(b) Within twenty-one days of receiving notice that a new telegraph wire or aerial line is, or is about to be, erected in proximity to his aerial line, the licensee or owner (as the case may be) shall effect the protection referred to in clause (a).

(c) Where the licensee or owner (as the case may be) erects a new aerial line in proximity to any telegraph wire, or to any aerial line not belonging to him, he shall not bring the same into use until he has complied with clause (a).

(d) In all cases referred to in the preceding Sub-rules, the protection shall be carried out at the expense of the person whose line is last erected and to the satisfaction of the Electric Inspector.

(e) Where lines cross each other, the crossing shall be made in a direction as nearly at right angles as the nature of the case admits.

(f) All guarding arrangements should ordinarily be erected on the posts of the owners or licensees who shall, in that case, be responsible for their efficient maintenance.

(2) In the case of a crossing over a trolley-wire the guarding will be in accordance with the following conditions (vide also attached diagrams), namely:—

(a) Where there is only one trolley-wire, two guard-wires shall be erected as in diagram A.

(d) Where there are two trolley-wires and the distance between them exceeds 48 inches, each trolley-wire shall be separately guarded as in diagram D.

(e) The rise of the trolley boom shall be so limited that, if the trolley leaves the trolley-wire, it shall not foul the guard-wires.

(f) Where a telegraph-wire is liable to fall or be blown down upon an arm, stay-wire or span-wire, and so slide down upon a trolley-wire, guard hooks shall be provided to prevent such sliding.

(c) Every guard-wire, or cross-connected system of guard-wire, shall have sufficient current-carrying capacity to ensure the rendering dead, till the contact has been removed, of any live wire coming into contact with it, without risk of fusing of the guard-wire or wires.

(d) Every guard-wire or system of guard-wire and its supports shall have sufficient strength to carry without breaking the extra load which may be put on it by the fall of any or all the wires guarded.

(4) Alternative methods of guarding may be substituted with the approval of the Electric Inspector.

68. Where an aerial line, erected in, over, along or across any street ceases to be used as an electric supply line, it shall be maintained in a safe mechanical condition in accordance with the provisions of Rule 61, or, if so required by an Electric Inspector, be removed within a period of fourteen days from the date of such Inspector's requisition for removal.

Additional Rules for Electric traction

69. Rules 70 to 83 shall apply in the case of energy used for purposes of traction where the provisions of Part III of the Regulation apply. In these Rules, the conductor used for transmitting energy to a vehicle is referred to as the "line", and the other conductor as the "return".

74. (1) Where the return is partly or entirely uninsulated, the owner shall, in the construction and maintenance of his system, adopt such means for reducing the difference produced by the current between the potential of the uninsulated return at any one point and the potential of the uninsulated return at any other point as to ensure that the difference of potential between the uninsulated return and any metallic pipe, structure or substance in the vicinity shall not exceed four volts, where the return is relatively positive, or one and one-third volts, where the return is relatively negative.

(2) The person to whom any such pipe, structure, or substance as is referred to in Sub-rule (1) belongs, may, in respect of the same, require the owner of the uninsulated return, at reasonable times and intervals, to ascertain by test in his presence, or in that of his representative, whether the condition specified in the said Sub-rule is secured; and, if such condition as aforesaid found to be secured, all reasonable expenses of, and incidental to, the carrying out of the test shall be borne by the owner of the metallic pipe, structure or substance.

Difference of potential on return.

75. Where the return is partly or entirely uninsulated, the owner shall keep a continuous record of the difference of potential, during the working of his system, between every junction of an insulated return with an uninsulated return and the point on the route most distant from that junction, and the difference of potential shall not, under normal running conditions, exceed a mean value between the highest momentary peak and the average for the hour of maximum load of seven volts.

Leakage on conduit system.

76. Where both the line and the return are placed within a conduit, the following conditions shall be secured in the construction and maintenance of the system :—

(a) Where the rails are used to form any part of the return, they shall be electrically connected at distances apart of not more than 100 feet, with the conduit by means of copper strips having a cross sectional area of at least one-sixteenth of a square inch or by other means of equal conductivity. Where the return is wholly insulated and contained within the conduit, the latter shall be connected with earth at the generating station or sub-station through an instrument suitable for the indication of any contact or partial contact of either the line or the return with the conduit.

(b) The leakage-current shall be ascertained daily, before or after the hours of running, when the line is fully charged; and, if at any time it is found to exceed one ampere per mile of single tramway track, the transmission and use of energy shall be suspended unless the leakage is stopped within twenty-four hours.

Leakage on other than conduit system.

77. Where both the line and the return are not placed within a conduit, the leakage-current shall be ascertained daily before or after the hours of running, when the line is fully charged; and, if at any time it is found that it exceeds one-half of an ampere per mile of single tramway track, the transmission and use of energy shall be suspended unless the leakage is stopped within twenty-four hours.

Passengers not to have access to electric circuit.

78. Precautions to the satisfaction of an Electric Inspector shall be taken by the owner of every vehicle to prevent :—

(a) the access of passengers to any portion of the electric circuit where there is danger to them of receiving an electric shock;

(b) any metal hand-rail or other metallic substance liable to be handled by passengers becoming charged.

The intervals between the supports shall not exceed 140 feet.

Records.

83. (1) The owner shall, so far as is consistent with his system of working, keep the following records namely :—

(a) Daily records showing—

85. (1) It shall be the duty of the owner, agent, or manager of the mine or of the agent of any company operating in the oil-field, or of the owner of one or more drilled wells situated in the oil-field to comply with and enforce the following Rules and it shall be the duty of all persons employed to conduct their work in accordance with the Rules.

(2) An authorized person shall be on duty in every mine or oil-field while energy is being used therein.

86. On or before the first day of Kanni in every year, an annual return giving the size and type of apparatus and any particulars as to the circumstances of its use which may be required by the person to whom the return is to be sent shall be sent by the person specified in Rule 85 in the form set out in Annexure VIII to these Rules:

Provided that this Rule shall not apply to telephones and signalling apparatus or to low pressure installations for lighting only.

Plans.

87. (1) A proper plan on the same scale as the plan kept at the mine in fulfilment of the requirements of the Travancore Mines and Minerals Regulation, 1103, shall be kept in the office at the mine, showing the position of all fixed apparatus and conductors in the mine, other than lights, telephones or signalling apparatus, or cables for the same. The said plan shall be corrected every six months and the date of correction entered on the plan by the manager of the mine, and it shall be produced to an Electric Inspector or an Inspector of Mines at any time on his request.

(2) A similar plan, on a scale not less than sixteen inches to the mile, shall be kept by the manager or owner of one or more wells in any oil-field, showing similar particulars and subject to correction and inspection as prescribed in Sub-rule (1).

(3) A similar plan, on such scale as the Government may require, shall be kept in the office of the licensee or person transmitting or distributing energy in a mine or oil-field, showing the position of all electric supply lines under his control, and subject to correction and inspection as prescribed in Sub-rule (1).

Lighting, communications and fire precautions.

88. (1) In all places in a mine lighted by electricity, where failure of the electric light at any time would be likely to cause danger, one or more safety lamps or other proper lights shall be kept continuously burning.

(2) Efficient means shall be provided in every mine for communicating between the place in which the switchgear provided under Sub-rule (1) of Rule 95 is erected and the shaft-bottom or main distributing centre in the pit.

(3) Appliances for extinguishing fires shall be kept ready for immediate use in every place in a mine containing apparatus, other than cables, telephones and signalling apparatus.

Isolation and fixing of transformer, switchgear, etc.

89. (1) Where necessary to prevent danger or mechanical damage, transformers and switchgear shall be placed in a separate room, compartment, or box.

(2) Unless the apparatus is so constructed, protected, and worked as to obviate the risk of fire, no inflammable material shall be used in the construction of any room, compartment, or box containing apparatus, or in the construction of any of the fittings therein. Each such room, compartment or box shall be substantially constructed and shall be kept dry.

(3) Adequate working space and means of access clear of obstructions and free from danger shall, in so far as circumstances permit, be provided for all apparatus that has to be worked or attended to, and all handles intended to be operated shall be conveniently placed for that purpose.

Method of earthing.

90. Where earthing is necessary, it shall be carried out in a mine by connection to an earthing system at the surface of the mine, and, in all cases, in a manner approved by an Electric Inspector.

Construction and insulation of apparatus, and earthing of same.

91. (1) All apparatus and conductors shall be sufficient in power and size and of sufficient mechanical strength, for the work they may be required to do, and so constructed, installed, protected, worked and maintained as to prevent danger so far as is reasonably practicable. The exposure of live parts shall be avoided.

(2) All insulating material shall be chosen with special regard to the circumstances of its proposed use. It shall be of mechanical strength sufficient for its purpose, and, so far as is practicable, it shall be of such a character or so protected as fully to maintain its insulating properties under working conditions of temperature and moisture.

(3) Every part of a system shall be kept efficiently insulated from earth, except that (i) the neutral point of a polyphase system may be earthed at one point only; (ii) the mid-voltage point of any system, other than a concentric system, may be earthed at one point only; and (iii) the other conductor of a concentric system shall be earthed.

(4) Earth or fault detectors or recorders shall be connected up in every system in a mine to show immediately any defect in the insulation of the system. The readings of these instruments shall be recorded daily in a book kept at the generating station, sub-station or switch room.

Earthing, metal, etc.

92. (1) All metallic sheaths, coverings, handles, joint-boxes, switch-gear frames, instrument covers, switch and fuse covers and boxes, and all lampholders, unless efficiently protected by an earthed or insulating covering made of fire-resisting material, and the frames and bedplates of generators, transformers, and motors (including portable motors), shall be earthed by connection to an earthing system in the manner prescribed in Rule 90.

(2) Where the cables are provided with a metallic covering constructed and installed in accordance with Rule 96 (d), such metallic covering may be used as a means of connection to the earthing system. All the conductors of an earthing system shall have a conductivity at all parts and at joints at least equal to 50 per cent. of that of the largest conductor used solely to supply the apparatus a part of which it is desired to earth:

Provided that no conductor of an earthing system shall have a cross-sectional area of less than ·022 of a square inch.

(3) All joints in earth conductors and all joints to the metallic covering of the cables shall be properly soldered or otherwise efficiently made. No switch, fuse, or circuit-breaker shall be placed in any earth conductor.

(4) This Rule shall not apply (except in the case of portable apparatus) to any system in a mine in which the pressure does not exceed low pressure direct current or 125 volts alternating current.

Motors and their transformers.

93. (1) Where energy is distributed at a pressure higher than medium pressure (i) it shall not be used without transformation to medium or low pressure except in fixed machines in which the high pressure parts are stationary; and (ii) portable motors under 20 h. p. shall be supplied through a transformer stepping down to medium or low pressure.

(2) Where energy is transformed, suitable provision shall be made to guard against danger by reason of the lower pressure apparatus becoming accidentally charged above its normal pressure by leakage from, or contact with, the higher pressure apparatus.

Switch gear and terminals.

94. Switch gear and all terminals, cable-ends, cable joints and connections of apparatus shall be totally enclosed, and constructed and installed so that—

(i) all parts shall be of mechanical strength sufficient to resist rough usage ;

(ii) all conductors and contact areas shall be of ample current-carrying capacity and all joints in conductors shall be properly soldered or otherwise efficiently made ;

(iii) the lodgement of any matter likely to diminish the insulation, or affect the working of any switchgear shall be prevented ;

(iv) all live parts shall be so protected or enclosed as to prevent persons accidentally coming into contact with them and danger from arcs, short-circuits, firewater, gas or oil ;

(v) where there may be risk of igniting gas, coal-dust, oil or other inflammable material, all parts shall be so protected as to prevent open sparking ;

(vi) every switch or circuit-breaker shall be capable of opening the circuit it controls, without danger, on any short circuit with which it may have to deal.

Cutting off supply.

95. (1) Properly constructed switchgear for cutting off the supply of energy to the mine or oil-field shall be provided at the surface of the mine or oilfield at a point approved by an Electric Inspector ; and during the time any cable is live a person authorized to operate the said switchgear shall be available within easy reach thereof.

(2) Efficient means, suitably placed, shall be provided for cutting off all pressure from every part of a system, when necessary to prevent danger.

(3) Such efficient means shall be provided for cutting off all pressure automatically from the part or parts of the system affected in the event of a fault as may, in the opinion of an Electric Inspector, be necessary to prevent danger.

(4) Every motor shall be controlled by switchgear for starting and stopping, so arranged as to cut off all pressure from the motor and from all apparatus in connection therewith, and so placed as to be easily worked by the person appointed to work the motor.

(5) If a concentric system is used, no switch, fuse, or circuit-breaker shall be placed in the outer conductor, or in any conductor connected thereto, except that, if required, a reversing switch may be inserted in the outer conductor at the place where the energy is being used ;

Provided that, subject to the connection of the outer conductor with the earthing system being maintained, switches, fuses or circuit-breakers may be used to break the connection with the generators or transformers supplying the energy.

96. All cables in mines, other than flexible cables for portable apparatus, shall comply with the following requirements :—

Cables in mines.

(a) They shall be covered with insulating material (except that the outer conductor of a concentric system may be bare. They shall be efficiently protected from mechanical damage and supported at sufficiently frequent intervals and in such a manner as adequately to prevent danger or damage to the cables.

(b) (i) Except as provided in clause (c) or, with the consent in writing of an Electric Inspector and subject to the provisions of clause (f) and to such further conditions as the Electric Inspector may impose, no cables other than concentric cables, or two-core cables or multicore cables protected by a metallic covering, or single-core cables which contain all the conductors of the circuit, shall be used where the pressure exceeds low pressure continuous current or 125 volts alternating current.

(ii) The lead sheath of lead sheathed cables and the iron or steel armouring of armoured cables respectively shall be of a thickness not less than that recommended from time to time by the British Engineering Standards Association.

(c) Where the medium-pressure direct-current system is used, two singlecore cables may be used for any circuit, if their metallic covering are bonded together by earth conductors so placed that the distance between any two consecutive bonds is not greater than 100 feet measured along either cable ;

(d) The metallic covering of every cable shall be (i) electrically continuous throughout ; (ii) earthed, if it is required by Sub-rule (1) of Rule 92 to be earthed, by a connection to the earthing system of not less conductivity than the same length of the said metallic covering ; (iii) efficiently protected against corrosion where necessary ; (iv) of a conductivity at all parts and at all joints at least equal to 50 per cent. of the conductivity of the largest conductor enclosed by the said metallic covering, and (v) where there may be risk of igniting gas, coal-dust, or other inflammable material, so constructed as to prevent, as far as is practicable, the occurrence of open sparking as the result of any fault or leakage from live conductors:

Provided that, where two single-core cables protected by metallic covering bonded together in accordance with clause (c) of this Rule are used for a circuit, the conductivity of each of the said metallic coverings at all parts and at all joints shall be at least equal to 25 per cent. of the conductivity of the conductor enclosed thereby.

(e) Cables and conductors, where joined up to motors, transformers, switchgear, and other apparatus, shall be installed so that (i) they are mechanically protected by securely attaching the metallic covering to the apparatus ; and (ii) the insulating material at each cable end is efficiently sealed so as to prevent the diminution of its insulating properties. Where necessary to prevent abrasion or to secure gas-tightness, there shall be properly constructed glands or bushes.

(f) Unarmoured cables or conductors used with the consent of an Electric Inspector as provided in sub-clause (i) of clause (b) shall be either conveyed in pipes or casings or suspended from efficient insulators by means of some non-conducting material which will not cut the covering and which will prevent contact with any timbering or metal work.

Flexible cables.

97. (1) Flexible cables for portable apparatus shall be two-core or multicore and covered with insulating material which shall be efficiently protected from mechanical damage. If a flexible metallic covering be used either as the outer conductor of a concentric system or as a means of protection from mechanical damage, the same shall not be used by itself to form an earth conductor for the portable apparatus, but it may be used for that purpose in conjunction with an earthing core or other earthing wire.

(2) Every flexible cable for portable apparatus shall be connected to the system and to the portable apparatus itself by a properly constructed connector.

(3) At every point where flexible cables are joined to main cables, a switch capable of entirely cutting off the pressure from the flexible cables shall be provided.

(4) No lampholder shall be in metallic connection with the guard or other metal work of a portable lamp.

98. (1) An electrician shall be appointed in writing by the owner, agent or manager of the mine or by the agent or the owner of one or more wells in an oil-field to supervise the apparatus. If necessary for the proper fulfilment of the duties detailed in this Rule, one or more assistants to the electrician shall be appointed by the aforesaid authority.

Supervision and sundry precautions.

(2) Every person appointed to work, supervise, examine, or adjust any apparatus shall be competent for the work that he is set to do. No person except the electrician, or a competent person acting under his supervision, shall undertake any work where, in order adequately to avoid danger, technical knowledge or experience is required.

(3) The electrician shall be responsible for the proper performance by himself, or by an assistant appointed under Sub-rule (1), of the following duties, namely :—

(i) the thorough examination of all apparatus (including testing of earth conductors and metallic coverings for continuity) as often as may be necessary to prevent danger ; and

(ii) the examination and testing of all new apparatus, and of all apparatus re-erected in the mine before it is put into service in a new position :

Provided that, in the absence of the electrician for more than three days, the owner, agent or manager of the mine or the agent or owner of one or more oil-wells in an oil-field shall appoint in writing an efficient substitute.

(4) The electrician shall keep at the mine or oil-field a log-book made up of daily log-sheets kept in the forms set out, respectively for mines and oil-fields, in Annexure IX to these Rules. The said log-book shall be produced at any time on request to an Inspector of Mines or an Electric Inspector.

(5) Should there be a fault in any circuit, the part affected shall be made dead without delay, and shall remain so until the fault has been remedied.

(6) For the prevention of danger, all apparatus shall be kept clear of obstruction and free from dust, dirt and moisture. Inflammable or explosive material shall not be stored in any room, compartment, or box containing apparatus, or in the vicinity of apparatus.

(7) Before any conductor or apparatus is handled, adequate precautions shall be taken, by earthing or other suitable means, to discharge electrically such conductor or apparatus, and any adjacent conductor or apparatus, if there is danger therefrom, and to prevent any conductor or apparatus from being accidentally or inadvertently electrically charged when persons are working thereon. While lamps are being changed the pressure shall be cut off.

Provided that this Sub-rule shall not apply to the cleaning of commutators and slip rings working at low or medium pressures.

(8) The person authorised to work an electrically driven coal-cutter or other portable machine shall not leave the machine while it is working, and shall, before leaving the place where such machine is working ensure that the pressure is cut off from the flexible trailing cable which supplies such machine. Trailing cables shall not be dragged along by the machine when working.

(9) Every flexible cable shall be examined periodically by the person authorised to work the machine, and, if such cable is used with a portable machine, he shall examine it at least once in each shift. If such cable is found to be damaged or defective, it shall forthwith be replaced by a spare cable in good and substantial repair. No damaged or defective cable shall be further used underground until it has been properly repaired.

Precautions where gas exists.

99. (1) In any part of a mine or oil-field or in any working approaching such part, in which inflammable gas or vapour, although not normally present, is likely to occur in quantity sufficient to be indicative of danger, the following additional requirements shall be satisfied as regards all apparatus, including such apparatus as is working at low pressure :

(a) All cables, apparatus, signalling wires and signalling instruments shall be constructed, installed, protected, worked and maintained, so that in the normal working thereof there shall be no risk of open sparking.

(b) All motors shall be constructed so that, when any part is live, all rubbing contacts (such as commutators and slip rings) are so arranged or enclosed as to prevent open sparking.

(c) The pressure shall be switched off the apparatus forthwith if open sparking occurs, and during the whole time that examination or adjustment disclosing parts liable to open sparking is being made. The pressure shall not be switched on again until the apparatus has been examined by the electrician or one of his duly appointed assistants and the defect (if any) has been remedied or the adjustment made.

(d) Every electric lamp shall be enclosed in an air-tight fitting, and the lamp globe itself shall be hermetically sealed.

(e) A safety lamp shall be provided and kept continually burning near each motor when working and, should the appearance of the flame of such safety lamp indicate the presence of inflammable gas, all pressure shall immediately be cut off from apparatus in the vicinity thereof and the matter shall be reported forthwith to an official of the mine.

(2) If at any time in any place in such mine the percentage of inflammable gas in the general body of the air is found to exceed one and a quarter, the supply of energy shall at once be cut off from all cables and apparatus in that place and shall not be recontinued so long as the percentage of the inflammable gas exceeds that amount.

Shot-firing and signalling in mines.

100. (1) Where shot-firing is being carried on in any mine :—

(a) Temporary precautions shall be taken to protect conductors and apparatus from injury.

(b) Current from lighting or power circuits shall not be used for firing shots.

(c) Shot firing cables shall be covered and protected as provided by Rule 97 for flexible cables. Adequate precautions shall be taken to prevent them from touching other cables and apparatus.

(2) Where electrical signalling is used in any mine :—

(a) Adequate precautions shall be taken to prevent signal and telephone wires from touching cables and other apparatus.

(b) The pressure used in any one circuit shall not exceed 15 volts.

(c) Contact makers shall be so constructed as to prevent the accidental closing of the circuit.

Haulage in mines.

101. Haulage by electric locomotives on the overhead trolley-wire system, at pressures not exceeding medium, and haulage by storage-battery locomotive, may be used in any mine or oil-field, with the consent in writing first obtained of an Electric Inspector in all cases, and subject to such conditions affecting safety as may be made by him.

Exemptions.

102. (1) The provisions of Rule 85 to 100, both inclusive, shall not apply in any case, in which exemption is obtained on such conditions as he may prescribe, from an Electric Inspector, on the ground either of emergency or special circumstances.

(2) Notwithstanding anything in these Rules, any electrical plant or apparatus installed, or in use, in any mine, or in any oil-field before the coming into force of these Rules, may be continued in use unless an Electric Inspector, after consulting the Chief Inspector of Mines, shall otherwise direct, but subject to any conditions affecting safety that such Electric Inspector may impose.

Relaxation of Rules.

By the Government.

103. The Government may, by order in writing, direct that any of the provisions of Rules 36 to 102, both inclusive be relaxed in any particular case to such extent and subject to such conditions (if any) as they may think reasonable and proper in the circumstances.

By Electric Inspector.

104. (1) An Electric Inspector may by order in writing, direct that Rules 35, 46, 53, 56 (1), 59, 60, 61, 62 (1) and 63, be relaxed in any particular case to such extent and subject to such conditions (if any) as he may think reasonable and proper in the circumstances.

(2) Where the pressure on any system does not exceed 125 volts, an Electric Inspector may, by order in writing, direct that any of the provisions of Rules 36 to 40, both inclusive and 47 to 99, both inclusive, be relaxed as regards such system to such extent and subject to such conditions as he may think fit.

(3) Every relaxation so directed shall be reported forthwith to, and shall be subject to disallowance or revision by, the Government.

Regarding the Revision of Pathivus of Minor and Petty Devaswoms by a system of Endowments passed by the Government under Section 8 (3) of the Devaswom Proclamation.

(Dated—April 1927.)

With a view to enlist the active co-operation of the public in the administration of Devaswoms and to ensure a more efficient and better working of the Minor and Petty Devaswoms in the State, it has been decided to provide for the revision and enhancement of pathivus of these institutions by inaugurating a system of endowments. The following Rules are passed for the purpose under Section 8 (3) of the Devaswom Proclamation, dated the 12th April 1922.

1. The Government on behalf of the Devaswom will accept endowments in cash or in the shape of other moveable or immoveable property for the purpose of revising the pathivu in any of the Minor and Petty Devaswoms mentioned in the revised Schedule of Devaswoms published at pages 67 to 72 of the Gazette dated 28th October 1924 subject to the conditions contained in these Rules.

2. Any person or persons willing to contribute towards the revision of the pathivu of any Minor or Petty Devaswom should make an offer in writing to that effect to the Devaswom Commissioner specifying the amount of money and the particulars and value of other property he is prepared to contribute and the nature of the additional pathivu he desires to be introduced in the Devaswom.

3. Every such offer will be considerd on its merits by the Devaswom Commissioner with special reference to:—

(a) the need for such revision of the pathivu of the Devaswom;

(b) the importance of the Devaswom;

(c) its usefulness to the public; and

(d) the amount of the contribution offered.

4. Subject to the provisions specified in paragraph (3) above, the offers will be dealt with in the order of their priority.

5. The pathivu of the Minor or Petty Devaswom will, as far as possible, be revised on the lines suggested by the contributor provided such revision does not affect in any way the existing custom or usage of that Devaswom.

6. Cash or other property contributed for the revision of the pathivu of any particular Devaswom must be handed over to the Devaswom Commissioner. In the case of immoveable property a conveyance thereof should be made in favour of the Dewan of Travancore. If it is cash the Devaswom Commissioner will invest it in the name of the Dewan of Travancore. In the case of other moveable property it will be converted into cash and invested in the same manner as cash endowment. The investments will be in Pronotes of the Government of India or of the Government of Travancore or in the Sirkar Savings Banks as the Devaswom Commissioner may deem advisable.

7. The contribution made under Rule 6 above will, when necessary for the revision of the pathivu proposed, be supplemented by the grant of a lump amount not exceeding the amount of such contribution, from the Devaswom fund that may annually be specially set apart in the Devaswom fund Budget for contribution for endowments to Minor and Petty Devaswoms.

8. The contribution made under Rule 6 and the amount that may be contributed from the Devaswom fund under Rule 7 shall together constitute the endowment for the revision of the pathivu.

9. No such endowment shall be constituted unless the Devaswom Commissioner is satisfied that the income from the fund will be sufficient for the revision of the pathivu proposed.

10. When at any time it is found that the income from the endowment is inadequate to meet the expenses connected with the revised pathivu for which the endowment was constituted, the Devaswom Commissioner is competent to direct any modification in the pathivu so as to keep it within such income. But the original donor or donors or any other person or persons if willing, may make up the deficiency by a fresh contribution towards the endowment. No additional amount will be contributed from the Devaswom Fund for such purpose.

11. Money or other property contributed by a donor or donors and constituted or incorporated into an endowment under these Rules shall vest absolutely in the Government on behalf of the Devaswom and shall at no time and under no circumstances be liable to be returned to the donor or donors.

12. The Devaswom Commissioner reserves to himself the absolute right of rejecting or accepting any contribution offered under these Rules.—

REGULATION II OF 1098 (Destruction of Records).

---

I. RULES.

The following Rules are issued under Section 2 (c) of Regulation II of 1098 for the destruction of useless records in the possession of the Maramat Department.

(R. Dis. No. 1637 / 29/P. W., dated 13th June 1929.) †

1. Three lists prescribing the periods for the retention and destruction of the records of the Maramat Department are appended to these Rules. The first deals with the records of the Maramat Engineer's Office, the second with those of the Maramat Circle Offices and the third with those of the Section Offices.

2. The Maramat Engineer shall be competent to sanction the destruction of such records as are useless and which have been in existence for the required number of years as specified in the lists appended to these Rules.

3. Every Maramat Circle Officer shall early in Kanni each year submit to the Maramat Engineer for sanction a list of the records of the Circle and of the Section Offices under him, which may, in his opinion, be destroyed, regard being had to the periods prescribed for their preservation.

4. Simultaneously the Maramat Engineer shall cause to be prepared a list of the records that are due for destruction belonging to his office also.

5. The Maramat Engineer shall then go through these lists and sanction the destruction of such of the records as are in his opinion undoubtedly useless. He may order the retention of any paper or papers for any longer period or permanently.

6. Records of works valuable from a professional point of view should on no account be destroyed.

7. A consolidated list of records sanctioned to be destroyed each year shall be published in three successive issues of the Government Gazette, after which they may be destroyed.

---

† T. G. G., dated 23-7-1929, Pt. I, Pp. 849—852.

8. The records shall be destroyed by burning and not disposed of in any other manner.

9. The records intended for destruction should first of all be scrutinised by the Maramat Circle Officer so far as the Circle and Section Offices are concerned and by the Manager as regards the Maramat Engineer's Office, so as to see whether they are as mentioned in the sanctioned list. The records so scrutinised shall be carefully sorted out and kept under lock and key till the date fixed for their destruction, lest other papers get mingled with them.

10. On the date fixed, these records of the Circle and the subordinate offices, shall be burnt in the presence of the Maramat Circle Officer and Section Officer respectively and those of the Maramat Engineer's Office in the presence of the Head Clerk and the Record Keeper.

11. Each Office shall maintain a permanent register of the records destroyed showing the sanction, date of destruction etc.

I. GOVERNMENT NOTIFICATIONS.

(Dated 10th June 1895).

Under Section 8 of Regulation II of 1070, it is hereby notified that His Highness the Rajah of Cochin may sue and shall be sued in the Civil Courts of this State in the name of his Dewan.

This Notification shall have retrospective effect from the 28th Kanni 1067.

In supersession of Notification No. J. 4026, dated the 1st May 1920, published at page 466 of Part I of the Government Gazette, dated the 4th May 1920, it is hereby notified that, by virtue of the powers conferred by Order XXVII, Rules 1 and 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure, Regulation VIII of 1100, as amended by Regulation X of 1100, all Heads of Departments, all

Heads of Offices working immediately under and directly responsible to Government, and the Division Peishkars and the Commissioner, Devicolam, are hereby authorised to act for Government in suits in Civil Courts relating to any transaction falling within the ordinary duties of their respective offices, and are further authorised to sign and verify pleadings and do and perform all other acts that a recognised Agent in any Civil Suit may do and perform.

T. G. G., dated 5-6-1928, Pt. I, P. 695

II. CIVIL CIRCULARS.

(1)

It has come to the notice of the High Court that in several of the subordinate Courts, fresh registration fees are not levied in suits and appeals relating to immoveable properties on their restoration to file in consequence of an order made by the Court which decided the suit or appeal or in consequence of an order of remand as required by paragraph 3 of Rule 790 of the Civil Courts' Guide. The attention of all the subordinate Courts is therefore invited to the Rule in question and the impropriety of the omission to levy fresh registration fees in such cases and they are hereby directed to see that in future the provisions of the said Rule are strictly complied with and fresh registration fees as per paragraphs 1 and 2 of the said Rule are levied in all such cases on restoration and fresh registration yadasts sent to the respective Sub-Registrars after re-disposal and that the necessary fees are levied in all such pending cases as well.— Civil Cir. No. 1 of 1103.

(2)

It has come to the notice of the High Court that there is considerable remissness on the part of the presiding officers of several of the subordinate Courts in the matter of framing issues for trial. The provions of Rule 64 of the Civil Courts' Guide laying down the procedure which shall ordinarily be followed by the Courts in settling issues in original suits and other proceedings of a similar nature under special enactments are very rarely found complied with. It is also sometimes found that the pleadings are prepared not by the presiding officer but by the Vakils appearing in the case—a practice which is in direct contravention of the Rule referred to above. The High Court therefore invite the attention of the subordinate judiciary to Rule 64 of the Civil Courts' Guide and direct that the provisions of that Rule shall be strictly adhered to in future.— Civil Cir. No. 2 of 1103.

It has come to the notice of the High Court that the provisions of Rule 776 of the Civil Courts' Guide which directs that copies of a document signed by the presiding officer of a Court prepared either for delivery to the parties or their Vakils or for preservation in the office, shall mention the name of the signatory and his official designation and that signatures of presiding officers appearing in the records shall be legible and the provisions of High Court Proceedings dated 19th Kumbhom 1075 enjoining legibility of signatures of all Judges and Munsiffs and Magistrates are not being acted up to by Judicial Officers.

The High Court therefore invite the attention of the subordinate Civil Courts to the Rule and Proceedings above referred to and enjoin on them strict compliance in future with the provisions aforesaid.—

CASE LAW.

REVENUE SETTLEMENT PROCLAMATION, 1061.

1. Thanathuchitta lands assessed to the revenue as on Pandarapattom lands at the Revenue Settlement are within the prohibition in Clause 31 of the Proclamation of 14th Kumbhom 1061, and the tax fixed on them is not enhanceable for thirty years from date of the Settlement either by altering the Tharam or otherwise to the prejudice of another who has accepted title of the lands independent of the will of the Government (F. B.).—

2. Neither the provisions of Section 19 of the Settlement Proclamation of 1061 nor the Government Notification of 20th Makarom 1081 would apply to Thiruppuvarom specified in the Pattah.

The provision enabling payment in money of one-half at the original commutation rate of six Chuckrams per Parah as enjoined in the Proclamation and the provision sanctioning payment of the remaining one-half at eleven Chuckrams per Parah according to the Government Notification referred to related only to the Government demand which would connote the balance payable to the Sirkar Offices after deductions towards Thiruppuvarom and other dues.—

VIRUTHI PROCLAMATION, 1061.

Where registry is granted by the Settlement authorities of Erayali land, in the joint names of persons, all of them become co-owners of the property.

Where one of the co-owners was holding the property for himself before and after the registry, to the exclusion of the other, and such exclusive possession has continued, after the party who was excluded, acquired title to the property for more than twelve years, prior to the date of suit to establish title and obtain possession:

Held,—The rights of the latter were lost by adverse possession.

The grant of joint Pattah will not alter the nature of the exclusive possession of one of the parties, and the ordinary rule, that the possession of land, under the common title of a co-owner will not be presumed to be adverse to the others will be sufficiently rebutted by proof of exclusive possession.— 18 T. L. J., 48.

REGULATION V OF 1067 (Criminal Procedure Code).

Section 4 (a).

An information of an offence laid under Section 41 of the Police Regulation is quite different to a Police Report under Section 170, Criminal Procedure Code. The report therefore must be regarded as equivalent to a complaint and hence Section 224, Criminal Procedure Code, is applicable. Section 224 applies only to summonses issued on a complaint.

The word "Report" in Section 4 (a) is used in the technical sense of a report as contemplated by the Code, and does not include reports which may be made under powers other than those given by the Code.

No express powers to arrest without warrant are given by the Police Regulation, though Section 41 of that Regulation allows a Police Officer to lay an information before a Magistrate.— 43 T. L. R., 379 (=17 T. L. J., 816).

Section 12-A.

It is a well-recognised principle of the Criminal Procedure Code that the judgment must be delivered by the Magistrate who has heard the whole case. There is nothing in Section 12-A which provides for the constitution of a Bench of Magistrates to show that there was an intention to deviate from this general principle. On the other hand, the expression "Bench" in that Section seems to be intended to mean the same set of Magistrates.

Section 261 seems inapplicable. That Section is intended to provide for cases where a Magistrate ceases to exercise jurisdiction by transfer or otherwise. It cannot be said that when a Bench Magistrate fails to attend a sitting of the Bench, he ceases to exercise jurisdiction.

The conviction and sentence in the case cannot be sustained as none of the Magistrates who decided the case was present throughout the trial (F. B.).— 44 T. T. R., 158.

Section 12-B.

1. Under the Rules framed under Section 12-B, matters relating to adjournment relate to conduct of proceedings and would fall under the category of functions exercisable by a Magistrate when sitting alone within the meaning of Rule 6. In this view the order of adjournment passed by the chairman in a case on the day on which it was taken up must be considered to have concluded the proceedings of the day and the direction of the other judges to the contrary in the matter and the order of acquittal entered by them are irregular and ultra vires.

Under Rule 7, a judgment signed by two Bench Magistrates alone cannot be considered a judgment of the Bench. Unless the Magistrates concerned had been invested with jurisdiction to act as such individually, independently and irrespective of the right to constitute a Bench of Magistrates, the judgment recorded by two members of the Bench could not be deemed to have any binding force. The signing of such judgment by the official chairman later on cannot validate such judgment.— 17 T. L. J., 402.

2. One Head Constable presented before the Bench Court Exhibit B which contained the allegation that the petitioner before the High Court had used against another individual foul and abusive words in the hearing of many men and women in a public place. Other particulars of the offence also were mentioned in it. It ended with a request that the witnesses mentioned therein and the offender may be brought before the Court and proper steps taken as required under the law. It was signed by the Head Constable and countersigned by the Police Inspector. Held,—Exhibit B should be treated as a Police Report and the Bench Court should act upon it under Rule 2 issued under Section 12-B. The term 'Police Charge-Sheet' in Rule 2 must include a Police Report.— 17 T. L. J., 908.

3. An information laid before a Magistrate by a Police-Officer in a non-cognisable case cannot be treated as a Police charge sheet for the purpose of Rule 2 of the Rules framed under Section 12-B. The Police charge sheet referred to in the Rule is the report of a Police-Officer under Section 155 in cognisable cases (F. B.)— 44 T. L. R., 304 (=18 T. L. J., 1075).

Section 19.

Section 53 of the Penal Code read with Section 19 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not make it imperative on the Magistrate to record a sentence of imprisonment in every case of default of payment of fine.— 4 S. D., 401.

Section 20.

To award life imprisonment to an accused for an offence under Section 301 of the Penal Code, in continuation of five years hard labour for an offence under Section 307, is not to go against Proviso (a) to Section 20 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

For the purpose of Proviso (a), life imprisonment cannot be treated as a punishment for any definite period, though for certain purposes of the Penal Code, life imprisonment will mean twenty years' imprisonment, and for the purpose of Prison Rules, it means fourteen years, under Central Prison Rules, No. 203 (F. B.).—

18 T. L. J., 621.

Section 26.

The object of Section 26 is to ensure that information obtained is not wilfully withheld by those whose position in the locality renders them liable to it. Its provisions are evidently not intended to be used for the purpose of vexation.

The provisions of the Section are considered to be not punitive in themselves but are provided to facilitate obtaining information as to the commission of an offence and thereby enable steps being taken promptly in the investigation of the same.

The expression "owner or occupier of land" in Section 26 (d) refers to owners or occupants of land in proprietary estates and would not cover cases of mere householders in the village. The duty is imposed on owners and occupiers of land and their agents on the ground that no officers of Government are had for the collection of revenue, as in the case of Jenmom tracts or Edavagais.

Penal statutes should be construed strictly and no case should be held to be within their reach, unless they are within the spirit and the letter of the law. If two interpretations are possible, that in favour of the person against whom the penalty is sought to be enforced must be preferred.

And judicial construction previously made will have an important bearing, for, if an act or omission has been considered all along to be not amounting to an offence, it would be undesirable and improper to treat it as an offence and punish the person responsible therefor on that basis.—

Section 57.

See under Section 182.—19 T. L. J., 30.

Section 90.

1. When a Magistrate, during the course of the proceedings under Section 90 orders any person to custody as in his opinion an immediate breach of the peace cannot otherwise be averted, it is not open to the Sessions Court to release the person, as that act will frustrate the very object for which the person is ordered to custody.—

17 T. L J., 906.

2. Where there is a bona fide dispute as to the right to the possession of the land between two rival parties giving rise to a likelihood of breach of the peace, the proper procedure is to institute proceedings under Section 128 and to decide the question of possession on the evidence and not to proceed to take action under Section 90, unless it appears that the likelihood of breach of the peace is imminent. The object of Section 90 which is intended only to the security of the public peace should not be confounded with the proceedings required to be taken under Section 128.— 18 T. L. J., 468.

3. See also under Sec. 222—

18 T. L. J., 940.

Section 102.

See under Sec. 222.—17 T. L. J., 899.

Section 127.

If it is found that a man is doing that which he is legally entitled to do and his neighbour chooses to take offence thereat and to create disturbance in consequence, the duty of the Magistrate is not to deprive the first of the exercise of his legal right but to restrain the second from illegally interfering with that exercise of legal right.

Section 127 clearly lays down that an order under the Section can be directed to the public generally only when frequenting or visiting a particular place.—

Section 128.

1. The word "possession" in Section 128 cannot mean only actual or bodily possession. The proper construction of the Section is that "by actual possession is meant the possession of a master by a servant, the possession of a landlord by his immediate tenant, the person who pays the rent to him, the possession of the person who has the property in the land by the usufructuary."

Where the first party sets up joint possession and adds that the opposite party is preparing to use force for the purpose of converting such joint possession into exclusive possession, the Magistrate is not justified in holding at once, on such admission, that the second party is in actual possession and to drop further proceedings at once.

An order of attachment passed by the lower Court cannot be lightly interfered with in revision, the Magistrate being a far better judge of emergency than a Revision Court.— 17 T. L. J., 398.

2. Section 128 (4) does not enjoin the Magistrate to set out in detail in his final order how the whole proceedings were inaugurated by him. Such an omission would be a defect in the preliminary order, but it is neither a defect nor an irregularity in the final order.

Under Clause (4) of Section 128, the Magistrate has to decide the fact of possession at the date of order requiring the parties to put in their written statements without reference to the merits of the claims of the parties to the right to possess the subject o dispute.— 17 T. L. J., 408.

3. The only thing necessary for accrual of jurisdiction for the Magistrate under Section 128 is that he should be satisfied in his mind on some materials before him which are not merely imaginary that there is fear of a breach of the peace with regard to some immovable property between the parties.

The Magistrate is not bound to act on all that is stated in the Police report before him.— 17 T. L. J., 424.

4. The proviso to Clause (4) of Section 128 simply means that even where a person cannot show that he was in actual possession on the date of the order, if he can prove that he was forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed within two months from the date of the order, his prior possession might be treated for the purposes of the Section as actual possession on the date of the order.—

18 T. L. J., 35.

5. In the nature of the peremptory provisions of Section 128, it has to be held that it is not within the competency of a Magistrate to refuse to take action under that Section and proceed under the permissive provisions of Section 90 in case he finds a breach of the peace likely by reason of disputes relating to immovable property. Section 90 is seen to deal with all cases of likelihood of breach of the peace irrespective of the nature of the dispute which causes the same, while Section 128 relates to such cases of a particular species, namely, those where the breach of the peace in question is apprehended as a result of disputes regarding immovable property. It would be proper to hold that, if the conditions laid down in Section 128 are made out to exist, action under that Section alone has to be taken.

The High Court's power of revision under Section 330 are very wide and, as representing the unlimited judicial power of the Sovereign of the State, over the subordinate Courts, its powers to cancel the errors of the lower Courts can only be limited by statute law, and no such power can be held to have been taken away by implication by statute law because no such powers have been expressly conferred by the statute.—

6. To justify inauguration of proceedings under Section 128 it is not necessary to see whether the breach of the peace is imminent as opposed to probable. The Magistrate is entitled to take action under the Section, where he is satisfied that there are grounds for holding that a breach of the peace is likely. It would be improper to import into the language of the Section further limitation as to the nature of the apprehension.

The sufficiency or reliability of the information is not one which could be enquired into by the Revisional Court.—

7. The communication of the District Magistrate to the Police, in the case, that possession was with one of the rival parties, was a finding which could be contained only in a judicial order passed under Section 128. The substance rather than the form of the order had to be looked into. It was in fact a proceeding of a Magistrate, and even if it were not regarded as a judicial proceeding, it was still liable to revision.

Where two things exist, namely, a bona fide dispute as to the possession of land and a consequent danger of a breach of the peace, the duty of the Magistrate is to start proceedings under Section 128, as only in this way can the question of actual possession be determined. An adjudication under Section 90 can obviously not be of great help, for the trouble consists in the attempt of the person who is not in possession to take possession. If proceedings are taken under Section 90, they should be taken against this party, but how can it be assumed which party is in possession as this is a matter which ordinarily must be the subject of judicial enquiry.

The actual possession by the manager of a company will not avail him if he has been validly dismissed by the company.—

8. Section 128 is applicable to cases of dispute concerning land, likely to cause a breach of the peace, even if one of the contending parties to the dispute claims only joint possession to such land (F. B.)—

9. Clause 3 to Section 128 indicates that the Magistrate is empowered after the issue of the preliminary order to bring in any other person whom, from a subsequent information, it might seem to him to be proper to bring in, the scope of the enquiry not being thereby enlarged. The enquiry must remain one as to actual possession. The Magistrate has very wide powers to add parties either on his own motion or on the application of any one claiming to be concerned in the sense that he claimed to be in possession. Parties might be added at any time before the opening of the actual enquiry. It is not, however, in the contemplation of the Legislature that parties should be added after the commencement of the enquiry, though an order adding such a party for reasons which might appear sufficient to the Magistrate would not necessarily be bad.—45 T. L. R., 52 (=19 T. L. J., 123).

10. It is the imminence of a breach of the peace that casts a duty on the Magistrate to take action under Section 128. The fact that the dispute is a longstanding one will not warrant a Court in refusing to take action.

It is now settled as far as the Travancore Courts are concerned that Section 128 can be invoked even between joint owners.

Lack of bona fides is an immaterial consideration in proceedings under Section 128. The question is one that relates to the actual possession of the property in dispute. Even in cases which exclude the possibility of any bona fides on the part of one of the parties, the Magistrate may take action under the Section to prevent a likely breach of the peace.

Absence of petitioner would not justify the rejection of his prayer to have the dispute settled by appropriate action under Section 128.— 19 T. L. J., 1092.

Section 136.

Vague, indefinite and uncertain information (on which it would not be possible to base any investigation) cannot be treated as first information under Section 136. Even if an information of a vague nature had been received earlier, statements given later if definite, certain and clear, can be admitted in evidence as the first information under the Section.

The station referred to in Section 136 can only be a station competent to prefer a charge before the Magistracy. Hence a statement recorded by an officer in charge of a non-charging station cannot be treated as first information.

First information cannot be used as substantive evidence. They could be used for the purposes of corroboration or contradiction. Such statements may be admissible as dying declarations under Section 390. But the weight to be attached to them will depend on how far they are supported by the other evidence in the case and the extent to which the solemnity of the occasion is shown to have operated on the mind of the declarant.

For the purposes of Section 390, it is not necessary that the deponent should express his apprehension of death in the declaration itself. The same would be proved from the attendant circumstances.

Every act done with knowledge of the likelihood of death resulting from bodily injury would not be murder. To constitute the same, further knowledge of the fact that the act in question is so imminently dangerous that in all probability it would cause death or such bodily harm as is likely to cause death is necessary. It should also be made out that such act was done without any lawful excuse.— 17 T. L. J., 743.

Section 138.

Where a complaint is referred to the Police for investigation under Section 138 and a report is made by them referring the case as false, it is incumbent on the Magistrate before accepting the report to allow the complainant an opportunity to adduce the evidence he offers in support of his case. Section 181 has no application to cases referred under Section 138. Section 181 contemplates investigations under Section 180 on receipt of a complaint upon distrusting the truth of the allegations made therein. A reference for investigation under Section 138 is not one made on distrusting the truth of the complaint.— 18 T. L. J., 288.

---

Section 146.

The statements recorded under Section 146 in the absence of the accused cannot be used except for purposes of corroboration or contradiction of the statements given by those witnesses before the Sessions Court. Even if they are taken in the presence of the accused, they could not be treated as substantive evidence in the case, as they would not constitute the evidence of a witness before the committing Magistrate as contemplated in Section 242. But if statements are intended to be used for purposes of contradiction, the provisions laid down in Section 145 of the Indian Evidence Act require the attention of the witness to be called to those parts therein which are to be used for such contradiction, before the writing could be proved. The prosecution is bound in such cases to allow such statements to go in and confront the witness concerned with the portions of the former statement relied on for purposes of contradiction and thereby allow the witness an opportunity to offer such explanations, as he may have, for the inconsistencies, if any.

The above remarks will apply with equal force to the statements made during the inquest, which cannot, under any rule of law, be treated as substantive evidence,

These remarks will not, however, apply to the statements of the witnesses before the committing Magistrate, as under the provisions of Section 242, the Court may, in its discretion, if such witnesses are produced and examined before it treat their statements as evidence in the case.

Although it is unsafe to base a conviction on the retracted statement of a witness, before the committing Magistrate, such conviction could not be illegal, if upon a consideration of the whole evidence the Court thinks that the statement before the committing Magistrate should be acted upon in preference to that made before the Sessions Judge. In such cases, the statements before the Magistrate must be placed on the same footing as those made during the trial itself. The Court is bound in such cases to explain why the statements before the Magistrate are preferred to those made during the trial.— 17 T. L. J., 633.

Section 173.

Before giving sanction to prosecute under Section 173, there are certain 'rules of prudence' which have to be observed and they are :—(1) There should have been a judicial determination by the Court, preceding the application for sanction, with respect to the matter for which the same is applied for. (2) The sanction must be based on legal evidence. (3) The Court must be satisfied that a prima facie case is made out so far as the person against whom the sanction is applied for. (4) Sanction can be issued only where the furtherance of the ends of justice requires it and not to satisfy a party's own private ends or personal spite.

The Court which gives sanction should abstain from giving anything like an analysis of the materials submitted to it for the purpose or expressing any opinion as to the probability or otherwise of a conviction.— 17 T. L. J., 667.

Section 175.

A public servant can be deemed to be acting as such within the meaning of Section 175 only in cases where he has jurisdiction to take action in the matter with respect to which the offence in question is said to have been committed. If, on the other hand, he is not bound in law to act in the matter, but only takes undue advantage of his position as a public servant and does the act which constitutes the offence, no sanction can with propriety be required to enable the Court to take cognisance of the same.

It is clear that the provisions of Section 70 of the Police Regulation are wider and more comprehensive than those in the Criminal Procedure Code. The provisions of the Police Regulation and the Criminal Procedure Code as regards this matter cannot be held as mutually exclusive. By the provision in the Police Regulation, the Legislature has intended to give the protection provided in Section 175 of the Criminal Procedure Code, to another class of cases which could not be brought under Section 175. The additional cases intended to be so dealt with appear to be where the Police Officer commits an act purporting to be in the discharge of his official duties. This would relate to a case where the Police Officer, though not possessing jurisdiction to deal with the matter, acts as if he had authority to do such acts. But the provision has to be strictly construed. It could be made to apply only to cases where the law allows the act, but its validity is questioned by reason of any defect in the procedure or non-compliance with certain condition precedent. If the act in question is per se unwarranted by law, the same could not be held to be covered by the Section, for it would be preposterous to hold that the commission of acts amounting to offences as an act purporting to have been done by such officer in the discharge of his official duties.— 18 T. L. J., 227.

Section 176.

1. The landlord is as much aggrieved as the lessee by trespass committed on the property and he is entitled to prefer complaint for criminal trespass, even though the trespass was committed when the lessee was in possession.— 19 T. L. J., 1297.

2. Where a major offence not requiring a complaint is charged in the first instance, but a minor offence requiring a complaint under Section 176 is proved in the case a conviction for the minor offence is good although there was no complaint of the aggrieved party.— 19 T. L. J., 1361.

Section 178.

1. The object of Section 178 is to enable the Magistrate to ascertain whether there is prima facie ground for proceeding and to prevent the issue of process in cases which are frivolous or vexatious and tending merely to unnecessarily harass the accused.

The provision is not intended to be a mere form, but contemplates an intelligent enquiry into the subject-matter of the complaint, carried far enough to enable the Magistrate to exercise his judgment as to whether there is or is not sufficent ground for proceeding.

Such a statement has to be recorded only when the Magistrate is taking cognisance of the complaint. If he refuses to entertain the complaint for want of jurisdiction, the omission to record the statement would not amount to a non-compliance with the Section.— 17 T. L. J., 664.

2. See Section 221.— 45 T. L. R., 15.
" " 304.— 19 T. L. J., 396.

Section 180.

1. The failure to record the reasons for postponement of issue of process, as peremptorily required by Section 180, is only an irregularity and not an illegality.— 17 T. L. J., 415.

2. Every complainant is entitled to have processes issued against the persons implicated by him unless the Magistrate distrusts the truth of the complaint or considers that no case is made out for proceeding with the case. In the face of the sworn testimony of the complainant, it would be unreasonable to start with a presumption of the falsity of such complaints. Normally, when the facts spoken to by the complainant make out an offence, the Magistrate should not, on the strength of the report of the Police, called for under Section 180, throw out the complaint.

It has to be remembered that Police reports by themselves cannot be treated as evidence. The statements in such reports have to be proved as much as other documents before being acted upon.— 17 T. L. J., 790.

3. The expression "if any" occurring in Section 181 clearly shows that an investigation under Section 180 is not an essential pre-requisite for an order of dismissal under the Section.

The Police statements cannot by themselves be treated as evidence. They have to be proved as much as other documents filed by the parties. The dismissal of the complaint by the lower Court as false upon the strength of the Police report alone without allowing the complainant to adduce his evidence and without even the issue of processes to the accused is unjustifiable.— 18 T. L. J., 286.

Section 182.

Under Section 182, even though the offence with which the accused is charged is one in which according to the fourth column of the Second Schedule a warrant should be issued in the first instance, the Magistrate may issue, if he thinks fit, a summons for causing the accused to appear before him. Even if he issues a warrant, he has power under Section 57 to cancel it and to substitute a summons in its place.—

19 T. L. J., 30.

Chapter XVIII.

What the Magistrate has got to determine in his preliminary enquiry is only whether there is a case for trial. 'There is always a case for trial when the evidence is of such a nature that the guilt of the accused can be held to be proved or disproved only as the result of the valuing and the weighing of the evidence.' The valuing and the weighing of the evidence for determining the guilt of the accused is the function of the trial Court, and therefore it is not correct to say that the power of the Magistrate holding the preliminary enquiry in giving an order of discharge is the same as in the cases triable by himself. As to what extent the enquiring Magistrate may go to examine the evidence to see if there is a case for commitment or trial, it may not be possible to arrive at a formula which will be of assistance in all circumstances, as each case has to be decided upon its particular facts. The following propositions may, however, be laid down as generally applicable to preliminary enquiries by the Magistrate:—

(1) The Magistrate has always to bear in mind that what he has to determine is only whether there is a case for trial by the Court of Session, and for this purpose, and this alone, he has to examine the evidence.

(2) If the evidence adduced in the enquiry is of such a nature that the guilt of the accused can be held to be proved or disproved only as the result of the valuing and the weighing of the evidence, the Magistrate has to commit the accused for trial.

(3) Where upon the evidence two views are possible, either on the merits or on any question of law, commitment would be the proper course.

(4) Where there is no evidence to prove the charge or the evidence is such that no reasonable person and no tribunal would ever on such evidence find the accused guilty, it would be a case for discharge by the Magistrate (F. B.).—

Section 186.

1. Section 186 gives the Magistrate a clear discretion to refuse to summon witnesses and his failure to record the reasons for deeming it unnecessary to do so amounts to a mere irregularity which will not invalidate the commitment, unless the accused has been prejudiced, and not an illegality, which will invalidate the commitment even if there has been no prejudice.—

2. In a case triable by the Court of Session, it is incumbent on the enquiring Magistrate under Section 186 to receive all the evidence adduced in support of the prosecution, unless the case falls under the latter part of Section 187.— 19 T. L. J., 414.

---

Section 187.

The committing Court should look to the grounds for commitment and not proceed to satisfy itself whether there is a case for conviction. The expression used in the Section is 'sufficient grounds for committing the accused'. This would not mean that no discharge is possible when there is some evidence adduced during the enquiry. The enquiring Court is perfectly competent to determine whether the witnesses are credible and the version given by them can be relied on. If the evidence renders it possible that two views can be taken, the Magistrate is bound to commit.

Again, when on the evidence a case is made out rendering the prosecution case possible but which on the existence of certain other circumstances would absolve the accused of guilt in the matter, the Magistrate should commit in order to enable the accused to prove such circumstances.

The power of the commitment Court to order discharge may be taken to be more or less the same as that under Section 230, with reference to the trial of warrant cases. The rules in warrant cases enjoining the Magistrate to have the award of the benefit of the doubt to the accused to a stage after the framing of the charge will be applicable to preliminary enquiries.—17 T. L. J., 781.

Section 192.

The absence of evidence to warrant a commitment is a question of law under Section 192.— 18 T. L. J., 384.

Section 202.

Where more than one person are tried together, it is the duty of the Court to frame certain charges against each of them. This is all the more essential where different acts are attributed to the accuseds. The charge must specify the acts for which each of the accused stands arraigned.

Under Section 202, mere omission or irregularity in the framing of a charge should be held to be curable under Section 413. But if the nature of the case shows that the accuseds have been embarrassed by reason of the defect in the charge, the conviction is liable to be set aside, as a failure of justice, as contemplated under Section 413, must be deemed to have been occasioned thereby.

Section 413 will not apply to infringements of statutory requirements of a mandatory nature.— 18 T. L. J., 627.

Sections 213—215.

In the nature of the express provision in Section 214 that a conviction could be entered under an offence, although the accused had not been charged with it in the cases contemplated therein, the argument that the provisions of this Section should be read with those of Section 204 which relates to additions and alterations of charges before judgment, cannot be accepted.

The doubts contemplated in Section 213 do not relate to facts. If there are any doubts on the facts which have been laid down as elements necessary to constitute the offence, the provisions of Section 213 cannot be invoked. But if the requisite facts are found and doubts arise as to which offence the accused is said to have committed, then alone could the provisions of Sections 213 and 214 be invoked and a conviction entered under an offence even though not specified in the charge.

The cases contemplated in Section 214 and those under Section 215 for a minor offence when the charge has been for a major offence are the only exceptions recognised by the Code to the rule that no conviction can be entered against an accused for an offence with which he is not charged.— 19 T. L. J., 32.

Section 219.

Section 219 which relates to the procedure in the trial of summons cases requires the Magistrate to explain to the accused the particulars of the charge against him before he proceeds to record the complainant's evidence. It is intended to take the place of a formal charge in warrant cases with the difference that it should be stated not after, but before the prosecution evidence is taken. It is incumbent on the Magistrate to comply with the provision and his omission to do so would amount to material irregularity which might prejudice the accused.— 17 T. L. J., 662.

Section 220.

Conviction of an accused person upon his plea of guilty, though not illegal, may not be desirable in grave offences, such as homicide. But in a summons case, where the accused pleads guilty and the plea is taken down in strict compliance with the terms of Section 220, the Magistrate is bound under the provisions of the Section to convict him, unless sufficient cause is shown why he should not be convicted.—

Section 221.

1. Prima facie the provisions contained in Section 221 would indicate that the Magistrate is bound to take all the evidence tendered by the prosecution before proceeding to dispose of the case. The disposal of the case without recording such evidence is therefore unjustifiable.

The Magistrate's omission to record his reasons for distrusting the truth of the complaint as required by Section 180 before a reference for an investigation is made, is only an irregularity curable under Section 413, and not an illegality. An interference with the order of the Magistrate could be made on this ground alone only if a failure of justice had been occasioned by the same.

The disposal of a case inaugurated on a complaint without recording the complainant's statement, after going through the several stages prescribed by the Criminal Procedure Code could not be interfered with and vacated as illegal on the strength of the above omission alone. Interference on such a ground should be confined only to cases where a failure of justice had been occasioned by reason of such omission.

Thus in cases where, in spite of such omission, the complainant is subjected to a lengthy examination at a later stage on the points set forth in the complaint, the omission to record a statement on receipt of the complaint which is in contravention of the peremptory provisions of Section 178 would be one falling under those specifically dealt with under Section 413, and the order of acquittal in a case of that kind should not be interfered with unless a failure of justice had been occasioned thereby.—

2. In summons cases, the Magistrate is bound to examine all the witnesses produced by the complainant. An order of acquittal passed without satisfying this requirement of law is an illegality.

But the Magistrate has a discretion in the matter of issuing processes to compel the attendance of the witnesses cited by the complainant or the production of documents. He is, however, bound to state in writing his reason for the refusal of such processes, so as to enable the superior Courts to examine whether the discretion allowed him in this matter has been exercised by him judiciously and not arbitrarily or capriciously.— 19 T. L. J., 457.

Section 222.

Though Section 222 does not confer on parties the right to be heard before the final decision is passed, Courts will be acting wrongfully if they refuse an express application by a party to be heard, on the ground of there being no express provision. If the accused has been materially prejudiced by this omission to hear him, the decision may be vacated in revision.

The studious avoidance of the use of the expression "accused" in the provisions of Chapter VIII of the Criminal Procedure Code, when considered along with the specific reference to the forum which could exercise jurisdiction in such cases as contradistinguished from the general provisions as regards forums contained in Sections 160 and 161 would clearly indicate that the intention of the Legislature is not to treat the persons against whom action is taken as "accused" referred to in the provisions relating to inquiries and trials in the other Chapters of the Code.

This is the preponderating view in British India as well. In this view, it is doubtful whether orders of discharge under Section 102 can be treated as amounting to acquittal.

---

Section 224.

1. In a summons case if the complainant is absent on the day to which the case is posted, the Magistrate does not act illegally in dismissing the complaint under Section 224, even though the complainant's presence was not required on that day for any particular purpose. The Section gives the Magistrate full discretion to dismiss the complaint or adjourn the trial.— 4 S. D., 402.

2. Section 224 is inapplicable to prosecutions under the Abkari Regulation. For invoking the provisions of Section 224, it is essential firstly, that the case should be one in which summons had been issued on a complaint, and secondly, the complainant should be absent on the day to which the case stands posted.

The report of an Excise or Abkari Officer regarding offences under the laws they are called upon to administer cannot be treated as a complaint under the Criminal Procedure Code. A reading of Section 170, Criminal Procedure Code, shows that the report by the Officers in the Excise or Forest Departments and the Registrar of Chitties with reference to offences on which they could take action have been declared not to constitute complaints. In this view cases of prosecutions under these Regulations cannot be considered to be those in which summonses have been issued on a complaint within Section 224, nor could the particular Officer who has sent up the Report be a complainant within the meaning of the Code.— 18 T. L. J., 1330.

3. Section 224 applies only to cases in which the summons has been issued on complaint, and, for purposes of that Section, the report of an Excise Officer is not, having regard to the provisions of Section 170, a complaint.— 19 T. L. J., 809.

4. An order of acquittal under Section 224 can be passed on the day appointed for the appearance of the accused. It is not a necessary condition that he should have appeared.— 19 T. L. J., 855.

(= 17 T. L. J., *816).

Section 225.

A distinction has to be drawn between withdrawals under Section 225 and compositions under Section 256. Withdrawals are allowed to be made by the aggrieved parties who are the complainants. This is permissible only in summons cases. In view of its being the act of only one party to the proceeding, the Legislature has laid down that the same could be allowed only in cases where the Court, on a reference to the facts made out in the case, considers it a fit case for the grant of such permission, while in the case of compositions, the same being the result of the co-operation of both parties, the Court is ousted of all jurisdiction except in cases where its leave is made a condition precedent to the same being acted upon.

The two provisions are the only provisions in the Criminal Procedure Code, whereby proceedings once launched could be allowed to be terminated at the instance of parties. In all other cases, the Courts are bound to deal with the evidence before them and pass appropriate decisions in the light thereof.

Sections 225 and 256 are exhaustive, and the same could not be invoked in cases not expressly dealt with therein.— 17 T. L. J., 865.

Section 227.

1. It is not illegal or irregular to award compensation to the accused even after a charge is framed against him.

A sentence of imprisonment in default of payment of the compensation, made along with the order for payment of compensation itself, is illegal.— 18 T. L. J., 868.

2. Section 227 applies only when a person is accused of an offence triable by a Magistrate. It cannot apply where the offence is one triable by the Court of Sessions.

An order under Section 227 cannot be passed without notice to the complainant.— 19 T. L. J., 221.

---

Section 229.

It has been held in Criminal R. P. No. 520-A of 1101 that, though a Magistrate has a discretion under Section 229 to examine only such of the witnesses as he thinks necessary, this discretion does not allow him to dispense with all the witnesses cited by the complainant. Even if this decision cannot be regarded as laying down an inflexible rule of law, it indicates a sound rule of practice.— 18 T. L. J., 1129.

---

Section 230.

An order of discharge under Section 230 cannot be considered to be a judgment as contemplated in Chapter XXV of the Code. The provisions of Section 273 cannot therefore apply to orders of discharge. Nevertheless a Magistrate should state with sufficient definiteness and precision his reasons for the discharge so as to enable the Revisional Court to satisfy as to whether the discretion vested in him has been properly exercised or not.

A bald order by him to the effect that the accuseds are discharged without stating anything in addition is not what has been contemplated by the Legislature.— 18 T. L. J., 1255.

---

Section 231.

See Section 258.—18 T. L. J., 384.

---

Section 236.

1. It is not in every warrant case that a Magistrate will be competent to pass an order of discharge on account of the absence of the complainant. Unless the case falls under Section 236, he has no jurisdiction to pass the order of discharge.— 17 T. L. J., 675.

2. The disposal of a case on a date on which it is not posted is illegal, and the Magistrate has no power to rectify the illegality. The illegal order of the Magistrate has to be set aside in revision.— 18 T. L. J., 937.

3. See also "Miscellaneous" Infra.— 18 T. L. J., 459.

Section 240.

In a trial before a Court of Session or High Court, the Public Prosecutor conducting the case for the Crown is not bound to call as a witness for the Crown or to put into the witness-box for the purpose of cross-examination any of the witnesses appearing in the calendar as witnesses for the Crown whose evidence is in his opinion unnecessary.— 43 T. L. R., 62 (= 17 T. L. J. 318).

Section 242.

1. In view of Section 242, there is nothing illegal in admitting the statement of a witness before the Committing Court as substantive evidence at the Sessions trial. But the admission of such evidence is within the discretion of the Sessions Judge. So, as in other cases where a question of the exercise of judicial discretion comes into play, the admission of such evidence must be regulated by well recognised principles. When the evidence before the Committing Court is preferred to the evidence given at the trial, the Court is bound to explain why the statements before the Magistrate are preferred. When a Court proposes to admit the evidence before the Committing Court, it is to do so only after notice to the accused and the prosecution. It is not enough to read parts of such evidence to the witness for the purpose of corroborating or contradicting him. Unless a witness has been asked to explain the discrepancy in his statement before the Committing Magistrate and that before the Sessions Court, it is not proper to transfer his previous statement before the Committing Magistrate to the record of the Sessions Court, and even if a satisfactory explanation of the discrepancy is not forthcoming, the existence of only one discrepancy will not justify the use of Section 242.

To say that where the deposition of a witness before the Magistrate differs from the deposition at the Sessions, the former is to be invariably preferred, is to state the rule inelastically. The safer rule is that, with respect to omissions in statements in Court and previous statements, it must be left to the Court in each particular case to decide whether the omission leads to a contradiction or not. If there is a satisfactory explanation the previous omission of a particular fact need not preclude the Court from accepting evidence of that fact in a subsequent statement. But as a rule a previous statement would carry great weight.— 19 T. L. J., 1402.

2. See also Sec. 146.— 17 T. L. J., 633.

Section 247.

Where a charge of previous conviction was alleged against the accused who was found guilty only of the abetment of certain offences: Held.—The Sessions Judge acted rightly in declining to proceed against the accused under Section 247.— 45 T. L. R., 14 (=19 T. L. J., 80).

Section 253.

1. Even assuming that proceedings under Section 366 partake of the nature of Criminal enquiry, it cannot be said that they are controlled by Section 253.

The object of examination of the accused under Section 253 is served by the special provision in Clause 9 of Section 366, under which the person against whom the enquiry is held may claim to be examined as a witness, and the Magistrate is bound to do so in such cases. In view of such a special rule of procedure, the provisions of Section 253 cannot be taken to have been intended to be applicable to proceedings under Section 366.— 18 T. L. J., 38.

2. The failure of the Magistrate in a warrant case to question the accused generally on the case after the prosecution witnesses have been examined and before he is called upon for his defence is a mere irregularity which could be condoned in case the Magistrate has questioned the accused before framing the charge and has given him an opportunity to explain the circumstances appearing against him in the prosecution evidence. Unless fresh circumstances are brought to light by the examination of the prosecution witnesses after the charge is framed, it is not likely that the accused would be prejudiced.— 18 T. L. J., 128.

Section 255.

1. A Sub-Registrar refused the registration of a document on the denial by the alleged executant of his signature in the document; and the first accused (who presented the document for registration) appealed to the District Registrar who held the document to be a forged one. The 1st accused then instituted a civil suit to have the document compulsorily registered. Meanwhile, criminal proceedings had been instituted by the alleged executant in respect of the forgery. The 1st accused sought to have the criminal proceedings stayed till the disposal of the civil suit. The Magistrate refused stay of criminial proceedings. On revision before the High Court : Held.—It was not obligatory on the Magistrate to stay proceedings till the disposal of the civil suit, and he might use his judicial discretion in the matter.— 4 S. D., 410.

2. While on the one hand it would be a dangerous doctrine to lay down a hard and fast rule to the effect that a criminal trial or enquiry should of necessity be stayed, because a civil suit has been instituted between the parties in which some of the matters in issue in the criminal case would have to be determined, it cannot be denied that, in some cases, it would be obviously undesirable to allow the same dispute to be fought out in two Courts, namely, the Civil and the Criminal.

It is unsafe to lay down a general rule that no stay of criminal proceedings can be ordered when the civil suit has been instituted later.

The objection that once the criminal proceedings against the accused are stayed, he will be in no hurry to bring the civil litigation to a close cannot hold good where the complainant himself has started the civil proceedings.

It is entirely within the discretion of the Magistrate to stay proceedings till the disposal of the civil suit, and the High Court will not interfere unless the discretion has been exercised arbitrarily so as to defeat or hamper justice.— 17 T. L. J., 911.

Section 256.

See Sec. 225.—17 T. L. J., 865.

Section 258.

The provisions of Section 258 are not controlled by Section 231 and the discretion vested in the Magistrate under Section 258 is very wide.— 18 T. L. J., 384.

Section 261.

1. A preliminary enquiry by a Magistrate into a case exclusively triable by a Court of Session is not, before framing of the charge, a 'trial' within the meaning of the Proviso (a) to the Section and a Magistrate who succeeds another is not bound in such a case to resummon and rehear the witnesses examined by his predecessor, though demanded by the accused.— 43 T. L. R., 324.

2. In a case governed by Proviso (a) to Section 261 which requires not exactly a recommencement of the trial but only the resummoning and rehearing of such of the witnesses as may be required by the accused, the second trial should be treated as a continuation of the first, the charge framed by the first Magistrate also continuing.— 18 T. L. J., 119.

3. See also Sec. 12-A.—44 T. L. R., 158.

Section 273.

1. Under Section 273, a Magistrate is bound to specify in his judgment of what offence the accused is found guilty.

Such omission will not however vitiate the judgment where the accused has not been prejudiced. Such a defect is curable under Section 413 where no failure of justice has been occasioned.— 18 T. L. J., 1071.

2. See also Sec. 230.— 18 T. L. J., 1255.

Section 290.

Custody under Section 290 of an accused is not simple or rigorous imprisonment for the offence, but only detention in custody pending judgment of the Appellate Court (like detention and remand pending trial in the original Court).— 4 S. D., 393.

Section 291.

Where a prisoner was sentenced on 17-1-1081 to 15 days' rigorous imprisonment and to receive ten lashes, the question arose as to when the sentence of whipping should be inflicted on him: Held.—Under Criminal Circular 10 of 1078 the prisoner ought to be released on the 15th day, i. e., on the 31st Chingom and at such time of that day as will enable him to reach his house before dark. Section 291 should be construed in the light of this Circular which has the force of law. The 15th day must be taken to expire on the afternoon of the 31st, i. e., at the point of time indicated by the Circular. At that time, therefore, the whipping may be inflicted.— 4 S. D., 392.

Section 295.

See 'Miscellaneous,' Infra.— 18 T. L. J., 459.

Section 304.

1. To attract the provisions of Section 304, it is essential to make out—

(1) That the accused indicted a second time was charged before a Court of competent jurisdiction.

Where a complaint or sanction, as required in Sections 173 to 177 is not had at the previous trial or where the Court had not the power to try the case consistently with the provisions of Sections 160 to 165 relating to local jurisdiction except in cases where the same had been transferred to its file by an appropriate proceeding by a Court of competent jurisdiction, an order of acquittal passed in an earlier case even if it be on the same facts and not covered by the exceptions set forth in paragraphs 2 and 3 of Section 304, would not operate as a bar in a second trial.

(2) That he was tried by that Court before. The trial should be deemed to have commenced after the inauguration of proceedings before a Court.

(3) That he has been acquitted or convicted by that Court.

It is not open to the Court before which the second case has been brought, to impeach the order of acquittal as improper on any ground. In considering whether there has been an order of acquittal or not, it is the substance of the decision and not the wording that ought to be looked into. An acquittal may be validly entered so as to bar a further trial, even where the trial has not been completed, as would result from the non-appearance of the complainant under Sections 234 and 236 and withdrawals under Sections 225 and 271. An acquittal under the Section need not necessarily be on the merits for applying the rule of autrefois acquit.

(4) That such acquittal or conviction remains in force.

If the order of acquittal has been set aside by a superior Court in appeal or revision, the provisions of this Section are inapplicable.

(5) That the second trial has been for the same offence or on the same facts for any other offence for which a different charge from the one made against him might have been made under Section 213 or a conviction entered under Section 214.

What is to be considered is whether the Court which tried the first case can upon the evidence deal with the offence for which the charge has been laid at the second trial, i. e., whether the facts are the same in both trials and whether the acquittal on the first charge necessarily involves an acquittal on the second charge. Held applying the above conditions.—The words alleged to have been used by the accused may perhaps amount to an offence under Section 292 of the Penal Code triable summarily by the prior Court as a Court of competent jurisdiction and as process had been issued to the accused before the complaint was withdrawn in the prior case, he must be deemed to have been tried and acquitted before.

However as the present charge was one under Section 507 of the Penal Code which is compoundable without the permission of Court and therefore requires a complaint by the aggrieved party as a condition precedent for cognisance by the Court, the order of acquittal in the prior case would not render the present trial incompetent.—

45 T. L. R., 384.

2. A prior order of discharge will not justify a refusal to re-entertain a complaint as the only bar which would justify such a course is the rule of autre fois convict and autre fois acquit contained in Section 304.

The refusal to re-entertain a complaint without conforming to the procedure of Section 178, is an irregularity which would require the order to be vacated if there has been a failure of justice.— 19 T. L. J., 396.

---

Section 317.

In warrant or non-compoundable cases, where their conduct in the trial Court was entirely in the hands of the Police, no notice of appeal to complainant is necessary

Where the complainant had the control of the prosecution before the trying Magistrate or where proceedings were initiated by a private party and he was allowed to continue the case independently of the Police, or where the Police sent up a referred charge sheet but; the complainant was able to substantiate his allegations by evidence adduced by him, or in compoundable cases and in cases where the offences are compoundable with the permission of the Court under paragraphs 2 and 3 of Section 256, a notice to the private complainant may be considered essential in the interests of justice, and a failure to do the same may, in appropriate cases, be put down as irregular so far as proceedings in Appellate Courts are concerned.— 17 T. L. J., 657.

Section 318.

1. Where in an appeal from conviction, the Appellate Court reverses the finding and sentence and orders a re-trial of the accused under Section 318, Clause (b), the whole case is re-opened and the accused must be tried again on all the original charges. The effect of a reversal of the conviction and an order for re-trial is to wipe out the proceedings previously taken. The subordinate Court to which the case is remanded for re-trial should start the trial afresh, receive all the evidence and decide the case upon the evidence received in the fresh trial. It should completely detach itself from any impression formed upon the evidence taken at the previous trial and come to an independent conclusion. The statements of the same witnesses obtained at the previous trial cannot be admitted and read as substantive evidence, even though the accused consents thereto, but they might be used for the purpose of corroboration in the manner and to the extent allowed by the rules of evidence.

Per Bhoothalingam Aiyar, J.—The retrial ordered under Section 318, Clause (b), should commence alike in summons and warrant cases from the time when the accused appears or is brought before the Court.—

2. An Appellate Court could alter the findings of the first Court on the facts appearing in the evidence and could convict for offences of which the lower Court had acquitted the accused, provided it does not interfere with the sentence and provided also that the accused knew the charges sustained by the Appellate Court from the commencement.— 19 T. L. J., 828.

---

Section 319.

1. Where the law allows an appeal, the appellant is entitled to have from the Court of Appeal that has to deal with it an explicit opinion on the questions of fact involved in the case, and the Court of Appeal should take its own view of the evidence after perusing the record. Its judgment should be such that the High Court as a Court of Revision might, on looking into the judgment, be in a position to judge for itself what the case is and how far the Court of Appeal has considered the evidence as bearing on the guilt or innocence of the individual accused before it affirmed the judgment of the trial Court. In the case of joint trial, the judgment of the Appellate Court, dealing with the case of several accused should show on the face of it that the case of each accused has been taken into consideration, and should state reasons, as far as may be necessary, to show that the Court has devoted judicial attention to the case of each accused.— 17 T. L. J., 308.

2. An Appellate Court which writes a judgment which the High Court in revision is unable to follow without reference to the judgment of the trial Court is not acting obviously in the discharge of the duty imposed on it by law. The judgment of an Appellate Court dealing with the cases of several accused convicted in a joint trial must show on the face of it that the case of each accused has been taken into consideration and should state reasons to show that the Appellate Court has devoted judicial attention to the case of each accused.—

17 T. L. J., 740.

Section 326.

The Dewan acting under Section 2 of the Extradition Proclamation of 4th Karkatakom 1093, cannot be deemed to be a subordinate Court within the meaning of Section 326, so as to enable the High Court to revise the Dewan's order.—

Section 329.

The report contemplated in Section 329 must necessarily relate to the correctness, legality or propriety of any finding, sentence or order recorded or passed or the regularity of the procedure adopted by an inferior Criminal Court. It must relate to something already done by such subordinate Court, the legality, propriety or soundness of which is doubted by the referring Court. The provisions of the Section could not legitimately be invoked for inviting the views of the High Court upon a question of law in a pending case, which either the trying Court or the referring Court finds it difficult to solve. To construe the Section as admitting of such reference would afford a premium to the subordinate judiciary to seek for pronouncement of opinion on questions which they are called upon to solve in matters coming up before them judicially. Such shirking of responsibility on the part of the subordinate judiciary has to be invariably dis-countenanced by the High Court and a discharge of the duties cast upon the subordinate Courts by the statute always rigidly enforced. The provisions relating to reference contained in Chapter XXXI of the Code requires the High Court to act as a Court of correction and not as a referee or legal adviser with respect to matters in the solution of which the law requires the subordinate Courts to act independently.— 17 T. L. J., 502.

Section 330.

1. The powers of the High Court in revision are very wide and in appropriate cases, it would only be reasonable to re-open the conviction and sentence where notices of enhancement are issued to accused, though ordinarily the High Court would be reluctant to disturb the findings of fact by the lower Court.

It is with a view to accord legislative sanction to this principle that Section 439 of the Indian Criminal Procedure Code has been amended by the introduction of Clause (C). This amendment could with advantage be adopted by our Legislature also.

An enhancement of sentence should be ordered only when that already imposed is manifestly inadequate and the powers of the High Court should be exercised in exceptional circumstances.— 17 T. L. J., 836.

2. Powers of interference in revision against acquittals should be most sparingly exercised and only in cases where it is urgently demanded in the interests of justice or when there has been a denial of the right of fair trial.— 18 T. L. J., 171.

3. See also Sec. 128.—18 T. L. J., 342.

Section 333.

Section 349.

A judicial enquiry into the soundness of mind or otherwise of the accused has to be considered indispensable in the light of the express provisions of Section 349. In the nature of the provisions in Sections 347, 349 353 and 354, the fitness of the accused for making the defence has to be determined judicially by the Magistrate and not upon the strength of any letter received by him from Government. Even if it be held that the certificate of the Darbar Physician or visitors which has been declared to be receivable in evidence in such cases under Section 354, is deemed to be sufficient to make out such fitness, it is seen that such a certificate was not available, in the case, before the Magistrate at the time he resumed the enquiry. The letter from Government could not be considered legal evidence. Also, the Surgeon doing duty as Darbar Physician did not make a personal examination of the accused, but simply acted upon the report of the Medical Officer in charge of the Lunatic Asylum in that behalf. The communication upon which the Government acted could not therefore be considered to be a certificate issued by the Officers specified in Section 354 and declared to be receivable in evidence thereunder. The Medical Officer in charge of the Lunatic Asylum could not be taken to be a visitor as contemplated by the Section.

In enquiries as regards the soundness of mind of accused conducted under Chapter XXXIII, the burden of proving soundness of mind and capacity to make his defence is on the prosecution.

A letter of the Medical Officer per se should be considered insufficient to prove such soundness.

The omission to take evidence as to the capacity of the accused to make his defence at the time of the resumption of the proceedings by the Magistrate has therefore to be pronounced irregular.

But this irregularity cannot vitiate the whole proceedings as it could be cured by Section 413, inasmuch as it could not be said to have occasioned a failure of justice within the meaning of the Section. In determining whether any particular irregularity is or is not curable under Section 413, the tests to be applied are whether the error goes to the root of the trial, whether it in effect vitiates the proceedings, whether the Court assumed an authority which it did not possess, and whether it had broken the vital rules of procedure. If all the above questions are answered in the affirmative, the defect will have to be treated as incurable. The mere fact that a certain provision of the Code is imperative does not of itself indicate that breach of that provision vitiates the whole proceedings. In fact an error could be occasioned only by a transgression of some provision of the Code. If the matter had been discretionary, the omissions relied on could not be called errors at all.

Inasmuch as the trial had already taken place, its validity alone has to be considered. Any defect or irregularity in the procedure adopted by the enquiring Court cannot vitiate the trial, for the power vested in the High Court under Section 192, to quash the commitment could not be exercised after the accused had been put on trial and had pleaded to the charge before the Sessions Judge.

Though it is incumbent upon the Sessions Judge not to proceed upon the order of the committing Magistrate regarding the mental condition of the prisoner in a case where action was taken under Section 345, and the prisoner declared to be of sound mind after the examination by the Medical Officer, where he himself entertained doubts about the mental state of the prisoner at the time of the trial, but to hold an independent enquiry into the matter himself, such a course is not necessary if there is no room for his entertaining such doubts.—

17 T. L. J., 262.

Section 360.

The directions contained in Section 360 are mandatory and the omission to record the particulars required by the Section are fatal to the proceedings taken thereunder.

If the offence is under Section 226 of the Penal Code, the record must also show the nature and stage of the judicial proceedings in which the Court interrupted or insulted was sitting and the nature of the interruption or insult.

Contempt of Court being a criminal offence, no person can be punished for such unless the specific offence charged against him is distinctly stated and an opportunity given him of answering.

Refusal to enter the witness-box is an offence under Section 172 of the Penal Code.— 43 T. L. R., 209.

Section 366.

1. It is only when there is a wilful neglect of the order to pay maintenance that the Magistrate can, under Section 366, issue warrant for the levy of maintenance. Hence, if the matter has been once settled between the parties out of Court and after the order to pay, no warrant can issue for the levy of maintenance under the order.—

4 S. D., 405.

1. Under Section 366, a father cannot refuse to maintain his children on the ground that they live with their mother, if they are unable to maintain themselves. A father offering to maintain his minor child only if left in his custody may be guilty of neglect or refusal in the eye of the law to maintain the child.— 17 T. L. J., 306.

2. The form where proceedings under Section 366 have to be conducted will have to be determined by reference to the provisions relating to the same contained in Clause II of the Section itself. The use of the word "accused" will not warrant the view that Section 160 of the Code relating to the forum which has to enquire into and try offences, will be applicable to proceedings under this Section.

It is a general rule of construction that of two Clauses occurring in a statute, one having a general application and the other applying to a particular class of cases, the latter will control the former.

It is doubtful whether the expression "Offence" in Section 160 is to be construed as covering cases of neglect and refusal under Section 366.

The word "may" in Clause II of Section 366 does not mean that it is open to the petitioner to choose the forum herself. Though the choice of the forum is left to the petitioner, such choice is required to be made from among the Courts specifically enumerated in the Section.

It is doubtful whether the expression "in the District" occurring in Clause II can be construed as denoting the particular portion of the District over which jurisdiction has been conferred on the First Class Magistrate before whom proceedings have been taken. As the Clause stands, initiation of proceedings under Section 366 before a First Class Magistrate in the District in which the counter-petitioner resides, although the place of residence would be beyond the actual limits of the territorial jurisdiction of his Court, cannot be treated as unwarranted by those provisions.

It is only in cases where no permanent place of residence is had by the parties, a temporary sojourn could not give jurisdiction to Courts within the territorial jurisdiction of which the same is made. The preponderance of authority favours the view that if the stay at a particular place is made bona fide and is not casual, colorable or collusive for the purpose of creating jurisdiction, the same would be sufficient to create jurisdiction in spite of the stay being only for a short period.

In all applications for transfer, the truth or otherwise of the allegations will have to be examined, and the Court will have to decide whether on the facts disclosed, a reasonable inference of apprehension could be drawn. An improper exercise of discretion or a bona fide mistake of law cannot be sufficient ground. The Courts should refuse to subscribe to the doctrine that a litigant should be able to get a transfer upon an application containing unfounded and baseless allegations against a judicial officer and thereafter representing that after making such allegations, it would not be possible for him to expect justice at his hands. Casual acquaintance with parties cannot bar judicial officers from taking congnisance of controversies coming before them.

The powers of the High Court cannot be invoked in revision with regard to orders of transfer, unless the discretion has been exercised on improper grounds.—

4. The educational expenses of a child cannot be regarded as coming within the meaning of the word maintenance. The object of proceedings for maintenance is to prevent vagrancy, and that object is attained by the provision of lodging, food and clothing. It does not include the cost of education.— 18 T. L. J., 173.

5. No period of limitation has been prescribed by law for enforcing the arrears of maintenance ordered by the Magistrate under Section 366. The corresponding Section (488) of the British Indian Code has been amended by the addition of a Proviso to Sub-section (3) prohibiting issue of warrant for the recovery of any amount under the Section unless the application therefor be made within a period of one year from the date on which it became due. In the absence of such an amendment in the Regulation, the plea of absolute limitation is unsustainable.

But the plea that enforcement of payment of accumulated arrears of maintenance for a long period is not within the provisions of Section 366 cannot be wholly disregarded. Enforcement of payment of accumulated arrears of maintenance ordered under the Section is a matter within the discretion of the Magistrate and the discretion has to be exercised according to the circumstances of each case. "No hard and fast Rule can be laid down as to whether a Magistrate should grant or refuse an application for recovery of arrears of maintenance. The Magistrate should ascertain in each case under what circumstances the arrears came to accumulate and if there was no good reason why the application for recovery should not have been made with greater promptitude and whether it would be equitable and in accordance with the spirit of the Code to enforce payment of the accumulation. The Magistrate should also consider whether he should enforce payment of any part of the arrears where in his opinion it is not proper to enforce payment of the whole of the arrears."

The view that payment of the maintenance awarded under Section 366 could be made only through Court has no basis in law.— 18 T. L. J., 350.

6. Civil Courts should not be allowed to restrain a Magistrate from executing his order passed under Section 366 by an injunction, on a mere prima facie case established in the Civil Courts. The case will be different when the Civil Court gives a decree after a full enquiry about the relationship of the parties.

In granting injunctions, the Court operates in personam, and there is no reason for thinking that the Indian Legislature, when it spoke of staying proceedings by injunction intended any departure from that practice. The injunction therefore operates not only as regards a Court but also the parties concerned.— 43 T. L. R., 426
(=18 T. L. J., 694).

7. The liability to maintain the children under Section 366 continues till the completion of the 18th year of age of the children, in the absence of an allegation that they are maintaining themselves earlier.

The word "child" means a person who has not reached full age. It is only when the person concerned becomes a major that he may be deemed to be able to maintain himself by his own exertions, not having had before that date the capacity to enter into contracts with others or enforcing his rights himself against others. The circumstances that the minor concerned is in a position to maintain himself or herself by self-exertion cannot, under ordinary circumstances, exonerate the father from his liability under this Section. If however the Court finds as a fact that the person on whose behalf maintenance is claimed is maintaining himself or herself as the case may be by his or her own exertions, no maintenance could be awarded under Section 366, and if an award is already had, the same should not be given effect to by reason of the altered circumstances. Even after the attainment of majority, the liability may be held to continue if the Court finds as a fact that the offspring is unable to maintain itself by reason of its want of physical or mental capacity. After the Travancore Majority Regulation, VII of 1099, the age of majority of 16 under the common law of Travancore as laid down in 38 T. L. R, 51 cannot be recognised.

The marriage of a minor daughter would not per se warrant an exoneration of the father from liability to maintain.—

8. Neglect or refusal to maintain a wife or child is not an offence as defined in the Penal Code. There is therefore no question of an 'offence' in the class of cases under Section 366, and consequently there is no 'charge' which a Court has to try.

Hence Section 333 is not applicable to cases under Section 366, and European British subjects can be proceeded against in the ordinary Criminal Courts of the State on application made against them for maintenance (F. B.).—44 T. L. R., 309. (=18 T. L. J., 926).

9. In applications under Section 366, the Magistrate must clearly find the means of the counter-petitioner. What is expected of him in such cases is to determine what properties are possessed by the counter-petitioner and what income he derives from them and other sources, if any. In the absence of such a finding, any award made must, by its very nature, be arbitrary.—

18 T. L. J., 939.

10. The words "living in adultery" occurring in Section 366, Clause (5), refer to a course of adulterous conduct which is something more than a single lapse from virtue. "A single act of adultery does not necessarily amount to living in adultery so as to disentitle the wife from applying for maintenance under the Code."

A child born of a married woman has to be presumed to be the child of the husband under the principle embodied in Section 112 of the Indian Evidence Act. In order to displace this presumption, it requires the strongest proof of non-intercourse between the husband and wife during the time the child could have been begotten, and the burden of adducing such evidence is heavily on the person who pleads illegitimacy.—

11. In the enforcement of the order of maintenance passed under Section 366, paragraph 3, a certain amount of discretion is vested in the Magistrate. That does not mean he can arbitrarily refuse to enforce any order passed by him under the Section.

Enforcement of payment of accumulated arrears of maintenance ordered under Section 366 is a matter within the discretion of the Magistrate.— 19 T. L. J., 638.

12. See Sec. 253.—18 T. L. J., 58.

„ Regn. III of 1100.—

19 T. L. J., 61.

Section 367.

The Section empowers the Magistrate in appropriate cases to take the change in the circumstances of the means of the counter-petitioner and alter the rate. The Section enables the Court for sufficient cause shown even to cancel an order awarding maintenance if the child is able to maintain itself otherwise.—17 T. L. J., 342.

Section 390.

See Sec. 136.—17 T. L. J., 743.

Section 392.

1. To warrant action being taken under Section 392, there should be evidence on record.

It cannot however be laid down that the fact that a forfeiture has been occasioned should be affirmatively proved independently of any statement by the person against whom the penalty is sought to be enforced. The admission of such person can be treated as legal evidence in the matter.

Under Section 392 the Magistrate is bound to record the grounds of the proof relating to the forfeiture in the order passed by him. But omission to do so is only an irregularity which could be cured under Section 413.— 18 T. L. J., 23.

2. The crucial distinction between the offences of criminal misappropriation and criminal breach of trust seems to be that, in the case of the former, the property should have come into the possession of the offender casually or otherwise and not by virtue of a lawful entrustment. If there has been such entrustment, the offence would be one of criminal breach of trust.

Though not executed directly to the Court, Kychits executed by Moonamsthanakarans before the Police in pursuance of orders of Court have to be treated as bonds taken under the Criminal Procedure Code. The Courts under whose orders such bonds are taken have jurisdiction to take action under Section 392, and, after satisfying the requirements laid down therein, to enforce the penalty provided for in the bonds.—

Section 395.

1. Although the Criminal Procedure Code provides for no appeal against orders passed by the Sub-Magistrate under Section 395, the District Magistrate's Court has power to set aside the order. In order to give jurisdiction to the District Magistrate's Court, it is not necessary that an appeal should have been preferred or be pending in the Court. The District Magistrate has the power under Section 398 to set aside an order passed by the Sub-Magistrate under Section 395, without any appeal being actually filed.

The expression "a Court of Appeal" in Section 398 is wide enough to include a Court to which appeals ordinarily lie.

Where it is a case of discharge under Section 230, no appeal lies to the District Magistrate, and hence he is not a Court of Appeal so far as orders under Section 395 are concerned.

In a case of acquittal also, the District Magistrate is not the Court of Appeal contemplated by Section 398.—

Section 398.

See Sec. 395.—18 T. L. J., 623.

---

Section 400.

As Section 400 gives an extraordinary power to a Criminal Court, it has to be strictly construed. To justify an order under Section 400, the Court must find (1) that the offence was attended by criminal force, and (2) that some person was dispossessed of property by the use of such force. Mere show of force or criminal intimidation is not sufficient.— 18 T. L. J., 1068.

---

Section 401.

The scope of Section 401 is confined to property seized by the Police of their own motion or in exercise of the powers conferred on them by law. Once the property is sent on to the Magistrate with charge sheet, it is removed from the purview of Section 401 and the Magistrate must then act under Section 395. The provisions of Chapter XLI of the Code relating to disposal of property, not having been amended on the lines of the British Indian Code, an order for disposal of property under Section 395 can be passed only on the conclusion of the enquiry and not during the same.—

Section 404.

The principles embodied in Sections 404 and 405 are intended for general application to all Courts vested with the power of transfer, and subordinate Courts are bound to stay proceedings when they are informed that any party is intending to make an application for transfer to any Court having power to order the transfer.—

Section 405.

1. When a party to a criminal case notifies in time his intention to move the High Court for transfer of the case under Section 405, it is incumbent on the Court, before which the case is pending, to adjourn the case for a reasonable time to enable the party to make his application for the purpose to the High Court. Disregard of the express direction contained in the Section on this matter renders the subsequent proceedings illegal, especially where, without the adjournment asked for, the party could have had no time in the course of the enquiry or trial to make his application to the High Court.— 18 T. L. J., 1131.

2. See also Sec. 404.—17 T. L. J., 51.

Section 406.

1. The provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code which confer jurisdiction on the District Magistrate to transfer cases will enable the transfer of proceedings relating to a dispute as to the possession of land or water, before an order under Clause (1) of Section 128 has been passed. Such proceedings constitute "a case" within the meaning of Section 406.— 19 T. L. J., 126.

2. See also Sec. 366.— 17 T. L. J., 822.

Chapter XLIII.

Where during the course of the trial, the Magistrate was transferred, and the accused demanded of the succeeding Magistrate that the witnesses who had been examined should be recalled and reheard, and the prayer was refused : Held.—The judgment of the trial Court was vitiated by the illegal procedure adopted, and this irregularity cannot be treated as cured under Chapter XLIII of the Code.

In a case where the witnesses which the accused wished to resummon were dead or where the witnesses appeared and retracted their previous statements, it would not be permissible to treat the previous depositions as evidence.

Much importance attaches to the impression made on the Court by the appearance of the witnesses and the manner in which they depose in the box, and it is very difficult in any case to hold that the accused have not been prejudiced by the fact that the Magistrate who judged them had not the opportunity of noting the demeanour of the witnesses.— 18 T. L. J., 615.

Section 413.

1. Trial of a warrant case as a summons case has to be regarded as disobedience of the express provisions of the Code and it is more than a mere irregularity not cured by Section 413. It is practically an illeglity which vitiates the trial.—13 T. L. J., 617.

See Regn. VI of 1094.—44 T. L. R., 139 (=19 T. L. J., 28).

Miscellaneous.

1. The accused in the case were charged under Section 326 of the Penal Code. On 24-3-1102, the complainant was found not present. An order of discharge was entered under Section 236, Criminal Procedure Code. On 25-3-1102, on the application of the complainant, the Magistrate restored the case to the file on the ground that the case was really posted to 25-3-1102 and not on 24-3-1102. On the question whether the Magistrate had powers to order such restoration : Held.—The Magistrate had no such power. His order of discharge was also illegal.

An irregularity or illegality of procedure cannot make a Court's order ipso facto void. A competent superior Court alone could rectify the error committed in the matter by a trial Magistrate. It is doubtful whether Criminal Courts can rectify errors in the exercise of inherent powers, in the face of the express prohibition contained in Section 295.— 18 T. L. J., 459.

2. Where the Sub-Magistrate disbelieves the factum of the occurrence, it is not necessary for him to record a finding as to possession, and the High Court may expunge such finding if it thinks fit. But the position is different where the offence complained of involves as an essential element the possession of immovable property and where, after considering the evidence adduced by the parties on that point, the trial Court has recorded a finding as to possession. The mere fact that on some ground or other, the Magistrate disbelieves the case of a wrongful act being done on the property and at the time and in the manner stated in the complaint, should not be made a reason for deliberately nullifying a finding as to possession arrived at perhaps after laborious sifting of the evidence on both sides. The effect of such action would only be to leave the parties open to further occasion for a complaint on the very same dispute as to possession, which if the finding had not been nullified, would have been avoided.

The dicta of the High Court that, if the occurrence is disbelieved, the question of possession becomes irrelevant, are being taken advantage of by indolent Magistrates to shirk the consideration of the question of possession even in cases where a finding as to it would materially help in properly appreciating the oral evidence as to the factum of occurrence complained of.

Sub-Magistrates should be made to understand that the High Court does not encourage perfunctory disposal of cases for the purpose of avoiding the consideration of evidence as to the possession of immovable property.— 45 T. L. R., 58 (=18 T. L. J., 982).

3. The Code of Criminal Procedure provides for award of costs only in certain specified cases. In cases which are not embraced by such specific provisions, the Criminal Court would be acting without jurisdiction, if it awards costs. Chapter XXXI of the Code does not authorise award of costs.— 18 T. L. J., 1079.

4. Local inspection by Criminal Courts can be made in appropriate cases even though an express provision relating thereto is not contained in the Criminal Procedure Code corresponding to Section 539-B of the Indian Code. The omission to make a record of the local inspection imperatively required under the British Indian Section (See Vol. I, P. 370), cannot nullify proceedings unless it is shown that prejudice has been caused thereby.— 19 T. L. J., 399.

5. Criminal Courts are bound to hear arguments in open Court. They cannot decide cases on notes of arguments submitted by the Vakils. This practice was deprecated so early as 1068 by Criminal Circular 2 of 1068.

When a commission appointed for a local investigation makes a report, it is not competent for the Court, unless it annuls the proceedings of the first enquiry, to depute a second commissioner for the same purpose.— 19 T. L. J., 641.

6. The fact that a warrant case was treated as a summons case, if at all, only prejudices the accused person, and therefore is no ground for interference in revision, in favour of the complainant.— 4 S. D., 409.

7. A sentence in a Criminal Case runs only from the date of its passing. Hence, a Magistrate's discretion that the sentence passed should date from the date of arrest is wrong.— 4 S. D. 391.

8. Where a Magistrate has once issued summonses for the attendance of witnesses, he is bound to have the processes enforced before disposing of the case.— 18 T. L. J., 466.

REGULATION I OF 1068

(Revenue Recovery).

1. The provisions of Section 6 (1) and (2) and of Section 32 of the Regulation are not mere matters of form but are matters of substance. Compliance with them is an essential preliminary to a revenue sale.— 19 T. L. J., 589.

2. Section 50 of the Regulation only lays down the procedure to be adopted and does not affect the substantive rights of the parties.

All that Section 59 means is that, in respect of revenue recoverable as 'arrears of public or land revenue', the procedure laid down for recovery of public revenue due on land is applicable.

The dues to a temple assumed by Government from the properties held from the Devaswom can be recovered only by attaching the property of the defaulter.—
18 T. L. J., 687.

REGULATION II OF 1068 (Forest).

1. In proceedings under the Forest Regulation, the prosecution has only to prove that the accused is in possession of 'forest produce'; and then the burden of proving that he came by it honestly is shifted on to him.— 18 T. L. J., 193.

2. The Kanipattu tenure is of a peculiar kind. Formerly, Kanikkars were allowed to cultivate certain lands free of any tax for the services they used to render to the Sirkar in collecting honey and certain other articles from the forest. Then Kanikkars came to be paid at certain fixed rates for their services in this connection. All the same, at the time of the last Settlement, Chittas were issued to them for the holdings which they were cultivating under the old arrangement. The Kanikkars however derived no proprietary interest in the trees standing on these Kanis by the grant of the Chittas.

A Kanikkaran cutting down an Anjili tree which is included in the Reserved trees is guilty of an offence under Section 22, Clause (c), of the Forest Regulation.—
18 T. L. J., 234.

REGULATION V OF 1071 (Jenmi and Kudiyan).

Section 5.

1. Jenmom lands are irredeemable and non-Jenmom lands are redeemable. A melotti is not in the eye of the law a renewal. Even a renewal will not deprive the Kudiyan of a non-Brahmin Jenmi (who has been in possession on the whole for 25 years though from the date of the renewal to the date of suit, 25 years had not elapsed) of the benefit of Section 5 of the Jenmi and Kudiyan Regulation.

Lands described as obtained from Jenmis on Thettom mean lands obtained on Kanom mortgage from Jenmis.

Kudipulli Thanathu lands are Jenmom lands. A mortgage of Jenmom and non-Jenmom lands could be split up.—
4 S. D., 231.

2. The provision contained in Section 5 (2) would apply only to cases where the land is Jenmom land as defined in the Regulation and the same is held under a Kanapattom deed.

The above provision does not amount to a statutory bar to the creation of permanent occupancy rights as regards lands not covered by that Section.— 44 T. L. R., 11.

Section 12.

According to Section 12 of the Regulation, the Kanom tenant should give notice of his intention to surrender within 11½ years of the last renewal date. In the light of the Kanom deed in the case, he ought to give such notice at least verbally and at the latest on the last day of the expiry of 12 years, and as he did not do so, the Jenmi was not bound to accept the surrender. According to Section 17, it is the Kudiyan's duty to pay the renewal fees on or before the last day of the 12th year. Renewal fees would become payable without demand from the Jenmi on the tenant enjoying the land even one day after the expiry of 12 years without giving any notice of surrender.— 4 S. D., 186.

Section 17.

1. The legal representative of a deceased Kudiyan, who was no privy to the contract of Kanom, cannot be held to be personally liable for Michavarom, renewal fees and customary dues payable under the contract in the absence of proof of his possession of the holding. Section 17 of the Regulation refers to the Kudiyan's liability for the dues on the assumption of himself being the party to the contract of Kanom. It does not contemplate the case of his legal representative, which has to be dealt with under the general rules of law relating to contracts.— 17 T. L. J., 381.

2. The suit was for renewal of a Kanapattom deed dated 28-10-1073 and for recovery of renewal fees and other dues. The suit was instituted on 27-12-1097. The defendants contended, inter alia, that the claim for renewal fees was barred by limitation. Held.—(1) The claim for renewal fees was within time. The Kanapattom deed did not specify the date on which renewal fees should be paid. Therefore, Section 17 of the Regulation applied, and the money did not become due till after the last day of 1085. It was contended for the defendants that, under Section 11 of the Regulation, the cause of action for the money arose on 28-10-1085. But what mattered under Article 109 of the Limitation Regulation (old), which applied to the case, was not the date of the cause of action but the date when the money became due.

(2) The rights and liabilities under a deed accrue prima facie on the day it is executed and not on the day it is registered.— 19 T. L. J., 1139.

3. See also Sec. 12.—4 S. D., 186.

Section 21.

1. The yield of Pepper vines, Cherupunna and Maravatty cannot be taken into account in calculating the enhanced Jenmi Pattom under Clause (4) of Section 21 of the Regulation as they do not come under the head of trees.

When Nadavukoor is calculated for the tenant under Clause (6) of Section 21, i. e., when three-fourths of the value is fixed as due to the tenant, that becomes a debt due to the tenant payable to him in case of his liability to eviction and in lieu thereof the tenant enjoys all the trees. When this is done, all the trees become those of the Jenmi, and then it is only one-fourth of the gross yield that becomes the Jenmi Pattom. 4 S. D., 112.

2. For purposes of Section 21 of the Regulation, all the trees that have come into bearing after the date of the last renewal have to be taken into account. It is improper to take into account only the trees that have been yielding for 12 years and more or to allow enhancement only with reference to the trees that were bearing on the date of the last renewal.

Section 21 requires a deduction to be made on account of Nadavukur. The expression "Nadavukur" would include the cost of conversion of a paddy land into a garden land in which the trees are planted. The cost has to be dealt with in the same manner as the cost of planting the trees, and the Kudiyan is entitled to a reduction of the interest on this amount from the Pattom in determining the amount of enhanced Michavarom payable by him. The rate of interest would, according to Section 21, depend upon the agreement between the parties or the custom relating thereto in the locality. It is improper to ask the Jenmi to pay the tenant the cost of conversion. The amount has to be included in the Kanom amount to be specified in the renewal.

The average annual yield mentioned in Section 22 (b) of the Regulation means the gross produce from the trees and not the net annual yield.

In assessing the rate of Pattom according to Section 22 (b), there is no warrant for the view that it should be fixed on the basis of Payattupattom where there are trees. The Payattupattom referred to in the Section relates only to the probable yield of the cultivation of cereals on the property and not to the produce from the trees. It is not correct to interpret the expression Pattom occurring in the Section in any sense other than that contained in the definition of the same in Section 3, Clause (9), of the Regulation.—45 T. L. R., 5 (=19 T. L. J., 52**).

Section 22.

See Sec. 21.—45 T. L. R., 5. (=19 T. L. J., 52).

Section 44.

Section 44 of the Regulation applies only where the tenant satisfies both the negative conditions presented therein, viz., that there has been no payment of Michavarom and that there has been no renewal.—

Other Cases.

1. The suit was for redemption of a mortgage. In special appeal, the contentions were that (1) in estimating the improvements, the Judge should have made the Kudipattom and not the Jenmipattom the basis of his calculation, and (2) the mortgagee's share should be 3/4 and not 1/4 as fixed by the Judge. Held—As between mortgagor and mortgagee the valuation of improvements must be according to the gross rental of the same, i. e., the gross pattom at the time of valuation, such gross pattom being different from the Jenmipattom which in no case can exceed 1/4 of the gross yield. (See Section 22 of the Regulation).

The mortgagee's share, (i. e., 1/4 or 3/4) is governed by the usage of the locality.—
4 S. D., 161.

2. Karaima imports a permanent tenure. A Karaima Samudayam is a hereditary Samudayam. A Kuzhi Karaima tenure is a permanent improving lease. An Era Karaima lease is a permanent lease subject to the payment of Era Michavarom. When lands are held on Karaima tenure, so long as the tenants are able and willing to perform the services, the tenure cannot be put an end to whether the services were required or not.— 4 S. D., 294.

3. Mortgages of Jenmom properties by Proclamation Jenmis prima facie imply an irredeemable Kanom tenure.

Though Erakaraima falls short of an absolute sale, it is practically one.

The Jenmi who has executed an Erakaraima deed has no right to grant renewals and could not evict on the ground of the non-payment of the nominal rent reserved to him. A Kartha, the transferee of all the rights of the Namboori Jenmi is bound to respect all the legal contracts entered into by the Namboori with his Kanom tenant prior to the date of transfer.—
4 S. D., 54.

4. A vendee under an invalid sale-deed is interested in the payment of renewal fees to the Jenmi and is entitled to add that sum to the amount chargeable in his favour when the sale deed is set aside.—
4 S. D., 73.

5. A suit was brought on 18-2-1081 for renewal of a Kanom deed of 16-12-1057. The decree was passed on 20-8-1082, i. e., after the renewal deed sued for became useless and after a new cause of action accrued to plaintiff for a fresh renewal deed. Held.—The suit which was brought to get a renewal deed accepted for the 12 years' term between 1069 and 1081 could not be converted into a suit for obtaining a renewal deed accepted for a different term of 12 years between 1081 and 1093, simply because the former term expired pending suit.

Where no relief remains to be granted on the old cause of action and the relief further claimed has nothing to do with the old cause of action but is based on a new and distinct cause of action, the new relief claimed on appeal could not be granted.—
4 S. D., 325.

6. The plaint properties belonged to the second defendant's Brahmaswom and were held on Kanom by the first defendant. The latter hypothecated, and later on sold, the properties to the plaintiff. Subsequent to the hypothecation but before the sale, the second defendant had filed a suit against the first defendant for redemption of the properties and that suit was decreed in terms of the plaint. The plaintiff brought the present suit to recover the amount under the hypothecation from the plaint properties, and the first defendant alleging that the finding in the redemption suit that the first defendant had only a redeemable mortgage right over the properties could not bind him. It was accepted as common ground that the sale became infructuous by reason of the pendency of the redemption suit. Held.—(1) The finding in the redemption suit that the Kanom was a redeemable one cannot bind the plaintiff who had acquired a mortgage right to the properties before the date of that suit. The plaintiff could not be deemed to be a person claiming under the first defendant within the meaning of Section 9, C. P. C. (old).

Stipulation for payment of renewal fees or proof of such independent payment is essential to constitute an irredeemable Kanom demise in the eye of the law.

Clause (8) of the Royal Proclamation of 1042 applies only to fresh leases or mortgages after the date of the Proclamation and not to transactions anterior to the date of its issue.

There is no presumption that old mortgages executed by Royal Proclamation Jenmies are irredeemble. He who wishes to derogate from the normal incidents of ownership ought to be required to establish his contention. When the legal relationship between the parties is governed by the terms of a document, the document is the primary evidence of the relationship and its incidents must be gathered by the interpretation of the same.

The expression "Thettam" occurring in old land records has no such settled significance as Kanom. It cannot be accepted as evidencing a Kanom demise relating to the lands comprised in the same. The description has to be put down as indicative only of a derivative title from the Jenmi concerned.

(2) There was no merger of the hypothecation in the sale, and the plaintiff is competent to fall back upon the hypothecation, the sale having become infructuous by reason of the pendency of the redemption suit.

The principle relating to merger should receive a liberal application and not restricted to the state of affairs at the time of the sale. The rule should be made more comprehensive so as to bring about a merger only in cases where expressly or by implication, an intention to extinguish prior rights is made out.—43 T. L. R., 190
(=17 T. L. J., 456).

7. In the absence of a specific provision to that effect, a sale or gift of property charged with Thiruppuvarom, does not include the transfer of the right to Thiruppuvarom.

Thiruppuvarom right is not an ordinary incident of ownership.— 18 T. L. J., 47.

8. Even if a tenant has acquired a permanent right of occupancy by the operation of the Jenmi and Kudiyan Regulation, there is nothing in law to prevent him from agreeing with the Jenmi to hold the land on any other terms.

The fact that the Regulation provides for the tenant surrendering the holding on certain conditions does not mean that, in other circumstances, if both parties agree, a surrender cannot be made. The Jenmi and Kudiyan Regulation does not take away the freedom of contract of the parties.

Where the provisions of a deed are construed to find out whether it creates a Kanom tenure under the Regulation, the fact that the term fixed in it is not the usual term of twelve years is a strong indication that the parties did not intend it to be an irredeemable Kanom.

The stipulation in the deed on the part of the tenant to surrender the property at the end of the term fixed if he defaults in the payment of rent and other dues is inconsistent with the statutory characteristic of a Kanom.— 18 T. L. J., 308.

9. The Sirkar being primarily liable for the payment of Thiruppuvarom to the holder thereof, the ordinary incidents of a debt would attach to such liability. In the nature of the payment of Thiruppuvarom, a contract to pay up the same immediately after the harvest of the crop can be presumed, and a non-payment of the amount accruing due for the crop then, would constitute a breach of contract for which damages could with properiety be claimed in the shape of interest from the date of such accrual. It is the duty of the debtor to seek his creditor, and non-payment of the dues on this account at the proper time would justify the claim for interest upon the arrears due in this behalf. A notice of demand is therefore not a condition precedent to the claim of interest on the arrears of Thiruppuvarom.

The usual rate of interest on paddy loans which is 20 per cent. per annum has to be treated as the customary rate of interest on Thiruppuvarom.— 44 T. L. R., 32 (=18 T. L. J., 471).

10. Where in a Nerpattom deed express provision was made for the effecting of improvements and also for payment of Adukkuvathu : Held.—It was a redeemable mortgage. The express reference to the effecting of improvements on the property, contained in the Nerpattom deed is clearly indicative of the intention of the parties to treat the same as a redeemable mortgage. The payment of Adukkuvathu provided for in the document is not inconsistent with an intention of the kind indicated, as such payments are usually stipulated for in redeemable mortgages and even in ordinary leases in Shertallai.

The lower Courts acted rightly when they allowed compensation to the mortgagee for Lawrel, Portia and Tamarind, in the absence of evidence to substantiate the plea that these were trees of spontaneous growth.

The general rule that a deduction of one-half of the tender nuts found in a tree was necessary to be made towards droppings cannot be considered inflexible in the matter, as it must necessarily vary according to the locality, and other conditions which may affect the extent of the droppings.— 18 T. L. J., 609.

11. A consideration of the whole document and the attendant circumstances shows that the document in question, which is styled a Nerpattom deed, evidences an irredeemable demise. The contention that Nerpattom refers only to a simple lease cannot stand. Even Kanom documents are used formerly to be described as Nerpattom. Further, the nomenclature used in the document is not of much significance as the whole document and the attendant circumstances have to be taken into account in determining the legal incidents created by it.

The contention that the demise in question is redeemable having been executed by a non-Jenmi cannot also stand, as the provisions of the Jenmi and Kudiyan Regulation are applicable to cases like the present. The lands covered by the demise, which are Kudipulli Thanathu lands, are clearly Jenmom lands. The expression "Kudipulli" only indicates that the lands were obtained by others from Jenmis and therefore they have been lightly taxed. Such land is Jenmom holding as defined in Section 3, Clause (1), of the Regulation. Section 3, Clause (2), shows that the term "Jenmi" used there includes persons who cannot claim to be such under the Proclamation of 1042, but who had succeeded to the rights of the Jenmis over Jenmom properties in Court auction or private sale. Section 4 validates such transfers and Section 26 confers certain powers on the Kudiyan in such cases.

Payment of Adukkuvathu is an essential characteristic of irredeemable Kanoms relating to Jenmom lands.— 18 T. L. J., 766.

12. It is not open to a Kudiyan who admits the Kanom tenure to resist the Jenmi's claim to the renewal. To the liability to take such renewal is also attached the liability to take the renewal fees and the other customary dues. If the terms of the contract regarding such dues are not proved or if they are not gatherable from the terms, the same will have to be settled according to the custom prevailing in the Jenmi's family or the locality.

Where the Kanom tenure is admitted or a presumption of such tenure arises from the facts of the case and where the terms of the Kanom are peculiarly within the knowledge of the Kanomdar who is in possession of the title deeds, it is wrong to lay on the Jenmi the entire burden of proof regarding the terms. In such a case, the Kanomdar may be required to prove the terms of the Kanom.— 18 T. L. J., 920.

13. Although ordinarily Olappanom and Oppusuchi are used as synonymous terms, where there is proof of a special contract or custom, both the dues should be awarded.— 18 T. L. J., 1324.

14. As Kudappana trees are ordinarily grown with care, the award of compensation for these trees cannot be considered to be improper.

Betel vines are not permanent improvements in the property. No compensation can be awarded towards their value.

Black wood trees being Royal trees, it is not probable that they are trees planted and grown with care. The award of compensation for these trees is consequently improper.—

15. The suit was to recover Thiruppuvarom charged on the plaint properties belonging to the defendant and assigned to the second defendant. The Thiruppuvarom was claimed at the rate specified in the Chitta, and was valued at the nirak rate on the date of suit. On special appeal by plaintiff: Held,—The ruling in 16 T. L. J., 121 was not applicable. The nature of the Thiruppuvarom right appeared to be this. The Government, for reasons which it was immaterial to consider and which might vary in different cases, granted a part of the tax due on a property to a third party. The Sirkar also granted the lands to a Pattadar directing him to make the above payment annually to the holder of the Thiruppuvarom right and the Pattadar by accepting the Pattah might be regarded as accepting the liability to make the payment at the first rate. Assuming the Pattadar was liable to be sued at all, he was liable to be sued for the full amount to which the latter was entitled.—

16. The question whether the terms of any particular document have the effect of creating an irredeemable tenure is a question of construction.

If there is evidence to show that the property was at the time represented to be Jenmom and the transaction entered into on that basis, it is doubtful whether the plaintiff can resile from that position and contend that the legal incidents of the Jenmom property are not claimable with respect to the mortgage holding. A stipulation for renewal on payment of Adukkuvathu in regard to property described as a Jenmom holding will in law evidence the creation of an irredeemable mortgage, and if a person wants to make out that the land was not intended to be treated as a Jenmom holding as described in documents, it lies on him heavily to do so.

The right of creating permanent occupancy rights was not created for the first time under the Jenmi and Kudiyan Regulation, as the Proclamation of 1042 expressly declared permanency with respect to such alienations.— 19 T. L. J., 760.

17. The rule that Olappanom and Oppusuchi are not simultaneously awardable to the Jenmi will hold good only in the absence of a special contract or custom to the contrary.

The non-mention of Aravakasoms and other customary dues in deeds executed before the date of the Jenmi and Kudiyan Regulation would not exonerate the tenant from liability to pay them.— 19 T. L. J., 973.

REGULATION IV OF 1073.
(Abkari).

Section 19.

1. The suit was for damages by the contractor against his sub-contractor for non-purchase of spirits. The contractor had not obtained a license from Government for the transfer of the shops in question to defendant. Held.—As Section 19 of the Regulation imposes a duty on the lessee or assignee to obtain a license and as license was not obtained, the agreement was illegal.— 4 S. D., 349.

2. Licensed sub-lessees of an opium and bhang contract cannot legally and validly take a third person as partner without getting the permission of the Peishkar. 'To hold that a person who has not got a license could still be partner with the one who has a license would enable the unlicensed partner to evade the liability intended by the law to be cast on persons carrying on Abkari business' (F. B.).— 4 S. D., 359.

Sections 27 and 28.

1. Whenever an Abkari Officer whose monthly salary is not less than Rs. 20 has reason to believe that an offence under Sec. 51, 53 or 54 of the Abkari Regulation has been committed and that the delay occasioned by obtaining a search warrant under Section 27 of the Regulation will prevent the execution thereof, he may, after recording his reasons and grounds of belief enter and search any place. But omission on the part of the Officer to record his reasons or grounds of belief makes the search illegal.

In prosecutions under the Abkari Regulation where the search is illegal, the Courts cannot take advantage of the presumption allowed by Section 60 of the said Regulation. But in a case where the search is illegal, an accused should not go unpunished if the guilt can be established by reliable independent evidence and without invoking the presumption allowed by Section 60.— 43 T. L. R., 148 (=17 T. L. J., 189).

2. The Abkari Officer who elects to search a place for discovery of contraband article without the Magistrate's warrant in execution of his powers under Section 28 of the Abkari Regulation can do so only on certain conditions, the chief of which being that he should, before the entry and search, record the reasons and the grounds for his believing that an offence under the Regulation has been committed and that the delay in obtaining the search warrant from the Magistrate would prevent the execution thereof. Section 28 of the Regulation does not require that the preliminary record contemplated therein should be prepared only after going to the place of search. Provided that it was prepared before entry in the place of search, it is immaterial where and at what distance therefrom it was done. No hard and fast rule can be laid down as to what facts have to be recorded by an officer who acts under Section 28 of the Regulation to constitute his reasons and grounds for believing in the existence of the conditions stated in the Section. It depends upon the circumstances of each case.

It may however be generally stated that the record must be one from which the Court may gather that the Officer acted with due regard to the exigencies of the case and not arbitrarily without discrimination. Having regard to the principle underlying the provisions of Section 390-A of the Criminal Procedure Code, which should, under Section 5 of the Code, be taken to be applicable to the trial of the offences under the Abkari Regulation, it is doubtful if the Officer who proceeds for search under Section 28 of the Regulation could be required to state in his record the sence of the information on which he acted.

3. The suit was on a promissory note executed by defendant to plaintiff. Plaintiff and defendant entered on a partnership agreement, even before the auction sale of the shops, to conduct arrack shops as licensees under the Abkari Act. The sum under the pro-note was arrived at on a settlement of accounts between them, on dissolution of the partnership. It was contended that the promissory note being on an illegal consideration, the claim on it was unenforceable. Held.—The preponderance of authority in British India is in favour of the view that the taking in of a partner, by a licensee under the Abkari Act, does not per se amount to a transfer of the license or of any portion of the privilege granted thereunder. It is illegal only if the taking in of a partner amounts to a transfer of any portion of the privileges conferred by the license. In the case, the partnership agreement did not amount to a transfer of the privilege granted by the license to each, nor did it come under the prohibition contemplated by Clause 29 of the license granted to them under the Abkari Regulation. Consequently, the consideration for the promissory note was not illegal or unlawful.—

REGULATION I OF 1074.
(The Penal Code).

Section 28.

For invoking the aid of Section 28, it has to be made out that there has been a common intention between the real perpetrator of the act and the persons against whom a vicarious liability is sought to be imposed and that the act complained of is done in furtherance of the common intention. Under Section 141, a vicarious liability is imposed in cases where the act is done in prosecution of the common object of an unlawful assembly. The difference in the wording would indicate that in the latter case the offence committed need not be the offence intended. To make out this, the best evidence would be evidence of conspiracy or in its absence, evidence of what actually took place and what must have appeared to accused at the time as the natural consequence of his conduct.— 17 T. L. J., 819.

Section 34.

The word 'offence' is defined very widely in Section 34, as a thing punishable under the Penal Code or under any other special or local law. The definition of the word in Section 2, Clause (12), of the General Clauses Regulation is also wide.

Therefore, the principle underlying the provisions in Chapter IV, General Exceptions, is likewise applicable to the offences under any special or local law.

The decision of the Madras High Court which takes a different view (15 Cr. L. J., 171) cannot apply as the definition of 'offence' in Section 40 of the Indian Penal Code is not as wide as in the Travancore Penal Code.

The argument that none of the provisions in the General Exceptions can be applied to the offences other than those under the Penal Code would, if accepted, lead to anomalous results.

The word 'accident' in Section 69 does not mean a mere chance. It means an unintententional and unexpected act. The word implies the idea of something not only not intended but something which was so little expected that it came as a surprise. So the term 'misfortune' means the same thing—with this superadded that it was as unwelcome as it was unexpected.

Sudden illness on account of which a person fails to comply with the provisions of Section 14 (1) of the Chitties Regulation comes within the meaning of 'accident or misfortune,' and is a valid excuse.—

Section 145-A.

Section 174 of the Criminal Procedure Code only requires that complaints in respect of offences under Section 145-A of the Penal Code should be made "by order of or under authority from" Government. The Section does not require even a written authority for the institution of the complaint ; much less does it contemplate any particular form in which the authority has to be conveyed to the officer who is to set the law in motion, nor, that the order directing the prosecution should be as full and detailed as the complaint itself.

And so where, as in the case, the complaint is filed on the authority of an order which directs the prosecution of the editor and publisher of a newspaper for an offence under Section 145-A in respect of a particular article specified by title and the date of the issue of the paper in which it appeared, the provisions of Section 174 are substantially complied with, even though the order does not specify the names of the communities between whom the accused person has attempted to stir up feelings of enmity or hatred.

The true test to be adopted in judging whether the article is calculated to promote feelings of enmity or hatred between class and class is the one laid down by Justice Davar in 10 Bom., 848, in the following words :—"The true test you have to apply is to look at the various articles that are placed before you and judge of them as a whole and judge what effect they produce on your minds in the first instance, judge whether they are calculated to produce feelings of hatred, contempt or disloyalty or enmity towards Government in the minds of the readers of those articles, and judge for yourselves whether the language like this used by the accused is or is not likely to inflame" one class against another, "judge of human nature as human nature is ; judge by ordinary sound common sense and then return a verdict."

The language of Section 145-A implies that there should be present the intention to promote enmity between class and class. But the intention has always to be gathered from the language used. In so doing, the question to be considered is where the passages are such as in fact excite or disclose an attempt (which implies intention) to excite hatred or enmity towards any class ; and the publisher must be deemed to intend that which is the natural result of the words used, having regard among other things, to the character and description of that part of the public who are to be expected to read the article.

The article should, however, be read in a free, fair, and liberal spirit, and undue importance should not be attached to any strong word or objectionable passage used here and there in the article.

As the liability of the publisher for an offence under Section 117 or 145-A arises from the fact of his having published the offending article, other articles or letters (by whomsoever written) published by him in other issues of his newspaper having the same tendency to promote class hatred may well be admitted (on formal proof of publication) to show the intent of the publisher. In such cases the intention of the writer as gatherable from the language of the article must be deemed to be the intention of the publisher as well. It is anomalous to hold that the intention of the publisher can be inferred only from articles proved to have been written by him when his liability is not sought to be based on the fact of his having written a particular article but on the fact of his having published it.

The Explanation to Section 145-A saves only criticisms made without malicious intention and with an honest view to remove matters which are producing or having a tendency to produce feelings of enmity or hatred between classes of people. The article in question which is couched in a language highly offensive as a whole and in a tone exceedingly provocative and which tells the Hindus among other things that it is high time they combine in order to smite and put down "this hellish and fearful Christian Commotion and rid the country of the same," cannot be viewed simply as a catalogue of the grievances of the Hindus with an honest desire to get them removed.

A publicist is free to discuss questions of public interest with severity and if he so cares even with unfairness and unreasonableness. But he must write without malignity and without imputing corrupt or malicious motives. "Where vituperation begins, the liberty of the Press ends".

The mischief sought by such indecent and unhealthy publication may be quite out of proportion to the status and circulation of the newspaper and to the title of the editor and publisher as a sober journalist. It is almost a truism that influences for evil spread more rapidly than influences for good. The limited circulation of the paper and the obscurity of the editor and publisher cannot, therefore, be treated as extenuating circumstances in the sentence to be passed.— 43 T. L. R., 79 (=17 T. L. J., 81).

Section 172.

Section 175.

If all that is done is to indicate to the Police the person whom the complainant has reason to suspect of the commission of the offence, that cannot be treated as amounting to charging the person with having committed the offence of instituting criminal proceedings against that person under Section 206.

Section 175 covers wider ground than Section 206. False information given to a Police Officer, even though where it does not amount to "instituting criminal proceedings" against a person may be punishable under Section 175.— 18 T. L. J., 284.

Section 187.

The accused gave one statement as P. W. 5 before the Magistrate, and a totally contradicting and irreconcilable statement before the Sessions Court. The Sessions Court ordered his prosecution for perjury. The Sessions Judge acquitted the accused on the ground that his statement in the Sessions Court had been accepted as true by the High Court and that therefore the accused cannot be convicted of perjury in having made that statement. On appeal against the order of acquittal: Held.—The charge does not depend upon the truth or falsity of the statement before the Sessions Court alone but upon the totally irreconcilable character of the two statements made by the accused on oath, one or other of which must be false.

The circumstance that the second statement was upheld to be true by the High Court does not of itself make the prosecution inexpedient on the ground that such conviction would deter persons from stating the truth subsequently. The balance of expediency is difficult to determine. It would be a mere fact of conjecture, whether more harm would be caused by prosecuting such delinquents or by letting them go free on the doubtful ground that the subsequent statements are true.

Quaere.—Whether a prosecution is desirable when a false statement has been corrected immediately or in the course of the same deposition.— 18 T. L. J., 1339.

Section 293.

A Chitty scheme consisted of 400 tickets. Each of the subscribers had to pay one rupee per drawing, the tickets being liable to be prized by taking lots at every drawing. There were to be 100 drawings. The subscribers who got prizes from the 1st to the 30th were entitled to Rs.40 each, those from 31st to 50th Rs. 55 each, those getting from 51st to 70th were to get Rs. 75 each, and those from 71st to the last Rs. 110 each. The unprized subscribers at the last drawing were to be paid Rs. 110 each. The prized subscribers were declared liable to pay one-fourth rupee for every ticket prized by them for each drawing, the balance three-fourth rupee being given credit to out of the interest realised on the amount available with the foreman at every drawing, which sum was agreed to be lent out to the subscribers with interest at 12 per cent. per annum on their furnishing security. The foreman of this Chitty scheme was convicted by the lower Courts under Section 293, for keeping an office for the purpose of drawing a lottery. On revision petition put in by him: Held.—The scheme is not a lottery, and the accused is not guilty of any offence.

The main features of this scheme are:—(1) None of the subscribers lose any thing, though there is the element of chance in winning prizes. (2) There is the provision of using a portion of the collections for each drawing for giving loans to subscribers. (3) The prizes vary in amount; the value increasing in a certain definite proportion to the number of drawings for which the winner has subscribed.

The essential characteristics of a wagering contract are:—(1) One party is to win and the other party is to lose upon a future event which at the time of the contract is of an uncertain nature. (2) The winning or losing must depend entirely upon chance and not on the exercise of any skill on the winning party. (3) The loss of profit or interest is not treated as the contemplated loss.

The inequality found in the position of the parties to the scheme (by some drawing money early and thus being in a position to make larger gain by interest, while others draw late and lose interest), ought not to be taken into account. Loss of interest is not loss strictly so called. It may be failure to make a profit. It cannot be said that any one is bound to earn a particular rate of interest and that not earning a particular rate is loss.

It is immaterial that the foreman is enriched by an enormous share realised as interest on the subscribers' moneys received by him; and the earlier prizemen get prizes out of all proportion to their contributions at the expense of the later subscribers.

"So long as the getting back the actual amount of subscription is always assured, the interval of time, however long it may be, is immaterial and it cannot be said any subscriber loses (F. B.).—

Section 299.

1. The benefit of Exception 1 to Section 299 could be given only in cases where, as the result of sudden provocation, the offender has lost all power of self-control. Such loss is not a necessary consequence of anger or other emotion. It has to be shown "not only that the act was done under the influence of some feeling which took away from the person doing it all control over his actions but that that feeling had an adequate cause."

The absence of motive, though ordinarily a strong circumstance to be taken into consideration in the weighing of the evidence, cannot conclusively establish the innocence of the accused.

The imposition of fine under Section 301 is not mandatory, but only discretionary. The expression "shall be liable to fine" does not amount to a mandate in the matter.— 19 T. L. J., 99.

2. Exception IV to Section 299 deals with a case of provocation not covered by Exception I. Though in both the cases there is the absence of premeditation, there is a total deprivation of self-control in cases falling under the 1st Exception, while there is in those falling under Exception IV "that heat of passion which clouds men's sober reason and urges them to deeds which they could not otherwise do". The injury done is not the direct consequence of the provocation.

The statement of a prisoner may be considered to be a piece of evidence in the case as the provisions of law deny him the opportunity of going into the box and swearing on his own behalf.

The weight to be attached to the statement will of course depend on the other circumstances proved in the case.— 17 T. L. J., 813.

3. The right of private defence would extend to the causing of death, in cases of assault as may reasonably cause the apprehension that death or grievous hurt will be the consequence of such assault. It is a reasonable apprehension of the specified classes, to himself or some other person, and not actual injury that has to be made out. "Every allowance should be made for one who with the instinct of self-preservation, strong in him, pursues his defence a little further than to a perfectly cool by-stander would seem absolutely necessary. The question in such cases will be not whether there was an actually continuing danger, but whether there was a reasonable apprehension of such danger."

It is open to the accused to set inconsistent pleas such as that it was some other person that caused the injuries in question or that he caused the injuries in the exercise of the right of private defence. Even if the plea of private defence had not been specifically set up, it is open to the accused to entertain at any time the plea of self-defence and seek to give effect to the same if, from the prosecution evidence, the same could be substantiated.—43 T. L. R., 268.

Section 301.

1. The accused, a young man of 23 murdered two innocent boys aged 11 and 12, after decoying them with the promise of giving them jaggery and nuts, with the object of getting the ornaments worn by the boys. The Sessions Judge sentenced the prisoner to death. Held (by the majority, Ramachandra Rao, J., dissenting).—The sentence of death was the proper sentence, even though the evidence against the prisoner was purely circumstantial.

Per Sankara Menon, J.—Persons who murdered for the love of lucre or those who inveigle their victims with their confidence and then murder them, are instances of execrable beings, whom the Court considers its duty to society to rid them. In such cases, therefore, the sentence of death is the proper sentence to be awarded.

Unexplained possession of jewelry of the murdered children shortly after the murder taken along with other circumstances proved in the case is good evidence that the accused is guilty of murder.

Per Ramachandra Rao, J.—To award the sentence of death against the prisoner when the evidence is circumstantial only would be going against the 'traditions and precedents of the High Court. The usual and better course, therefore, is, in such cases, to sentence the prisoner to rigorous imprisonment for life. Extreme youth is also another ground for withholding the extreme penalty, for a youthful offender may still be reformed.

Per Sadasiva Iyer, C. J.—The safest course in regard to appropriate punishment in any particular case is to decide each case on its own merits without much reliance on previously decided cases which are supposed to be analogous. The extreme youth or the extreme old age of the culprit is sometimes treated as a ground for not inflicting the death penalty, but this also cannot be raised to the level of an invariable rule.—

4 S. D., 416.

2. Although Section 75 attributes to a drunken man the knowledge of a sober man when judging of his action, it does not give him the same intention; and therefore drunkenness or a state of intoxication affords a sufficient excuse for not exacting the extreme penalty of the law.

Section 301 imperatively lays down that the sentence to be awarded, for the offence of murder should be either death or life imprisonment. A sentence of three years' rigorous imprisonment is therefore wrong.—

17 T. L. J., 301.

3. See also Regn. V of 1067, Sec. 20.—

18 T. L. J., 621.

Section 304.

Where the prisoner's negligent act or omission is the proximate and efficient cause of death, the fact that the deceased himself was negligent and so contributed to the accident or other circumstances by which the death was occasioned does not afford a defence to an indictment for murder.

The distinction between rashness and negligence is this—"Culpable homicide is acting with the consciousness that the mischievous and illegal consequences may follow but with the hope that they will not and often with the belief that the actor has taken sufficient precautions to prevent their happening. The imputability arises from acting despite the consciousness. Culpable negligence is acting without the consciousness that the illegal and mischievous effect will follow, but in circumstances which show that the actor has not exercised the caution incumbent on him and that if he had, he would have had the consciousness. The imputability arises from the neglect of the civic duty of circumspection."

What will constitute such negligence as will give rise merely to a civil liability may not be sufficient to justify a conviction under Sections 304, 334 and 428. But the only difference is that it is the duty of a Court in the latter case to scrutinise the evidence with the greatest care to see if there has been negligence and if such negligence has resulted in the death of a human being.—

Section 341.

The chief ingredient of the offence under Section 341 is the voluntary obstruction caused to any person in such a manner as to prevent that person from proceeding in any direction in which he has a right to proceed. In the absence of this element, preventing a person from building a step or a wall does not amount to the offence.—

Section 361.

In a case of kidnapping, the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to pass any order as to the custody of the minor alleged to have been kidnapped.— 4 S. D., 415.

Section 366.

For constituting an offence under Section 366, the following essentials are necessary:—(1) The person kidnapped was a minor at the time of the removal, i. e., under 16 years of age or she was insane, (3) Such a person was in the keeping of a lawful guardian. (3) The accused took or enticed such person. (4) He took so without the consent of the lawful guardian. (5) At the time of the removal, the accused intended or knew that the woman would be compelled to marry any person against her will or that she would be forced or seduced to illicit intercourse.— 17 T. 2. The owner of the property is entitled to deal with it in any way he chooses. Even if he destroys it or changes its situation so as to affect its utility or value, he cannot be deemed to have committed any offence unless the rights of others are infringed. His act would amount to an offence, if it is made out that the complainant's easement right over the property has been injuriously affected and also that an invasion of such right and damage to him had been intended at the time of the act. ### Section 436.

Straw being an agricultural produce and the staple food of cattle in this country, setting fire to a heap of straw would constitute the offence under Section 436.—

4 S. D., 398.

Section 442.

A mere knowledge that the trespass is likely to cause insult or annoyance to the owner of the property does not amount to an intent to insult or annoy within the meaning of Section 442. But where the trespasser knows that his trespass is practically certain in the natural course of events to cause insult or annoyance to the owner of the property, it is open to the Court to infer an intention to insult or annoy. It is a question of fact whether this presumption of intent is displaced by proof of any independent object of the trespass.

There is no reason to depart from the view of the law adopted in 34 T. L. R., 243 which is the same as the view taken in 41 Mad. 156.

The rule that a man must be presumed to intend the natural consequences of his acts should be regarded as a rule which should be applied in considering whether the requisite intention exists in any particular case of alleged criminal trespass. (F. B.).

Per Joseph Thaliath, J.—In the interpretation of penal statutes, the expressions "intention" and "knowledge" should not be taken in their purely limited sense.—

---

Section 448.

When a person enters wrongfully on property in the possession of another, it is to be presumed that he has the intention to annoy and therefore is guilty of trespass, unless he can prove that there are circumstances to show that this was done in good faith.— 4 S. D. 400.

---

Section 449.

Even where there is only symbolical possession, it would have the effect of actual delivery of possession in law so far as the parties are concerned, and entry upon the property or continuance in possession of the same after date of delivery of the same by the party purporting to have been ousted under the delivery kychit would clearly constitute an offence under Section 449, if committed with knowledge of delivery and the other sinister intention set out in the Penal Code.

Criminal Courts should not lightly brush aside the records relating to delivery of possession in execution of decrees of Civil Courts.— 18 T. L. J., 1287.

---

Section 454.

A verandah is a part of a dwelling house and any entry on it, provided that it is accompanied by the requisite mental intent, would constitute house-trespass.

---

Section 499.

The Section rather applies to a case where there is only a show of marriage for an ulterior and fraudulent purpose, to a marriage which is left incomplete owing to the omission of a necessary form than to a marriage which, so far as the form went, was complete.

The marriage of a minor Mahomedan girl, however regular in other respects, contracted without the consent of the lawful guardian is ineffectual in the eye of the law, and the form gone through is more or less a mock marriage within the purview of Section 499.

According to Mahomedan law, a Mahomedan girl becomes a major either on the completion of her 15th year or her attainment of the age of puberty at an earlier period.

In the absence of any specific allegation in the complaint and sworn statement that the girl had not attained puberty, the principle laid down above cannot apply.—

---

Section 502.

1. In an action for damages for defamatory words spoken or written by counsel, with or without malice, in any proceeding before a Court of law, he can claim absolute privilege and is absolutely immune from civil liability.

The rules laid down in the Penal Code for determining criminal liability cannot be extended to actions for civil wrong, as actions for civil liability and criminal liability do not for purposes of adjudication stand on the same footing (F. B.).—

2. Comments on the judgments of judicial tribunals must be fair and confined to the merits of each case. The members of the Bar owe a duty to themselves and the Court in this respect and they ought always to be careful not to make any unfounded imputations against the tribunals of the State. If they act otherwise, they are not only liable to be hauled up for contempt but are also liable to punishment under the disciplinary jurisdiction of the High Court.— 45 T. L. R., 473.

3. Where in a complaint for defamation, the contention for the prosecution was that, in a petition put in by the accused in the course of the trial, he had admitted the letter containing the alleged libel and that admission should be taken to relieve the prosecution from the necessity of proof on the point: Held.—The contention is untenable. In a criminal trial the onus of proving everything essential to the establishment of the charge against the accused lies upon the prosecution and the accused on his trial can consent to nothing so as to relieve the prosecution from the burden, unless it be a plea of unqualified confession of the guilt. In a prosecution for libel making or publication of the libel complained of is an essential fact which it is incumbent on the prosecution to prove affirmatively. Omission to do it on the part of the prosecution cannot be sought to be made up by the admission in the petition or written statement put in by the accused during the trial, of the writing which contains the alleged imputation.—

Section 518.

Section 518 is not applicable to offences under the special laws, and therefore whipping cannot be awarded under the Section for offences under such laws. (In the case, the accused was convicted under Section 9 of the Gambling Regulation, and being a juvenile offender was sentenced to 8 stripes. The sentence was cancelled).— 4 S. D., 399.

REGULATION VI OF 1074 (Wills).

In the case of a registered Will, where there are no allegations that the Registrar was deceived or a fraud was practised on him or that he was himself a party to the fraud in getting up the Will, it will be presumed that all things that were done in his presence were duly done and in order. The burden of rebutting the above presumption will be on those who impugn the Will.

Those people alone who are enumerated in Section 5 of the Regulation, can rely on the Section and question bequests made affecting more than one-half of the property (F. B.).— 44 T. L. R., 144
(=18 T. L. J., 163).

REGULATION II OF 1075

(Negotiable Instruments).

---

Section 7.

See Sec. 8.—19 T. L. J., 1321.
„ 121.—19 T. L. J., 253.

---

Section 8.

1. An endorsee of a promissory note after notice of demand made on maker is not a holder in due course under Section 8 of the Regulation. But such person is holder under Section 7 and he is entitled to recover the money from the maker. The rights under Section 61 of the Regulation are not affected by the circumstance that the holder is not a holder in due course.—19 T. L. J., 1321.

2. See also Sec. 121.—43 T. L. R., 172
(=18 T. L. J., 261).

---

Section 28.

Section 28, read with Section 59, makes it clear that a bill or note held by a deceased person at the time of his death may be transferred by endorsement by his legal representative who obtains legal possession of the same. The widow of a deceased

Hindu, though having a limited interest in the estate, can negotiate by endosement the bid or note held by him.—

19 T. L. J., 888.

Section 61.

See Sec. 8.—19 T. L. J., 1381.

Section 80.

1. Section 80 clearly provides that payment, in order to discharge the liability under the promissory note, should be made to the holder of the instrument. The definition of a 'holder' in Section 7 makes the word applicable only to one who in his own name is entitled to the possession of the instrument. This definition would exclude a person who may be beneficially interested in the instrument, but whose name does not appear on it.— 19 T. L. J., 274.

2. See also Sec. 121.— 19 T. L. J., 356.
(= 18 T. L. J., 261).

Section 82.

In the case of a promissory note payable on demand which is silent as to the rate of interest, the date from which interest has to be calculated is the date of the execution of the instrument and not the date of demand.

The date on which the sum ought to have been paid within the meaning of those words in Section 82 is the date of the execution of the note. In other words, the date of maturity of the note is the date of execution and not the date of demand.—

19 T. L. J., 1316.

Section 84.

See Sec. 121.—43 T. L. R., 172
(=18 T. L. J., 261).

Section 100.

Under Section 100, Clause (c), no notice of dishonor is necessary when party charged could not suffer damage for want of it.—

19 T. L. J., 713.

Section 121.

1. Under Section 121, Clause (b), it shall be presumed that every negotiable instrument bearing a date, was made or drawn on such date. Date is not an essential requisite of a negotiable instrument, but, if it is dated, the presumption is that it was made or drawn on such date, unless the contrary is proved.

Under Clause (g) of the same Section, there is a further presumption 'that the holder of a negotiable instrument is a holder in due course.' But where the instrument was obtained under any of the circumstances stated in the Proviso to the Section, the burden of proving that the holder is a holder in due course is shifted on such holder.

Similar presumption should be made in favour of a holder in due course regarding the date of the endorsement in view of Clause (b) of the same Section.

It is not open to the maker of a promissory note payable on demand to plead payment to the promisee as against a holder in due course.

To constitute a 'payment in due course,' there must be among other things good faith and absence of negligence according to Section 9.

The maker of a note having negligently left it, with the payee, in spite of discharge, thereby enabling the latter to endorse it to an innocent person must suffer the consequences of his negligence.

Payment of the amount due on a promissory note, contemplated by Section 80, may be made not only in money, but in any other form as agreed to by the parties, such as, by setting off one debt against another.

Discharge of a negotiable instrument by payment under Section 84, Clause (c), would therefore include such payments.—

2. The presumptions that arise in cases of negotiable instruments are detailed in extenso in Section 121. Under Clauses (a) and (e), the only presumptions are in favour of passing of consideration and in favour of the order in which the endorsements are seen to be embodied on the promissory note. There is no presumption of genuineness of endorsements found on promissory notes.— 18 T. L. J., 847.

3. Clause (g) of Section 121 has to be construed in the light of the definition of the expression 'holder' contained in Section 7. The expression 'holder of a negotiable instrument' in Clause (g) must refer only to the persons entitled in their own names to the possession thereof and to receive and recover the amount due thereon from the parties thereto as defined in Section 7. It cannot include any person who has custody of the note. Such a custody may be sufficient to constitute the person having it as a holder within Section 7, if the instrument is one payable to bearer. If the same is payable to order, custody of the note is perfectly immaterial and cannot constitute the custodian a 'holder.'

The case of the heir of a promisee is entirely different, as he is a person entitled in his own name by virtue of his having inherited the assets of the deceased promisee and possession thereof to receive and recover the amount under the promissory note within the meaning of Section 7.— 19 T. L. J., 253.

4. Date is not an essential requisite of a negotiable instrument; but if it is dated, then the presumption is that it has been made or drawn on such date, unless the contrary is proved, under Section 121, Clause (b).

Under Section 80, the payment to constitute a valid discharge should be made to the holder of the negotiable instruments. Otherwise the party liable is not discharged from liability, unless the holder elects to treat the payment to any other person as one made to him.

After a party has once pleaded, he should not in his subsequent pleading be allowed to plead contradictory to what he had first pleaded. If, however, he wishes to alter or add to his pleading in any way, he should apply for amendment thereof, so that, in the event of his being allowed, the opposite party might have the opportunity to meet it.— 19 T. L. J., 356.

Hundi.

1. The person who is liable to the Bank to which a letter of credit is addressed is the grantor of the letter, and it is upon the faith of his promise that the Bank honors the drafts of the grantee. So, ordinarily, the grantee of a letter of credit does not make himself liable to the Bank to which the letter of credit is addressed by operating on it.— 19 T. L. J., 41.

2. Whether a Hundi taken as a complete satisfaction of a debt or as a conditional payment is a question depending upon the facts of each case. The onus lies upon the person alleging that the bill operated as a complete satisfaction of the original debt, the presumption of fact being the other way.— 19 T. L. J., 713.

Promissory Note.

1. Where the obligation under the promissory note has already arisen and the liability to pay the amount secured by the instrument has already attached, a contemporaneous oral agreement to postpone the enforcement of the obligation by attaching a condition thereto cannot be set up. But when the liability itself does not attach until a condition is satisfied, the effect is not to make an unconditional promise conditional or to postpone the enforcement of the obligation created by the instrument, but to suspend the obligation itself till the condition is satisfied. There is no obligation, no promise to pay and no liability to pay until then. Such an agreement does not come within the mischief of Section 92 of the Evidence Act, but is saved by Proviso (3) to that Section.— 44 T. L. R., 141 (=19 T. L. J., 271).

2. To vest the title in the indorsee of a negotiable instrument, there must be the indorsement as well as delivery of the instrument, and in the case of joint payees, the indorsement to be valid must be made by all the payees, unless the payee who indorses acts as the agent of the other under due consideration.— 19 T. L. J., 405.

3. The transactions which took place before and after the execution of a promissory note would constitute relevant facts in the eye of the law in deciding whether a promissory note is genuine or not.—

REGULATION III OF 1075 (Vakils).

Sections 17 & 18.

1. The fact that, in Section 18, the Court is authorised, in cases where it orders the agreement to be cancelled, to fix the remuneration payable to a Vakil on a consideration of the services rendered as if no agreement has been brought into existence, would not warrant the presumption that such inquiry could be held only in cases where such agreement has been cancelled. In making a reduction under the first part of the Section, the Court is competent to examine the nature of the services rendered and fix the amount that could reasonably be awarded to the Vakil for such services.

Section 17 clearly shows that agreements referred to therein may relate to future services also. The insistence by the Vakil of the full fee agreed to by the client at the time of the commencement of the engagement cannot be said to be unlawful or unconscionable. In this view the undertaking to pay interest from the date of the commencement of the engagement cannot be held to be unconscionable or legally unenforceable.

Unless it is shown that a number of suits was taken up together on the several dates, the Vakil is entitled to be compensated separately for each.— 17 T. L. J., 498.

2. All that Section 17 of the Regulation should be taken to lay down is that no agreement could be made the basis of an action for recovery of Vakils' fees which has not been reduced to writing as required by the Section. But in cases where there are no written agreements, an action could be maintained by invoking the aid of Sections 65 and 70 of the Indian Contract Act and seeking the application of the rule of quantum meruit.

The Vakil is therefore entitled to his remuneration independently of Section 17 of the Regulation.— 18 T. L. J., 690.

Other Cases.

1. A Vakil, when engaged by a client in a case, has to be taken to be clothed with complete authority over the conduct of a suit, except that he cannot set up pleas inconsistent with the pleadings filed by his client in the case. His erroneous admissions on a point of law could not, however, bind his client. His powers, unless and until the authority conferred upon him to act, plead or appear, is withdrawn, such as calling or omitting to call a particular witness, putting or omitting to put a particular question to a witness, pressing or abandoning one or more of the contentions urged by the client, and such other kindred matters which relate to the conduct of the proceedings, should remain unfettered. To insist upon specific separate authorities from the parties for these matters, would be virtually not giving effect to the power filed by the Vakil, as these relate purely to the " making, and doing and appearing " in connection with the proceedings covered by the power. An honest statement of the Vakil made at the latest stages of the suit, in the original Court or in appeal that the contentions put forward with respect to particular acts are not pressed, made after a calm and careful examination of the evidence or a consideration of the conduct of his client disclosed in the suit cannot be regarded as ultra vires his authority on the ground that such statement is inconsistent with the pleadings originally filed in the case on behalf of his client. Such action of the Vakil has to be construed as 'acting' and 'pleading' within the purview of the engagement evidenced by the Vakalath. The interdict imposed on the Vakil, pointed out in 7 T. L. J., 14 : 32 T. L. R., 211 and 40 T. L. R., 245 relate only to these statements made at the earlier stages of the suit which would be inconsistent and diametrically opposed to the case put forward in the pleadings.— 17 T. L. J., 146.

2. A Vakil cannot, without special authority from his client, make a statement to the Court giving up a substantial portion of his client's claim. So, where the plaintiff claims redemption of the property, the Vakil cannot make a statement agreeing to be satisfied with the redemption of half the property.— 17 T. L. J., 737.

3. In an action for libel or slander for defamatory words spoken or written by Vakil or counsel with or without malice in any proceeding before a Court of law, he can claim absolute privilege and is immune from civil liability.

"The reason of the rule is that a counsel who is not malicious and who is acting bona fide may not be in danger of having actions brought against him. If the rule of law were otherwise, the most innocent counsel might be unrighteously harassed by suits and therefore it is better to make the rule of law so large that an innocent counsel shall never be troubled, although by making it so large, counsel are included who have been guilty of malice and misconduct." The advocate's words and acts ought only to be guided by a sense of duty to his client and "by a constant recourse to his own sense of right to guard against the abuse of the powers and privileges entrusted to him. Where he does abuse them—which should be rare—there is the Judge who is armed with ample powers to correct and check them.

The rules laid down in the Penal Code for determining criminal liability cannot be extended to action for civil wrong.

In the absence of statutory provisions, Courts have to act according to the principles of justice, equity and good conscience. This has received statutory recognition by the enactment of the Civil Courts Regulation II of 1084.

The principles of English and British Indian law and usage may be accepted as the principles of justice, equity and good conscience, so far as they may be made applicable to Travancore.

There is no reason why the Rule of counsel's absolute immunity which is sound in England and India should not be sound in Travancore as well, where the bar is highly developed (F. B.).— 44 T. L. R., 375
(=18 T. L. J., 1028).

4. It can be taken to be clearly settled now that the provisions of the Penal Code alone would govern the nature of the privilege that could be set up by Vakils in criminal proceedings started against them with reference to statements spoken or written made by them in the course of the proceedings in which they appear in their professional capacity. The only provision of law relating to privilege applicable to such statements made by the Vakils is that contained in Exception No. II, in Section 502 of the Penal Code.

The only question for consideration to bring a case within the purview of the above exception is whether the imputation in question was made in the interests of the client. In such cases, the existence of private malice per se could not affect the presumption of good faith. In these matters the Court has not to conduct a meticulous examination of the circumstances and weigh statements made by the counsel, witnesses and parties in a too delicate and fine balance to see whether they have been made in good faith, which expression signifies, as laid down in Section 46 of the Penal Code, anything done with due care and attention. If the circumstances made out that he acted in the matter with that amount of care and attention which is expected of an ordinary prudent man, he should be taken to have acted in good faith.

Legal practitioners, while having the above privileges, have their own responsibilities. The privileges they have, should, under no circumstances, be abused so as to harass and defame others by taking undue advantage of their position as advocates. It is essential that, in the interests of the integrity of their honorable and sacred profession, they should be very careful not to give rise to the faintest suspicion of a personal element in their speech or action as advocates.— 44 T. L. R., 428 (= 19 T. L. J., 65).

5. In the absence of a specific order from the Court dispensing with the arguments on one of the questions raised in appeal, the omission by the Vakil to argue the same must be treated as amounting to an abandonment of the ground taken in the appeal memorandum.— 19 T. L. J., 937.

6. A pleader has no right of retainer in monies realised by him in one cause for his dues in other causes conducted by him.

The disciplinary jurisdiction under the Vakils' Regulation may be exercised irrespective of the fact that the party may have other remedies open to him as against his Vakil.— 45 T. L. R., 459.

(Guardians and Wards.)

Section 6.

The expression "friend" means "joined to another in intimacy and mutual benevolence independently of sexual and family love." A stranger or way-farer cannot with propriety be considered to be a friend.

Other Cases.

1. The Courts will scrutinise very carefully the acts of guardians on behalf of minor children. The interest of minors is most jealously guarded by Courts, and gross negligence would, so far as their interests are concerned, amount to fraud.

The failure to appeal from an adverse decision is not an index of lack of bona fides of the guardian. It may be the result of the exercise of a wise discretion.— 4 S. D., 144.

2. Even a mere guardian acting bona fide in the minor's interests is entitled to compromise disputes and bind the minors thereby. 4 S. D., 271.

3. It is established law that a guardian cannot bind his ward's estate except by a document purporting to bind it.— 4 S. D., 329.

4. The Guardians and Wards Regulation contemplates only summary proceedings for the purpose of giving certain orders towards the welfare of the minor. In such proceedings, the Courts should not determine any question with reference to the title of the minor or of any other person to any property. Where the question of title to any property is raised in the enquiry under the Regulation, the Court should leave open such question to be agitated in appropriate proceedings by the guardian who may be appointed.— 18 T. L. J., 482.

5. A petition under the Guardians and Wards Regulation by a father for his own appointment as guardian of his minor child is incompetent. The father is the natural guardian already of the child, and so, an appointment by the Court is unnecessary.— 45 T. L. R., 475 (= 19 T. L. J., 986).

(Breach of Contract.)

1. When the advance paid to a workman consisted partly of cash paid to him and partly of 'Thundu money', i. e., money held to the credit of another estate in discharge of a debt which the workman owed to it: Held.—There was no advance within the meaning of the Breach of Contract Regulation; and the Regulation was applicable to the agreement in question.—

4 S. D., 407.

2. The counter-petitioner entered into an agreement with the petitioner to supply coolies and received an advance. On the counter-petitioner failing to act according to the agreement, the petitioner complained under the Breach of Contract Regulation and on 22-7-1100, the Magistrate directed the counter-petitioner to perform his contract within forty-five days from date of order. The counter-petitioner failed to carry out the order within the time specified, and the petitioner moved the Court for awarding him punishment provided for by Section 6 of the Regulation. The counter-petitioner's defence was that the entire amount of the advance had been repaid to the petitioner and that no further action could be taken under the Regulation. The Magistrate accepted this plea and acquitted the counter-petitioner. On the question whether this view was correct: Held.—The Magistrate rightly refused to take further action.

A complainant who after the expiry of the period prescribed by the preliminary order of the Court, gets back the advance from the workman, cannot go before the Magistrate and ask him to punish the workman. The Magistrate gets jurisdiction in the matter only if there has been a wilful breach of a lawful contract by a workman who has received money in advance on account of work which he has contracted in writing to perform or get performed (Vide Sections 3 and 4). It follows that if any of the requisites under those Sections is wanting, the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to take action under Sections 5 and 6. The payment of an advance on account of the work to be done or got done is one of such requisites.

When the Magistrate passed the order of 22-7-1100, the counter-petitioner was bound to carry out the work, as he had with him the amount of the advance. But when the Magistrate was moved to pass sentence, the counter-petitioner was not bound to carry out the work as the advance had been previously repaid; and his disobedience of the order directing him to perform the work would not therefore be illegal.

To punish him for lawfully refusing to perform the work would, besides being opposed to all principles of natural justice, be putting the Regulation to a use which it could never have been in the intention of the Legislature.— 17 T. L. J., 52.

3. Per Chatfield, C. J.—The security bond given by the accused should be enforced only to the extent that it would be necessary to indemnify the complainant and the Government are in no way interested in the matter.

Per Joseph Thaliath, J.—The complainant is not entitled to get anything out of the amount realised from the surety and the said amount should be credited to the Government.

On this difference of opinion, the case was referred to Mr. Justice Subramony Iyer who agreeing with Mr. Justice Joseph Thaliath, Held.—The Sirkar is entitled to the amount of the bond on forfeiture and the complainant has no right to any portion of it.—44 T. L. R., 233 (=18 T. L. J., 338).

REGULATION III OF 1082
(Steam Boilers and Prime Movers.)

A complaint was made to the First Class Magistrate of Devicolam by the Police Inspector of the place that the accused committed the offence under Section 4 of Regulation III of 1082 by using a boiler without license. The Magistrate dismissed the complaint under Section 181 of the Criminal Procedure Code on the ground that the complaint made by the Inspector of Police was neither a complaint nor a Police report as contemplated by Section 170 of that Code.

Held.—The complaint was a valid complaint on which the Magistrate could initiate proceedings. There was no special procedure prescribed in Regulation III of 1082 for instituting prosecutions for offences under the Regulation. The Criminal Procedure Code had therefore to be looked to for the purpose. There was nothing in Section 170 of the Code to warrant the inference made by the Magistrate that the complainant should have personal knowledge of the facts. The policy of the law seemed to be to enable the Magistrates to initiate proceedings on complaints of offences by any person, especially offences against public policy or safety or convenience of the public. In such cases as the present, it was the duty of the Police to institute complaints of offences which come to their notice or knowledge.

Section 181 of the Procedure Code could not apply to a case where the Magistrate refused to take cognisance of the offence as the conditions necessary for the initiation of proceedings before him had not been satisfied. Section 181 referred only to dismissal of complaints after the Magistrate had taken cognisance of the offence and had complied with the provisions of Sections 178 and 180.— 45 T. L. R., 22
(=19 T. L. J., 415**).

REGULATION II OF 1084.
(Civil Courts.)

1. A suit to recover a debt advanced to the trust or by one of its employees for recovery of wages or salary due to him cannot be treated as a suit relating to the trust within the meaning of Article 17 of Schedule II of the Civil Courts Regulation. Actions falling under the above Clause should be with reference to the internal management of the trust. The classes of cases that could be brought under the above Clause should be ejusdem generis with the specific forms of action enumerated in the Article. Actions by a third party as a whole or vice versa cannot by any stretch of language be deemed to relate to the trust as provided for in the Article.— 17 T. L. J., 130.

2. See also Regn. III of 1075.— 44 T. L. R., 875
(=18 T. L. J., 1028**).

REGULATION II OF 1087
(Registration.)

1 A mortgaged his properties to B in 1040. B in 1070 submortgaged the property to C. A obtained a decree on his mortgage in 1072 and obtained delivery of possession in execution after paying the mortgage amount to B. In the meantime, even before A's suit C had obtained a decree against B on his mortgage and had obtained delivery of possession through Court. Neither A nor C was a party to the suit of the other. In a suit by A to eject C from the property, C contended that he must be paid his decree amount. Held.—(1) C having failed to give notice of his mortgage to A, he cannot have any rights in the property as against A.

(2) The mere fact of registration of C's sub-mortgage would not fix A with constructive notice, and registration is notice only to persons who are in the position of a purchaser, or submortgagee, &c., who might reasonably be expected to search the registry before advancing money and obtaining a document.

(3) The fact that a decree had been passed on C's mortgage would not show constructive notice to A. The maxim that "every man is presumed to be attentive to what passes in the Courts of Justice of the State or Sovereignty where he resides" should not be pressed into service except to support the doctrine of lis pendens.

(4) C's remedies are only against his mortgagor, B.— 4 S. D., 7.

2. Where parties to a partition entered into an agreement in writing regarding the redemption of a property outstanding on mortgage that each party should pay a moiety of the debt and redeem the mortgage and that property should thereafter be divided equally between them : Held.—The agreement in question was a contract or disposition affecting immoveable property, and as such its registration was compulsory.

In the case, as the list containing the agreement was not registered, it was inadmissible in evidence.— 4 S. D., 89.

3. Registration is notice to subsequent purchaser and for that matter to all the world.— 4 S. D., 352.

REGULATION VI OF 1087

(Court Fees.)

---

Section 4.

1. Per Sankara Menon, J.—Suit to set aside a decree must be brought in the Court which passed the decree or in any Court to which that Court is subordinate. Institution fee should be paid on the market value of the property where the prayer is for a declaration of plaintiff's title to and possession of it.

Per Sadasiva Iyer, C. J.—A suit for setting aside a decree, or bond or transaction need be brought only by a party to it. A third party who attacks it need only sue for declaration of his own title and appurtenant reliefs and to declare his title, and is not affected by the decree, bond or transaction.— 4 S. D., 278.

2. When plaintiff sued for cancellation of a mortgage or recovery of plaint properties with mesne profits, the defendant contended that he was entitled to the mortgage amount and the value of improvements : Held,—The suit was apparently not one for redemption of a mortgage. It was one for ejectment. The Court fee payable was only on the market value of the property under Section 4 and on the mesne profits claimed.— 4 S. D., 372.

3. Plaintiff sued for a declaration that an Udampadi is not a division deed, as it purports to be, but only a maintenance arrangement, and valued the relief at 2000 fs. under Article I (C) of Schedule II of the Regulation (1062). The District Judge returned the plaint to be amended by setting out the reliefs in unambiguous language. On appeal: Held,—The plaint should be so amended by setting out in unambiguous language the relief that was really sought, namely, the setting aside of the Udampadi so far as it purports to take the properties dealt with under it out of the category of properties in which the Tarwad as a whole had ownership and fixing for it the market value of the property, the right of the Tarwad whose ownership was involved.— 4 S. D., 378.

4. In a suit for a declaratory decree in respect of the equity of redemption of properties outstanding on mortgages, the value of the subject matter within the meaning of Section 4, Clause V, of the Court Fees Regulation should be taken to be the value of the equity of redemption, and not the properties themselves or the full right in them. In fixing the value of the equity of redemption, both the mortgage money and the value of improvements should be deducted.— 18 T. L. J., 832.

5. It is a well-recognised rule of law that the relief as set forth in the plaint should alone be looked into for purposes of determining the value of the suit for jurisdictional purposes or the amount of Court fee leviable thereon. It is one thing to construe a relief actually claimed in the plaint so as to ascertain its real scope and meaning, and having done so, to levy fees thereon, in accordance with the provisions of the Court Fees Regulation, and it is quite another thing to require a plaintiff to treat all the findings essential to the relief sought in the plaint as themselves reliefs impliedly claimed by him and then to direct that he should amend his plaint accordingly and pay additional court fees on the fresh reliefs thus introduced. The valuation of the suit could not be made to depend on questions raised by the defence which have to be determined before granting the reliefs claimed in the plaint. If the Court considers that the relief claimed could not be granted in the absence of another distinct and independent relief, it is bound to non-suit the plaintiff in case the plaintiff fails to have his plaint amended by the inclusion of such relief. The insistence of the Court to amend the plaint against the wishes of the plaintiff is clearly unjustifiable, for the plaintiff should be left to decide what has to be done by him, the duty of the Court being to dispose of the cause, deciding on the question of the maintainability or otherwise in the form in which it is presented before it.

The expression "distinct subjects" in Section 6 of the Regulation means "distinct causes of action." A distinction has to be drawn between "cause of action" and "relief" as contemplated in Section 4 "Cause of action" would relate to the act or acts which constitute the infringement of a right forming the basis of the suit, while the expression "relief" relates to the prayer for the restoration of the owner of the rights to the position in which he was before the infringement, and if that be impossible to compensate him for the loss. What has to be considered is whether the reliefs claimed in the plaint constitute "distinct subjects" within the meaning of Section 6 of the Regulation. Separate reliefs when claimed with respect to the same cause of action are not liable to be taxed separately.

The claim for partition by metes and bounds is only a consequential relief as contemplated in Section 4, Sub-section (5), Clause (d), of the Regulation.—

Sections 5 & 9.

As the law relating to Court fees now stands, a memorandum of objections relating to the mesne profits from date of plaint to date of decree is taxable with ad valorem fee, in view of the provisions in Sections 5 and 9 of the Regulation.

Just as a suit is taxable for the relief which is claimed as due to the plaintiff on the date of the plaint, an appeal should be regarded as taxable on the relief claimed in it as due on the date of the appeal (F. B.).— 45 T. L. R., 110

---

Section 6.

See Sec. 4.—19 T. L. J., 1340.

---

Section 10.

The finality contemplated in Section 10 of the Regulation cannot attach to a decison on the point of Court fee arrived at for determining questions of jurisdiction.—

19 T. L. J., 401.

---

Section 11.

The effect of Order XL, Rule 21, C. P. C., Clause (2), and Schedule I (1) (4) of the Court Fees Regulation is to place the respondent who has filed a memorandum of objections in the position of a cross-appellant. The expression "memorandum of appeal" in Section 11, Clause (a), of the Court Fees Regulation has to be interpreted as embracing the memorandum of cross objection filed by the respondent. Hence when an appeal is compromised, one-half of the Court-fee paid on the memo of objections can be claimed to be refunded.—

Schedule II.

1. Certain properties were attached by a creditor for a debt of the owner. The revision petitioner preferred a claim saying that he had a prior mortgage charge on the properties to the extent of 7000 Fs. The claim was however rejected. The revision petitioner, therefore, brought a suit to set aside the claim order, paying Rs. 10 Court fee. The Court below ordered payment of ad valorem Court fee on 7000 Fs. Held (in revision).—The petitioner's suit was to set aside a summary order of a Civil Court. The fee payable was that prescribed in Article VIII, (iii), of Schedule II, namely, Rs. 10.—

45 T. L. R., 45 (= 19 T. L. J., 928**).

2. Two applications were filed before the lower Court in avoidance of two transfers made by an insolvent in a pending insolvency petition. The applications were filed as two original suits and they were allowed. The transferees of the two documents impleaded as defendants in these suits have filed appeals against the above decisions paying a Court fee of Rs. 2 in each of the cases. It was contended that the appeal memoranda have to be taxed on an ad valorem basis on the consideration amounts under the transfers on the ground that the decisions of the lower Court constituted orders having the force of decrees which were conclusive against the parties, and therefore sufficient to operate as res judicata in suits with respect to the same subject-matter. Held.—Neither the provisions of the Civil Courts Guide nor the Rules framed under the Insolvency Regulation warrant the treatment of the applications for annulment under Section 36 of the Insolvency Regulation as original suits. The unjustifiable treatment of the applications as plaints and numbering thereof as suits would not constitute the decisions in these cases, decrees within the meaning of Section 2 (2) of the Civil Procedure Code.

The appeal memoranda have been properly stamped under Clause VI (b) of Schedule II of the Court Fees Regulation.—

Other Cases.

1. Per Venkitarama Aiyar, J.—In determining the nature of the suit for purposes of Court fee, reference has primarily to be made to the nature of the relief sought for. Courts should not enquire into the inner motives of litigants in deciding such questions in the light of the eventual gain to the plaintiff in the suit. The circumstance that the consideration of an issue is needed for the grant of relief claimed could not justify the treatment of the claim involved in that issue as one of the reliefs claimed in the plaint.

The actual amount claimed should be looked for determining the institution fee payable.

The deductions or amounts set off in arriving at the figure need not be taken into consideration for the purpose.

Per Subramony Iyer, J.—When the nature of the claim in plaint necessarily implies a definite declaration as to a claim available to the defendant on an altogether different transaction, such subject-matter must be taken into account for purposes of Court fee and jurisdiction.— 18 T. L. J., 701.

2. The plaintiff sued for redemption of a mortgage. The defendant denied the title of the plaintiff and contended that the second defendant who was subsequently impleaded was the owner of the property and that he was holding the property on Kanom under him and that the value of his improvements would be Rs. 4000. The trial Court found that the plaintiff was not the owner and dismissed the suit. It recorded a finding that the value of improvements on the property was 34,000 Fs.

The plaintiff appealed to the District Court and in the memorandum of appeal took a ground against the finding of the lower Court as to the value of improvements. The Court passed the order that plaintiff was bound to pay Court fee upon that portion of the value of improvements found by the lower Court which he questioned as being in excess of the real value. Held.—The plaintiff need not pay Court fee on such value.

A mortgagor who sues for redemption is under the law bound to pay Court fee only on the mortgage amount however great might be the value of the improvements made by the mortgagee. If his suit is dismissed by the trial Court, his appeal is in essence a suit for redemption and on principle he should not be compelled to pay any higher Court fee than he would have to pay in the first Court.

The matter may be looked at in another way too. The decree dismissing the suit could have been passed without any finding recorded on the issue of improvements. Obviously then, there would be no Court fee in appeal on the value of improvements. If the Appellate Court found title with the appellant, it might call for a finding from the trial Court as to the value of improvements and deal with that finding in giving its decree, though no Court fee was paid in appeal on the value of improvements. The position cannot logically be different, when for avoiding the necessity for a remand, the finding is recorded, as it were, in anticipation by the trial Court.

Rule 328, Clause (3), Civil Courts' Guide has no application to the case. The direction in this Clause is meant for cases where a decree has been passed for redemption and the defendant appeals.—

REGULATION V OF 1088
(Sea Customs.)

Apart from custom or special contract, it is the duty of the charterer or other shipper, at his own expense to bring the goods to the side of the ship, within reach of her tackle, and to deliver them there to the shipowner or to his servants authorised to take delivery on his behalf.

Although, according to the practice of the shipping trade, it is usual for a shipper to take a mate's receipt and a bill of lading, they are only prima facie and not conclusive evidence of ownership. It is open to a consignor, even in the absence of a bill of lading, to prove his ownership of the goods, and then it is the duty of the shipowner to deliver them to him.

A bill of lading is a document embodying an undertaking by the shipowner to carry the goods specified in it on board the ship from one part to another on payment by the shipper of a specified sum.—

19 T. L. J., 469.

REGULATION XI OF 1089
(Land Acquisition.)

1. In assessing land under the Land Acquisition Regulation, the Court should not take into account the deterioration in value of the adjoining property by reason of the use which the land acqired is intended to be put to.— 18 T. L. J., 347.

2. In Land Acquisition cases, the value fixed for comparatively small plots of land cannot always be taken to be a safe guide in fixing the value of large areas. When very small plots are acquired, the actual rates at which they are acquired are not properly scrutinised, the whole cost of the acquisition being small.— 19 T. L. J., 873.

REGULATION IV OF 1090
(Opium.)

A reading of Sections 17 to 27 of the Opium Regulation would indicate that powers of investigating into offences under the Regulation are vested in the Excise Officers. Statements made to them are therefore inadmissible in evidence.

Orders of confiscation could be passed under Section 395 of the Criminal Procedure Code.— 45 T. L. R., 261
(=19 T. L. J., 889).

REGULATION VIII OF 1090
(Insolvency.)

Section 2 (d).

See Sec. 6.—19 T. L. J., 113.

Sections 4-8.

1. To the question whether more than one person could be adjudged insolvents by a single petition of the creditor, when all the four were members of a partnership: Held.—A single petition to adjudge more than one person as insolvents could be declared incompatible only where suits brought against them on the transaction in question, would be bad for multifariousness or mis-joinder. Grave inconvenience would result in holding separate trials where the debt due to the petitioning creditor was a joint debt of all the persons sought to be adjudicated insolvents and where they have been guilty of joint act or acts of insolvency.

The use of the expression "debtor" in Sections 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8 of the Insolvency Regulation as also the intention of the Legislature would justify its being construed as including more than one debtor.

The provisions of the Insolvency Regulation being of an expropriatary nature should be strictly construed.

In acts of insolvency, the act of the agent would be the act of the principal, as expressly provided for in Explanation to Section 4 of the Regulation.—

2. A notice by a debtor that he has suspended or that he is about to suspend payment of his debts need not be in writing in order that it may constitute an act of insolvency within the meaning of Section 4, Clause (g), of the Regulation. It is sufficient if a verbal statement to that effect is made by the debtor to one of his creditors, if it complies with the general principles applicable to this act of bankruptcy.

The question whether a particular statement is sufficient notice that the debtor has suspended or is about to suspend payment of his debts and has therefore committed an act of bankruptcy, is always a question of fact to be decided in each case. —

Section 6.

The condition imposed by Section 6 (4) (c) for filing of a petition by a creditor is a condition precedent for filing the petition and the Section does not merely fix the period within which the creditor must file his petition.

A fair construction of Section 6 (4) (c) will show that it may be regarded as allowing a creditor to take proceedings in insolvency within three months of the date of the alleged insolvency of a debtor. The operation of the Limitation Regulation is, therefore, excluded, and it is a case falling under Section 10 of the General Clauses Regulation II of 1072. If on the last day of the prescribed period of three months, the Court in which the creditor should file his application is closed, the creditor will be regarded as in time, if he files his application on the next day afterwards on which the Court reopens.

The rights of an insolvent over Kandukrishi land vest on the Official Receiver, as they are property within Section 2 (d) of the Insolvency Regulation.

Where notwithstanding several petitions against an insolvent, there is but one adjudication on a consideration of all of them, one appeal will be sufficient and only one copy of the order complained of need be produced. The rule is not different even when the Appellate Court orders that the appeal should be split up into several for the sake of convenience.—19 T. L. J., 113.

Section 13.

Under Section 13 of the Regulation, the Insolvency Court is empowered in appropriate cases to appoint an interim Receiver, if in its opinion such a course is desirable, necessary or expedient in the interests of justice. Inasmuch as it amounts to a dispossession of the party in enjoyment of the properties, this power will have to be sparingly exercised, and it is the duty of the Court to satisfy itself that sufficient safeguards are provided in the order of appointment of Receiver to see that the interests of all parties concerned are conserved. In view of the ex parte nature of the order, the strictest care has to be taken in ascertaining what the nature of the properties directed to be taken possession of is, what provisions are essential for the proper, safe and satisfactory up-keep of such properties and the safeguards necessary to be made to see that the party behind whose back the order is proposed to be made is not damnified. The omission to advert to those matters when the order of appointment of a Receiver is made has to be characterised as grossly irregular.— 19 T. L. J., 994.

Section 14.

When a debtor files an application to be adjudicated as an insolvent, he has no doubt to show that he is unable to pay his debts. The evidence of the debtor should be accepted as true, unless the Court has reasons to think that his debts are fictitious and that he is making the application with ulterior motives.— 19 T. L. J., 954.

Sections 14 & 15.

The question having been referred to a Full Bench as to whether a debtor's petition in insolvency could be dismissed on any other ground than that the Court is not satisfied with the proof of the right to present the petition, and whether the refusal of the Court to allow examination of the debtor before adjudication was proper: Held.—The words "any other sufficient cause" occurring in Section 15 (1) apply only to a petition by a creditor. Under Section 15 (1), the only ground on which the Court can dismiss a petition by a debtor is where the Court is not satisfied of the right to present the petition.

The better view is that apart from Section 15 (1), the Court has no right to reject an insolvency petition on the ground that it is an abuse of process of the Court. The right to present a petition is a statutory one which should not be lightly tampered with.

Under the present Insolvency Regulation, the debtor has no doubt to state in his petition that he is unable to pay his debts. But this inability is not one of the conditions which are necessary to enable the debtor to present the petition. It may be that the petition which does not contain such an allegation could be rejected as defective in form, but as the only ground which will justify the dismissal of the petition is that the debtor has not established his right to present it, it could be not open to the Court to pass an order against him on the ground that the allegation as to inability to pay debts was disbelieved.

The creditor has a statutory right under Section 14 (2) of the Regulation. The debtor is to be examined as to his conduct, dealings and property not for the object of deciding whether his petition is to be admitted or not but in order that information may be obtained at a favourable opportunity which may be subsequently useful in the proceedings leading up to the discharge. The right is a valuable one. The time when the debtor is applying for his adjudication is a particularly favourable one for obtaining this information. It is true that, under Section 42 of the Regulation, the debtor may be called upon to appear and produce his account books, &c., at any time either before or after adjudication. But in the case of a dishonest debtor, it will be much easier to obtain his presence and assistance before he has obtained protection from arrest.

The defect of omission to give the right under Section 14 (2) cannot be said to be cured under Section 78 C. P. C., on the ground that the information which might be obtained as a result of the question disallowed by the Court would have no effect on the order of adjudication. The proceedings on an insolvency petition must be regarded as continuing down to the order of discharge (though there is a distinct stage, no doubt when the order of adjudication is passed), so that ultimately the refusal to give the creditors their statutory right under Section 14 (2) may affect the merits of the case (F. B.).—45 T. L. R., 76 (=19 T. L. J., 181).

Section 16.

1. Section 16, Clause (5), of the Regulation does not mean that the equity of redemption in mortgaged or hypothecated properties does not, on the making of an order of adjudication, vest in the Official Receiver, but that the rights of the mortgagee or hypothecatee are unaffected by the insolvency. If, before the insolvency, a mortgagee or hypothecatee had the right to be in possession or to foreclose or to claim that his debts should be realised by a sale of the property, he will still have that right after the insolvency. But the person whom he will have to deal with is not so much the insolvent as the Official Receiver in whom the equity of redemption has vested. If a suit is necessary, the Official Receiver should certainly be a party.— 19 T. L. J., 408.

2. See also Sec. 29.—19 T. L. J., 1369.

---

Section 19.

The Official Receiver is not entitled to any commission on the amount due to a secured creditor out of the price fetched by a property sold by the Official Receiver free of the encumbrance.

The Official Receiver's claim to commission is based on Rule 4 of the Insolvency Rules dated 14th August 1922 which makes it clear that the commission is a percentage 'upon the moneys from time to time to be distributed as dividends out of the estate' of the insolvent in his hands. Section 38 of the Regulation regulates the distribution of dividends. It cannot be maintained that the interest of a secured creditor in the estate is property of the insolvent in the hands of the Receiver.—45 T. L. R., 64 (=19 T. L. J., 878).

---

Section 20.

See Sec. 29.—19 T. L. J., 1369.

---

Section 21.

1. In the absence of a statutory definition for the word "decision" in Section 21 of the Regulation, it may be taken that it includes a decision not reduced to writing.

Where therefore the Official Receiver takes possession of the estate of the insolvent and that of his minor sons, though according to the order of Court, only the insolvent's properties are to vest in the Receiver, such taking possession of the minors' shares is a decision under Section 21, which has to be set aside within the period specified in the Section.— 18 T. L. J., 78.

2. See also Sec. 45.—17 T. L. J., 383.

---

Section 28.

See next Section.

---

Section 29.

The provisions of Section 29 of the Regulation are of an enabling nature based on the equitable doctrine of set-off, the object of which is to prevent the great injustice which would arise if the creditor were compelled to pay the entire amount due by him, receiving only a dividend on the amount due to him.

But it has to be remembered that this Section only lays down to what extent the creditor should be taken to have proved his debt when he claims to do so under Section 28 of the Regulation. The Section does not afford any help in the decision of the question whether, without a specific motion in the course of the insolvency proceedings to prove such debts, a set-off could be claimed. So far as creditors are concerned, the provisions of Section 16, Clause (2), peremptorily prohibit the enforcement of claims declared provable under the other provisions of the Regulation by creditors against insolvents by resorting to the ordinary Courts of the land except with the leave of the Insolvency Court. The debt due to a creditor, even if it be by way of equitable set-off, will be one provable under Section 28 of the Regulation, and would therefore fall within the purview of Section 16, Sub-section (2). The effect of this Section would amount to an express ouster of the jurisdiction of the ordinary Courts of the land.

Section 20 (d) read with Section 16 (2) clearly and unmistakeably make leave of Court essential in claims by creditors provable under Section 28 of the Regulation.—

Section 35.

The period of two years specified in Section 35 of the Regulation has to be computed from the date of presentation of the insolvency petition, and not from the date of adjudication.

The expression "adjudged insolvent" in Section 35 has to be construed in the light of Section 16, Clause (6).—45 T. L. R., 304 (=19 T. L. J., 306).

Section 36.

See Regn. VI of 1087, Sch. II.—

Section 39.

The wording of Section 39, Clause (2), of the Regulation seems to be clear that the allowance contemplated under it is awardable only to the insolvent and the grant is within the discretion of the Court. It is something personal to the insolvent. The allowance would subsist so long as the Official Receiver or trustee as the case may be continues in possession and the property continues to be the property of the bankrupt. It is quite difficult to suppose that a purchaser from the Official Receiver is under a liability to maintain the insolvent and his family. The mention of the family in the Section is only for the purpose of determining the rate or scale of maintenance contemplated in it. It by no means follows from the section that the members of the insolvent's family as such have any independent claim enforceable by law. Were it not so, the Insolvency Court will have to undertake many complicated enquiries foreign to the normal jurisdiction.— 19 T. L. J., 777.

(Companies.)

1. The Legislature of a country is prima facie territorial. The meaning of that is that it is binding on the natural born subjects of the lawgiver or on those who have otherwise become his subjects. Foreigners do not, by their mere sojourn, in a country, make themselves subject to its personal laws other than Police or correctional law or laws expressly enacted to bind all those who are in fact within its territorial limits.

Prima facie therefore the Travancore Companies Regulation can only apply to Travancore subjects and foreigners domiciled in Travancore.

A foreign corporation properly constituted under the law of the State to which it belongs may sue and be sued in its corporate name in the Courts of other States. A fresh incorporation in the latter State is not a condition precedent for validating such suits. If therefore a corporation has, according to the law of the State in which it is formed, been given a legal status independently of its members, its corporate existence ought to be recognised elsewhere also unless the laws in force prohibit the same.

The word "Company" in Section 4, Clause (2), of the Indian Companies Act of 1913 means a body of persons associated for the purposes of business. It must be one in which its members must have a legal relation between themselves giving rise to joint rights or obligations or mutual rights and duties.

By "business" is meant anything that engages the time, attention and labour of any person. It does not refer solely to trade of any commercial nature alone.

The gain contemplated by Section 4, Clause (2) need not necessarily be pecuniary gain. Even the prevention of loss would constitute gain. The gain need not be one accruing to the association. It may be one accruing to its individual members. But the Section will not be applicable to associations whose substantial object is not the acquisition of gain even if such gain accrues incidentally or by reason of its subsidiary provisions.

An unregistered association cannot be considered to be a corporation within the meaning of Section 415 C. P. C. [=Or. XXIX, r. I], and it could not therefore sue in its own name through its Officers.

Where the plaintiff is himself a member of the unregistered body, he can sue in representative capacity under Section 26 C. P. C. Where the notice under Section 26 has not been given prior to the institution of the suit, such omission is not a fatal defect, and it can be cured by subsequent notice.— 18 T. L. J., 1054.

2. The ordinary rule is that the Court will not interfere in the internal management of the company. This rule, however, is not a hard and fast one. A share-holder may bring an action on his individual account for some injury done or threatened to himself or to restrain the doing of an act which is ultra vires of the company. If he wishes to take action on behalf of the company as a whole, his ordinary method would be by moving a resolution at a general meeting, but in some special cases where the danger is imminent he may file an action to restrain the directors from doing some act prejudicial to the company making the company itself a co-plaintiff. In such a case, the Court may grant a temporary injunction to prevent the doing of the act in question, until the share-holders have been consulted and have expressed their opinion. If any question is required to be put to the share-holders, it should only be this, namely, whether the share-holders approved of the company being a plaintiff in the action.—

3. A signatory to the Memorandum of Association of a company by his subscribing thereto irrevocably binds himself to contribute towards the capital of the company the proportion for which he subscribes. He becomes by such subscription ipso facto on the incorporation of the company a member, and therefore liable as the holder of whatever number of shares he has subscribed for. If however all the shares have been otherwise allotted to others and the taking of the shares specified against him has become thereby impossible, the liability cannot be insisted upon. If such allotment has not become final, the liability will still continue. It has, however, to be noticed that for the creation of this liability, a formal allotment or the entry of the name of the signatory in the register of members is not necessary. The directors have no right at allotment to interfere with the liability so undertaken by the signatory or refuse the allotment.

Lapse of time, however long, will not relieve a subscriber to the memorandum of his liability.

Nor will the plea of misrepresentation for avoiding liability avail him.

A subscriber to the Memorandum of Association is not bound in law to pay his dues on account of the shares taken by him except as and when calls are made on him according to the provisions of the Articles of Association unless agreed to otherwise by an express agreement with the company or provided for to the contrary in the Articles of Association themselves.—

4. The Articles of Association of an incorporated company, as distinguished from the Memorandum of Association, form the agreement between the company and its share-holders, and the same will be valid and binding on them until varied or modified in the manner prescribed by law. They will be binding on the company and its share-holders as if they had subscribed their assent thereto even at the time of its incorporation. Of course, these Articles would be subject to the Memorandum, as any clause contained therein which confers powers not given by the memorandum will be ultra vires.

Though the Articles of Association can neither constitute a contract between the company and an outsider, nor give any individual member of the company special contractual rights beyond those of the members generally, they do in fact constitute a contract between the company and its members in respect of their ordinary rights as members.— 19 T. L. J., *275.

5. An unregistered company is an ordinary partnership in the eye of the law, and in the absence of a contract to the contrary, the partners are separately and jointly liable for the partnership debts.— 19 T. L. J., *713.

REGULATION II OF 1092.
(Christian Succession.)

The parties who are converts to Christianity from the oil monger caste are governed by Hindu law in matters of succession.— 4 S. D., *331.

REGULATION VII OF 1092.
( Markets. )

The plaintiff, the licensee of a private market sued the defendants for recovery of damages for the loss caused to the plaintiff by the holding of an unlicensed rival market by the defendants: Held.—The suit was not maintainable. The license issued under the Markets Regulation did not create rights in the nature of a monopoly, and the holding of a market without a license could be subjected only to the penalties prescribed under the Markets Regulation. It was not the intention of the Legislature to create any right in the licensee of a private market other than the right mentioned in the license, namely, that of carrying on a market on a particular piece of land. And as the defendants were not shown to have interfered with that right of the plaintiff, there was no cause of action for the plaintiff (F. B.).— 44 T. L. R., 357 (=18 T. L. J., 1185).

(Chitties.)

1. In view of the prohibition contained in Section 5 of the Regulation, the non-registration of a Chitty, the Chitty amount or value thereof is one hundred rupees or more makes it void; and such Chitties do not create or give rise to obligations or rights enforceable in a Court of Law (F. B.). 43 T. L. R., 199 (= 17 T. L. J., 541).

2. The suit was on a Chitty bond for recovery of the whole amount of future subscriptions in a lump on the allegation that default was committed in the payment of certain instalments. The defence was that there was no default and that the instalments in respect of which default was alleged were paid. On the question as to whether the plaintiff should first make the default or the defendant should prove the payment of the instalments: Held.—Per the Chief Justice.—On general principles the burden of proof lies on the defendant to prove payment of all the disputed instalments.

Per Joseph Thaliath, J.—The plaintiff should lead evidence as to the default. For only when there is default, the right accrues to the plaintiff to claim the whole amount. The slightest evidence on the part of the plaintiff might shift the burden on to the defendant to prove that there was no default.— 19 T. L. J., *328.

3. The suit was upon a Chitty hypothecation deed for recovery of future subscriptions in a lump on the ground of default. It was contended for the defendant that the cause of action for claiming the future subscriptions in a lump could arise only from the date of demand: Held.—Article

60 of the Limitation Regulation (1062) which has to be strictly construed, cannot be held to be applicable to Chitty hypothecation deeds, especially as hypothecations have been expressly dealt with under Article 109. No other provision exists in the Statute book of this State which could be said to prohibit a contract of the kind in question, nor can the contract be said to be opposed to any rule of public policy. Parties should be allowed full liberty in the matter of creation of contractual rights and liabilities, the Courts being entitled to refuse the enforcement of such rights and liabilities only if they contravene any statutory provisions or are found to be against recognised rules of public policy.—

19 T. L. J., 558.

4. The defendant was a prized subscriber in the plaintiff's Chitty and had executed the Chitty security bond whereby the plaintiff had the right to recover the future subscriptions in a lump in case of default of payment of any instalment. The defendant made default at the 8th instalment, but subsequently paid the amount with interest appropriating it towards the 8th instalment. The plaintiff accepted it as part payment of the lump sum due to him and sued for the balance. The defendant contended that the plaintiff had by the acceptance waived his right to recover the future subscriptions in a lump: Held.—No waiver was proved in the case. Only one debt existed at the time of payment. As a result of the default to pay the 8th instalment, the remaining instalments became payable in a lump quite apart from any demand by the foreman. It might be regarded that the principal of a debt and interest due on it were separate debts to a certain extent, at any rate. But in the case, there was not one debt due for the 8th instalment and another debt for the instalments 8 to 13 in a lump. So no question of appropriation to the former debt could arise.—

REGULATION VI OF 1094.

(Motor Vehicles.)

1. The prohibition against driving without lights contained in Rule 16 of the Rules framed under Section 12 of the Regulation is absolute and it is rightly so, as the existence of any plausible excuse for disregarding the prohibition will not obviate the danger to the public which it is the object of the Regulation to prevent.

The fact that the accused is a well-behaved young man and the circumstances that the lights went out at a place where he could not get other light and that there were no passengers in the car are considerations irrelevant for a conviction under the Regulation, though they may be relevant in passing sentence upon the accused.

Section 433-A of the Criminal Procedure Code which provides for letting off the accused with a warning under certain circumstances applies only to certain Sections of the Penal Code and is not applicable to the case in question.—

2. Clause (4) of Section 19 of the Regulation vests a discretionary power in the Court to suspend a driver's license pending the prosecution before it for an offence under the Regulation. This power is an extraordinary power and it should be exercised only in cases where the nature of the act alleged against the driver is such that it prima facie makes it dangerous to the public safety to continue his license. If the act, for instance, shows that he is an inefficient or reckless driver, the Section may be brought into play. But except in such cases, the driver's licence should not be suspended pending the prosecution. It behoves the Magistrates to use the power sparingly and with judicial caution.

The main object of the Motor Vehicles Regulation is the protection of the travelling public from the dangers arising from inefficient, rash and negligent driving of motor-cars. Apart from sentences passed on conviction, the disciplinary powers conferred by the Regulation should be exercised to advance that object and only so far as they are necessary for the purpose.

3. The charge framed by the lower Court against the accused comprised the following heads, namely, (1) that the accused drove a motor car rashly and negligently so as to endanger human life; (2) that he ran the car against the deceased P. P., and by such rash and negligent driving caused his death; and (3) that he omitted to give information to the Police of the mishap as required by the Motor Vehicles Regulation: Held.—There is need for more than ordinary caution in dealing with the evidence in a case of this description. No doubt, there are drivers who are mad after the topmost speed and callous to the safety of others, but pedestrians are by no means few who pay no heed to a motor car in motion and make no attempt to keep out of harm's way. It is not seldom that one meets people walking listlessly on the roads, as if they have a primary claim to the use of public roads and motor vehicles can be driven along by their leave and license. Where, thus, the odds of recklessness are or less evenly balanced between the pedestrians and motor car drivers, where there is room for unconscious prejudice, the need for sifting the evidence can hardly be exaggerated. The pedestrians far outnumber the chauffeurs. And when a mishap of the kind in question occurs, the general outcry is invariably against the chauffeurs.

Criminal rashness is hazarding a dangerous or wanton act with the knowledge that it is so and that it may cause injury but without intention to cause injury or knowledge that it will be probably caused. The criminality lies in running the risk of doing such an act with recklessness or indifference as to the consequence. Criminal negligence is the gross and culpable neglect or failure to exercise that reasonable and proper care and precaution to guard against injury either to the public generally or to an individual in particular, which, having regard to all the circumstances out of which the charge has arisen, it was the imperative duty of the accused person to have adopted.

Each case must be judged in reference to the precautions, which in respect of it, the ordinary experience of men has found to be sufficient, though the use of special or extraordinary precautions might have prevented the particular accident which happened.

The presence of a Police Officer at a considerable distance from the scene of accident cannot relieve the driver of a motor car of the duty cast on him by Section 5, Clause (2), of the Regulation of reporting the accident to the Police. The expression "presence of a Police Officer" must mean such proximity of the Officer to the person in charge of the car as to enable the Officer to take down the necessary statement, if needs be by stopping the car for the purpose.— 19 T. L. J., 1298.

4. In the case of a bus with a seating capacity of ten or more persons, the driver is not responsible for the duties of the conductor as defined in Rule 31 (A), though in buses of less seating capacity, the driver has to perform all the duties of the conductor.

It is therefore no part of the duty of the driver of a bus, with a seating capacity of ten or more persons, to see that the bus is not overloaded.— 45 T. L. R., 323.

REGULATION X OF 1094.

(Survey and Boundaries.)

1. Where disputes arise as regards the identity of the property, the primary canon of construction is that the boundaries alone should be looked into where they are clear and unambiguous. If, however, they are vague and uncertain, the other descriptions such as that relating to quantity must prevail. For instance, if the boundaries would take in properties which are not admittedly covered by the document or where the boundaries are unidentifiable or are not capable of being specifically located, in such cases they must necessarily give way to the other descriptions contained in the document which may help the Court in identifying the property covered thereby.—

19 T. L. J., 224.

2. The evidence supplied by boundaries, extent, survey numbers and lekkoms forms the determining factors when the identity of property is put in issue. If all these factors hormonise, there is little difficulty to identify the property in dispute. But when some of them are in conflict with the rest, as where the extent and the survey number do not agree with the boundaries, usually the boundaries predominate and the rest is regarded as erroneous or inaccurate descriptions. This is not an inflexible rule and the guiding principle is to apply that test which is most unlikely to be vitiated by error.— 19 T. L. J., 1142.

( Municipal. )

1. To constitute "plying for hire" under Section 65 of the Regulation, the accused or his employers must have either actively or by conduct solicited passengers for a trip.— 44 T. L. R., 386 (=18 T. L. J., 1832).

2. A charge was laid under Section 65 (2) of the Regulation on the allegation that the respondent failed to give information regarding taxable vehicles in his possession called for by the President of the Municipality under Section 83 (1). All that was proved was that a printed paper in D Form was issued to the respondent. The lower Court acquitted the respondent. On appeal: Held.—A demand in writing for the information under Section 83 (1) is the foundation for liability under Section 65 (2). If that demand in writing is not proved, the prosecution must fail.

A reading of Section 83 (1) shows that a sending of the D Form alone will not satisfy the requirements of the Section. It must be sent with a requsition that it should be filled with such information as may be indicated in the requisition as deemed necessary by the President.—

18 T. L. J., 1336.

3. Where the disobedience of a notice issued under Clause (2) of Section 183 of the Regulation, criminal proceedings are started in a Court, the legality of the issue of notice could be questioned before the Court, and the Court has the power to enquire into the question as to whether the notice was lawfully issued before convicting the delinquent indicted before it.—

19 T. L. J., 555.

4. Using a place within a Municipality for the manufacture of soda water without a license is clearly an offence under Section 138 (3) read with Clause (j) of Sub-section (1). In order to make such an act punishable, it is not necessary that such user should have been prohibited by the bye laws of the Municipality.

Under the Rule-making powers which Municipal Councils have under Section 244, they cannot be deemed to have the right to declare acts constituted to be offences to be immune from being proceeded against or to make acts not constituting offences under the Regulation punishable by virtue of the bye-laws issued by them.

19 T. L. J., 857.

5. The provisions of Section 233 of the Regulation cannot be extended to the non-compliance of a notice issued under Section 83 (3), and therefore it cannot be held that the former Section can be applied to any default made under the latter (F. B.).—

REGULATION VIII OF 1096.
(Income-Tax.)

1. In computing the profits of a partnership for the purposes of income-tax, the following allowances may be made in the case of the partnership or firm namely, payments by way of a reasonable salary paid to the partners for work done for the partnership such as for managing the business or by way of travelling expenses when such payments are necessary to enable the profits to be earned and are payable irrespective of the earnings of the profits (F. B.)—

2. The Tahsildar of Agastisvaram assessed one K. to income-tax on an income of Rs. 2040 on account of Veethapalisa received by him from a Chitty to which he was a subscriber. On appeal by K. the Assistant Commissioner decided that Veethapalisa was not assessable and set aside the Tahsildar's decision. The Chief Revenue Authority, exercising the powers of revision under Section 23 of the Regulation, held that Veethapalisa was assessable to income-tax and set aside the Assistant Commissioner's order, and re-directed the Tahsildar to re-assess K. Before so doing, the Chief Revenue Authority did not hear the assessee or give him a reasonable opportunity of being heard or by pleader. The Chief Revenue Authority referred this question to the Full Bench under Section 52, Clause (2), of the Regulation. Held.—The word "enhancement" contained in Section 23 is not restricted in its meaning to an increase in the assessment already made by a subordinate authority, but is wide enough to include a re-assessment ordered by the Commissioner on setting aside the appellate order reversing the assessment made by the Collector.

An order by the Commissioner under Section 23 in the above circumstances without giving notice to the assessee and without giving him a reasonable opportunity of being heard is illegal,—

3. Interest on the prize amount of Chitties is taxable income under Section 4 of the Regulation.

Where a subscriber to a Chitty prizes his ticket, the payment of the future instalments by him must be regarded primarily as repayments of the capital. In the case of a foreman who receives the whole amount, without deduction of any Veethapalisa, the subsequent payments are only equivalent to the amount of the prize money, and therefore, no question of payment of interest arises; but it is only in the case of a foreman that it could be said that the money was borrowed for carrying on the Chitty business. Prima facie, at any rate, the foreman could not claim any deduction under the Clause or at any rate could not do so without filing a statement showing how much of the subscriptions paid by him was interest and how much was by way of repayment of the loan by the subscribers (F. B.).— 19 T. L. J., 109.

4. The amendment of Section 50 by Section 36 of Regulation V of 1100, has no retrospective effect. Therefore, in proceedings pending on the date the amended Regulation came into force, the assessee's rights of claiming a reference to the High Court are not subject to the limitation laid down in the amended Section (F. B.).—

5. The income of the Namburipad of Akavoor Mana by way of Michavarom, &c., derived from his tax-free lands is assessable to income-tax (F. B.).—

6. The following questions were referred by the Chief Revenue Authority to the High Court:—(1) Is the income of the Bombay Company Ltd., Alleppey, which accrued or arose or was received in Travancore and was assessed to Travancore income-tax chargeable to British Indian income-tax in accordance with the Law of Income-tax there, whether or not the said income was remitted to British India; and (2) even if the assessment of the said income is not in accordance with the Law of Income-tax there, are the Company entitled to claim relief from double income-tax by reason of Section 36-A of the Income-Tax Regulation, read with the Government Notifications Dis. Nos. 1653/23/Rev., and 318/28/Rev., dated 5/8th December 1923 and the 7th March 1928 respectively.

(1) The second question was answered in the affirmative and the assessee concerned was held entitled to claim relief from double income-tax.

It was also held that the Notification dated 7-3-1928 had no retrospective effect.

(2) It was not the intention of the Legislature to constitute the High Court as a referee to advise the Chief Revenue Authority upon hypothetical questions of law formulated by him which are entirely foreign to the case upon which a reference is made to the High Court by virtue of Section 50.

The first question was not answered as it did not arise from the case.

Per Venkitarama Iyer, Ag. Chief Justice. —It is unnecessary for purposes of this reference to consider whether Section 36-A had come into operation or not.

Per Joseph Thaliah, J.—Section 43 of the Regulation, so far as it relates to relief in respect of double Income-tax should be deemed to have been repealed and re-enacted with modification by virtue of Section 16 of the General Clauses Regulation and the Notifications or Rules published or prescribed under Section 43 considered as published or prescribed under the provisions re-enacted.

Per Narayana Pillai, J.—Section 36-A can by no means be construed as having repealed Section 43 in its entirety. Section 36-A deals only with a slice of the wide discretion vested in Government under Section 43.— 45 T. L. R., 408.

REGULATION III OF 1097.

(Land Assignment.)

1. Land in excess of the registered measurement or extent but lying within the specified boundaries of a registered land is not 'Government Land' or land at the disposal of Government.

Where a person owning such registered area purchased in revenue auction, (such excess which was in the possession of a stranger), such purchase is not inconsistent with his title.

Government is not bound by the acts of its agents, unless it manifestly appears that the agent is acting within the scope of his authority.— 4 S. D. 25.

2. Whether a Puduval registry in the name of a mortgagee can enure for the benefit of the mortgagor is always a question of fact, as the only question which has to be decided in such cases is whether the circumstances in which the mortgagee secured the registry are such as to make him liable in equity to surrender it in favour of his mortgagor. To import considerations of the absolute right of the Sirkar to register the land in favour of any body they choose is likely to cloud the issue.

The right of the Sirkar is not questioned in such cases by either party. The act of the Sirkar is not impugned as wrong or unauthorised, and no remedy is claimed against the Sirkar. The question is purely one of equity between the mortgagor and mortgagee. That the Sirkar chose to register it in favour of the mortgagee does not in itself materially affect the question.

It is open to the mortgagee to show that he secured the registry after such an open and fair contest with the mortgagor before the registering authority that he was entitled in equity to keep it. The Court has in each case to decide as a fact whether the mortgagee did not make any unfair use of his position as mortgagee to secure the registry. If he did so, there would be an equity in favour of the mortgagor; otherwise there would be none.—

REGULATION VI OF 1099.

(Reformatory Schools.)

The Court must be clear on two points before it applies Section 28 of the Regulation. It must be satisfied that the act of the youthful offender constituting the offence of which he is convicted is an isolated act due to some sudden impulse and not the result of a plan of action deliberately designed for the attainment of a criminal object. It must further be satisfied that the parent, guardian or relative who undertakes to take charge of the youthful offender is one who will be able by the nature of his relationship and by his own status and character to exert a beneficient influence on the youthful offender and thus save him from bad associations and pernicious bringing up, and that in fact, there is a great likelihood of improvement in his character by such entrustment than by his detention in a Reformatory School. Unless satisfied on both these points, the Court will not be justified in invoking the provisions of Section 28 of the Regulation.—

REGULATION II OF 1100.

(The Nayar.)

1. Vilakkithala Nayars are known and recognised as Nayars, and they are governed by the Nayar Regulation. All recognised authorities on the subject have treated them as a sub-division of the Nayar community.— 45 T. L. R., 55 (=19 T. L. J., *488).

2. The Nayar Regulation of 1088 conferred upon the parties the right to move for a dissolution of marriage and entitled them to an order in their favour, compensation being declared payable under certain circumstances. The right to compensation is a vested one which could not be treated as a part of processual law. The nature of the right so vested has to be determined with reference to the provisions contained in the statute setting forth the circumstances under which the claim could be made. As the law stood before the passing of the Nayar Regulation of 1100, the claim was declared competent irrespective of the grounds of dissolution, such as misconduct. The restriction regarding the admissibility of the claim under the statute of 1100 could not affect a right to claim compensation allowed under the repealed statute with respect to applications for dissolution filed when the latter statute was in force.—

3. A suit was instituted to set aside the decree and execution proceedings in O. S. 317 of 1092 obtained by the second defendant against the first defendant on the ground that it was obtained against the first defendant alone without impleading the senior Anandaravan of his Thavazhi and that it therefore offended against Section 25 of the Nayar Regulation of 1088. The defence was that plaintiff was estopped from raising the contention that the decree is invalid and not binding on the Tarwad, as he was impleaded in place of the deceased 1st defendant in the execution proceedings in O. S. 317 of 1092 and he did not challenge the validity of the decree in these proceedings. The Courts below accepted the defence and dismissed the suit. On special appeal by plaintiff: Held.— There is no estoppel arising in the case. As the plaintiff has by no declaration act or omission intentionally caused or permitted the 2nd defendant to believe anything to be true and to act on such belief. The 2nd defendant obtained the decree in O. S. 317 on his own choice against the 1st defendant alone and he put that decree in execution.

There is no legal duty cast on the plaintiff to appeal in the case and inform the second defendant that the decree is invalid as it contravened the provisions of Section 25 of the Regulation of 1088. There is therefore no estoppel operating against the plaintiff in the case.

Even though the plaintiff was impleaded in the place of the 1st defendant in execution proceedings, he could not object to the validity of the decree as against the Tarwad in the execution proceedings as there was no decree properly speaking against the Tarwad.— 19 T. L. J., 1365.

Malabar Law.

1. In construing deeds, expressions creating powers have to be construed strictly. Of course, incidental powers which can in no sense be considered to be outside the scope of the authority conferred may by implication be deemed to be created in such cases. When an agency is created, the extent of the authority should be determined by a reference only to the terms creating the agency. If a person is acting ex mandata, persons dealing with him must look to his mandate. The other powers the agent in the particular case may otherwise have cannot be invoked, in determining the scope of the authority under the agency.

Where under a Nischayapatram executed by the members of an undivided Nayar Tarwad, a junior member has been authorised to execute a sale or mortgage with possession, for the discharge of certain specified debts, the authority cannot be taken to cover the execution of a hypothecation bond which is a larger burden imposed upon the property in the shape of the interest accruing thereon.

Under the terms of a Nischayapatram, the hypothecator could not be treated as junior member in management, and the transaction under the hypothecation must be construed as one entered into with an ordinary junior member who could exercise a right of alienation only in cases of urgent necessity. The responsibility of the creditor is greater in such cases, and he has to satisfy himself as to the application of the money if he wants his debt to be made binding on that Tarwad.

Improvement upon Tarwad property cannot be deemed to be a necessity which would justify an encumbrance upon Tarwad property, especially where they are not shown to be urgent.—18 T. L. J., 634.

2. It is a well settled rule of law that, in the case of alienations by the Karanavan of a Marumakkathayam Tarwad impeached by junior members, the creditor has to prove the passing of consideration under the document. He has to adduce independent proof of the same. The recitals in the document cannot by themselves amount to such proof. They can only bind parties thereto or their privies. It is open to the parties to contend that no consideration passed under the document or that the same was not paid in the manner described in the document. In such cases the onus will be on the party alleging the same, if execution of the document and the delivery thereof to the creditor are admitted. Of course, if the payment of consideration is admitted to have been made after such execution and delivery, the burden of proof will be shifted to the creditor himself. But these rules are applicable only in the case of parties to the document and not to those of impeachments by third parties not claiming through them. In cases where third parties question the validity of the document, the creditors themselves have to prove the passing of consideration by evidence of proof aliunde.

The imperative nature of recitals relating to necessity on reversioners or sons impeaching alienations by widows or fathers, as the case may be, can be applied with propriety to the passing of consideration also.

The junior members of a Malabar Tarwad cannot be said to claim their rights to the Tarwad through their Karanavan nor can the Karanavan be held to be agent of the junior members in matters of this kind so as to make statements made by him ipso facto binding on such junior members.

The acknowledgment of a debt as a valid and binding one by certain seniormost junior members may be taken in account in estimating the evidence adduced as regards the proof relating to consideration, and if it is found that the seniormost Seshakars could not be held to have colluded with the Karanavan to defraud the Tarwad to advance their own interests, such acknowledgment may be considered as a strong circumstance lending support to the other evidence regarding the passing of consideration. But in the absence of any other evidence on record, a finding regarding the passing of consideration cannot be entered in such an acknowledgment alone, when the same has been impeached by the junior members of the Tarwad.

The rule has been consistently laid down that, on proof of passing of consideration, a presumption could arise in favour of Tarwad necessity, but the weight to be given to such presumption would vary according to the facts of each case. If the purpose alleged is on the face of it one not recognisable as a necessity, the presumption would not arise. If the creditor is shown to have acted mala fide in the matter, it is doubtful whether the presumption will arise.

The junior member has a right to call upon the creditor to specify the purpose or purposes for which the loan is advanced, if the document taken by him is silent in this behalf. Non-compliance with this requisition on the part of the creditor would disentitle him to the presumption in his favour as regards Tarwad necessity. If the junior member fails to make out absence of the particular necessity mentioned in the document or set out by the creditor in pursuance of the above requisitions, the creditor is entitled to succeed. If, on the other hand, the junior member impeaching the transaction succeed in making out that no such necessity existed, the creditor would fail unless he proved that a bona fide enquiry was made by him as regards necessity before advancing the loan.

Per C. J. and Venkitarama Iyer, J. (Joseph Thaliath, J. dissenting).—What exactly is necessary to cast on the creditor the duty of specifying the purpose or purposes for which the loan was advanced by him? When absence of necessity is specifically pleaded by the junior members, in cases where the documents evidencing the loan are silent as regards the purpose for which the same was contracted, it is desirable that the creditor should detail out the purposes of the loan to enable the members of the Tarwad impeaching the loan, to adduce evidence to rebut the presumption regarding necessity arising in his favour. In such cases, Courts will do well to call for supplementary written statements or replications from the creditors setting forth the same, treating the express denial of necessity by the junior members as a demand for such details which the creditor was bound to comply with. Even in cases where no such direction is made by the Court or the creditor fails to detail out the items of necessity as indicated above, the question of the creditor while in the box as to such details will clearly constitute such a requisition, and the omission to furnish such details when so questioned would clearly amount to an omission to discharge this duty. The creditor cannot, in such a case, claim the benefit of the presumption as regards necessity. It cannot be contended that the specific denial on the questioning of the creditor in the witness box will be insufficient to prevent him from claiming the benefit of the presumption as regards necessity.

Per Joseph Thaliath, J.—In the absence of specific issues relating to particular necessities a party should not be allowed to take advantage of any stray statements relating to that subject that might fall from the mouth of his adversary when examined as a witness.— 19 T. L. J., 134.

3. No general proposition of law can be laid down that acquisition of other properties can, under no circumstances, justify the sale of Tarwad properties. On the other hand, it has been held in various cases that Tarwad properties may be validly sold to acquire other properties if it is to the manifest advantage of the Tarwad.

The question must depend on the circumstances of each case. The test is as to whether the transaction is beneficial to the Tarwad or not. If it is beneficial to the Tarwad, the sale has to be upheld; otherwise not (F. B.).— 19 T. L. J., 300.

4. The mere fact that a Chitty has been subscribed for on behalf of the Tarwad does not alter the rule as regards Tarwad necessity. As in other cases, the creditor starts with a presumption in his favour, which, however, the members of the Tarwad may rebut. But in considering the question whether necessity has in fact been proved, allowance should be made to the peculiar position of the foreman. By refusing to pay without very strict proof that the money is wanted for a Tarwad purpose, he may render himself liable to a suit by the members of the Tarwad. This danger will be greater where the security offered is a document executed by all the adult members, and it could hardly be open to the creditor to refuse to pay merely because there were minors in the Tarwad. A difficulty would also arise as to the nature of the necessity which would have to be represented to him to enable him to feel safe in making the payment. He would hardly be in a position to make such searching enquiries as a person who has been asked to advance money. So long as the foreman bona fide pays the prize money in the reasonable belief that it will be applied to Tarwad purposes, he should not lose his rights as against the Tarwad.— 19 T. L. J., 333.

5. Though at one time the High Court had been refusing separate maintenance to a junior member living away from the Tarwad without the consent, express or implied, of the Karanavan, the trend of decisions is to recognise such a right if the same was for good and valid reasons. This right has been consistently recognised by the High Court after the pronouncement in favour of the same by a majority of the judges in 35 T. L. R., 310. The refusal by a recalcitrant Karanavan to accord such permission if the circumstances justify a junior member living away from the Tarwad house could not affect the admissibility of a claim for separate maintenance. Whether the grounds found to exist in a particular case are good and sufficient to warrant such a claim will have to be decided with reference to the facts of that case, the pronouncements already made in this matter not having to be taken to have exhausted the list of good grounds which may be urged.

In the case of aristocratic families, the claims of junior members for separate maintenance have to be considered liberally, and the rule enunciated in 35 T. L. R., 310 relaxed in their favour as far as possible (F. B.).— 19 T. L. J., 343.

6. When the senior Anandaravan of a Tarwad gets a registry of Kuthakapattom lands in his name, with the consent of the Karanavan, such registry enures to the benefit of the Tarwad. In such cases, the principle of Section 90 of the Indian Trusts Act would become applicable.

In the case of an alienation by a Karanavan which is sought to be set aside, where consideration is proved by the alienee, the presumption of necessity in favour of the alienee can arise only if he shows that the Karanavan was a party to the transaction qua the manager of the Tarwad.

Where junior members challenge a transaction as devoid of Tarwad necessity, the creditor or alienee should be prepared to disclose the necessity.

The reference in the above case to questioning the creditor in the witness-box should not be so construed as to relieve the creditor from specifying the necessity in the pleadings. Otherwise, the junior members in their attempts to disprove necessity would simply be beating the air, till the creditor enters the witness-box, and the trial will have to be recommenced from the examination of the creditor. The examination of the creditor is for purposes of evidence, and no evidence is admissible unless the pleadings contain an allegation to be substantiated. The junior members are under no curse disentitling them to a knowledge of the case they have to meet or obliging them to go through a sort of blind man's bluff in a judicial trial till it pleases the creditor to enter the witness-box.

There is also some loose thinking in applying the formula relating to the presumption of necessity arising from proof of consideration. A presumption arises only where the proof falls short of the requirements of the case pleaded. There is no scope for any presumption when there is evidence covering the point to be established. In other words, a presumption is invoked to make up a lacuna in evidence. There is no justification for leaving the matter to be presumed in vagueness or obscurity. Does the creditor know the specific necessity for the transaction. If he does, he can specify it and ask the Court to presume the same on proving consideration. If he does not, what is it that he asks the Court to presume or the junior members to disprove.

The junior members do not claim their rights to Tarwad property through the Karanavan or other junior members. Their rights stand on an independent footing.

There is no distinction between minor junior members and major junior members in the matter of proof needed with respect to consideration and necessity. The only point of difference is on the question of consent.

The necessity has to be 'pressing Tarwad necessity'.— 19 T. L. J., 1044.

7. The adult members of a Marumakkathayam Tarwad are competent to divide the Tarwad properties, and execute a partition deed.

In the absence of fraud, it is binding upon the minor members of the Tarwad.

The burden of proof of fraud or prejudice is upon those who set it up.

Even if fraud or prejudice is proved, the minor members are entitled only to have the partition deed re-opened so far as their share is concerned, and to have their proper share set apart for them, but subject to this the partition is final as between those who were parties to it.

Where the adult members of a Tarwad admitted the existence of debts in the partition deed and authorised a member of the Tarwad to sell Tarwad properties for their discharge, there is a very strong presumption that those debts are genuine and binding upon the Tarwad.

The adult members of a Tarwad have the discretion to decide whether the division should be per stirpes or per capita, and the principle to be adopted in cases where there are minors at the time of partition, is what would best serve the interests of the minors.

Where minors exist at the time of partition, and they are the children of the same mother, it would be the most proper thing to give them a joint share and not separate shares; such is the usual procedure in Marumakkathayam Tarwads (F.B.). 44 T. L. R., 126 (=19 T. L. J., 1233**).

8. A decree was passed against the first defendant and the Tarwad properties of defendants one and two. The decree was ex parte. The first defendant had the ex-parte decree set aside. Then the first defendant and plaintiff compromised the suit, and a decree in terms of the compromise was passed under which the first defendant and the Tarwad properties were made liable. The second defendant raised objection to the execution of the decree in execution proceedings, and the objection was allowed by the lower Court. On appeal: Held.—It is not open to the second defendant to treat the compromise decree as a nullity, even though he was not a party to the compromise. Such decree is binding on the second defendant until it is vacated by a proper proceeding.

Jurisdiction is the power to hear and determine a matter. It does not depend upon the regularity of the exercise of that power or upon the correctness of the decision pronounced, for the power to decide necessarily carries with it the power to decide wrongly as well as rightly.

A distinction has to be drawn between the existence of jurisdiction and an exercise of jurisdiction. Where the exercise of jurisdiction is declared permissible only on the performance of an action as a condition precedent thereto, it would be a case of absence of jurisdiction until that condition is satisfied and not an improper or wrong exercise of jurisdiction. If, however, jurisdiction is had in the Court, the decision passed by it will continue to have binding force between the parties until vacated by one of the modes allowed by law.

The opportunity allowed to junior members of a Tarwad to contest the validity of a decree as against the Tarwad in execution, would be available only in cases where the objector had not been a party to the decree, but has been brought in on the record for the first time as the legal representative of the deceased Karanavan in execution.

With regard to the effect of decrees against a Karanavan, on the junior members of a Tarwad, the opportunity to contest the validity of such decrees must be restricted to the three classes of cases enumerated in paragraph 8 of the judgment in 21 T. L. R., 41.

"Where (a) there has been a fraud or collusion or treachery on the Karanavan's part, or (b) that the Court was cheated into believing that the case was fairly fought or fairly represented when in point of fact it was not so, or (c) the Karanavan has not defended properly the former suit because the plaint debt being a personal debt of his, he could not very well himself defend the suit on behalf of the Tarwad though there was no fraud, collusion or treachery, then the Tarwad had not been properly represented and ought to be given an opportunity in a fresh suit to prove that the debt did not exist or was not binding upon it."—

9. In a partition suit by certain members of a Marumakkathayam Tarwad, the application of some of the plaintiffs for directing the Karanavan, 1st defendant, to deposit in Court the maintenance claimed by them in excess of the amount admitted by the Karanavan before issues were framed in the case was allowed by the lower Court. In revision, the question was raised that the lower Court had no jurisdiction to pass such an order: Held.—Issues not having been raised in the case, the order could not be treated as a preliminary decree under Rules 16 and 18 of Order XX, C. P. C., nor as an interlocutory judgment passed on the admission of parties under Rule 6 of Order XII. The order could not also be regarded as passed under Clause (i) (d) of Rule 7 of Order XXXVII. Nor would it be proper or expedient, in the circumstances of the case, to exercise the inherent powers under Section 115 to dispose of the matters in dispute in the case summarily even without framing the issues involved or following the rules of procedure laid down in the Code for the trial of suits.— 45 T. ## REGULATION III OF 1100.
(Ezhava.)

1. A mere failure on the part of the husband to maintain the wife for some time would not per se constitute a divorce among Ezhavas. To allow such a presumption to be raised would be virtually denying to a certain extent the benefit of the salutary provisions of Section 366 of the Criminal Procedure Code to Ezhava wives.—

19 T. L. J., 61.

2. Section 1, Clause (2), of the Ezhava Regulation makes it clear that the provisions of the Regulation apply only to Marumakkathayam Ezhavas domiciled in Travancore and to Ezhavas of the same denomination who, though not domiciled in Travancore, have maritine relations with Marumakkathayam Ezhavas domiciled in Travancore.— 43 T. L. R., *381
(=19 T. L. J., 210).

Other Cases.

1. As regards property inherited by the children of a deceased Ezhava, the eldest son being the Karanavan of the sub-Tarwad, is entitled to sue alone as such without impleading the other children entitled to the property.— 4 S. D., 68.

2. The question was whether an issueless wife of an Ezhava was entitled to the separate acquisition of the accused: Held.—The widow is entitled to the usual half-share in such acquisitions.— 4 S. D., 130.

3. An investment or purchase in the name of wife or children in the case of a Marumakkathayee, raises a presumption of advancement, and not one of benami as under Hindu law. It is for the husband to rebut this.— 4 S. D., 357.

REGULATION VI OF 1100.
(Limitation.)

Section 5.

See Page 297, Supra.—

Sections 6 & 7.

A decree was passed in favour of minors on 11-12-1088. The decree was affirmed in appeal on 27-10-1096. The application of 13-10-1096 was allowed by the execution Court on 17-10-1096. This order was confirmed in appeal. On 7-5-1098, the application of the appellant was dismissed. On 27-10-1101, the guardian of the minors assigned the decree to the present respondent. The latter filed an application for execution on that very day. The appellant resisted the application on the ground that more than three years had elapsed from the date of the order dismissing the application for execution. The Munsiff overruled the objection on the ground that the application had been put in within three years after the attainment of the majority of one of the assignors. This order was confirmed in appeal. On second appeal, it was contended that the benefit of Sections 6 and 7 of the Regulation given to minors could not be extended to their assignees: Held.—The concession given to minors under Sections 6 and 7 cannot be extended to their assignees. The privilege referred to in these Sections is a purely personal one. This special privilege becomes extinguished by virtue of the transfer.—

Section 10.

Plaintiff as the owner of a temple sought for a declaration of title and for recovery of possession of the plaint property belonging to the temple trust. The defendant's ancestor was enjoying the plaint property as lessee, and possession continued in the defendant's family under an Ubhaya Marayam arrangement requiring the balance of the rent after payment of the Thiruppuvarom to the temple to be appropriated towards interest on the sum credited towards Marayam (premium). The defendat denied the Ubhaya Marayam and pleaded limitation. Held.—The question of limitation so far as the suit was concerned had to be decided with reference to the provisions of Section 10 of the Regulation (1062). In the nature of the pleadings in the case, it might be taken that the property involved was one vested in a person for a specific purpose connected with the trust. An express trust can be presumed in cases where a temple with an idol is had and properties are set apart for a specific purpose in connection with the worship in such temple. The rule embodied in Section 10 is applicable only to cases of express trusts.

An exemption from the operation of Section 10 can be allowed only in the case of assignees for valuable consideration without notice of the trust actual or constructive. If the trust belongs to the category of cases dealt with under the Section, and the beneficiary or a person claiming through him has otherwise the right in law to proceed against the property on behalf of the trust by reason of the property in question having been used for a pupose other than that for which it was originally vested in the trustee, the property has been declared liable to be followed in the hands of the trustee or any person under him, irrespective of the lapse of time under the Articles of the Regulation.

A distinction has to be kept between the transfer of proprietary rights over a right belonging to the trust consistent with the purpose for which the property was vested in the trustee, and the claim for such a right by prescription by virtue of a limited right so created and long possession thereafter. In the former case, it would be the absence of a right to pursue the property, while, in the latter case a denial of the right has to be made by reason of lapse of time. The latter case has to proceed upon the basis of assertion of full rights over the property being inconsistent with the purpose for which the property has been invested in the trustee.

Even viewing the Ubhaya Marayam as an assignment, the notice of the trust which the defendants' ancestor must be presumed to have had must perforce make Section 10 of the Regulation applicable to the case.— 19 T. L. J., 1095.

---

Section 14.

1. Under Section 14, in computing the period of limitation for a suit to recover money due under a periodically recurring right, the period of pendency of a suit for the same relief, dismissed for want of notice to Government under Section 409 C. P. C. (old) [=Sec. 65] has to be excluded.

Karathilchilavu literally means 'expenditure out of the land revenue.' It is in effect an assignment of the whole or of a specific portion of the revenue due on land, generally in favour of its holder. The amount assigned used to be neither actually collected from the holder nor paid to him, but it was fictitiously entered in the accounts as collected and then paid.

When a right has been enjoyed by a party for a very long time, the law presumes that it had a legal origin, and when necessary it will presume that the exercise of such immemorial right was based upon a valid grant.

Article 108 of the Regulation of 1062 [=Art. 118] applies in terms only to a suit to "establish a periodically recurring right." Establishing a right is different from claiming money due on the basis of the right, a consequential relief following from the right when established. The Article would on its wording apply only to a suit for a declaration of the right and would not apply to a suit for the recovery of money due in exercise of that right.

The Article applicable to such a suit is Article 100 of the Regulation of 1062 [= Art. 109] — 45 T. L. R., 103 (=19 T. L. J., 82).

2. The expression "Court" in Section 14 is not confined to Courts in Travancore, but includes foreign Courts also.— 19 T. L. J., 839.

3. The suit, which was for redemption of a mortgage, was originally filed in the Munsiff's Court on 32-10-1097, that is, two days before the completion of 50 years from the date of the mortgage deed. The plaint was returned from the Munsiff's Court on 24-2-1099 for presentation to the proper Court, and was filed in the District Court on 25-2-1099. The question was whether the plaintiff could take advantage of the time the case was pending in the Munsiff's Court for saving the bar of limitation. The Judge held that he could not, finding that he had no bona fides in instituting the suit in the Munsiff's Court, and for this finding he relied on his own adverse findings recorded against the plaintiff regarding the latter's allegations of set-off and part-payment of the mortgage amount. Held.—The failure of a party to prove a statement, which was required to enable him to file the suit in a particular Court, could not be taken as conclusive evidence that he had no bona fides in filing the suit in that Court. The mere fact that a party had not established his allegations by proper evidence in a Court of law did not by itself show that his allegations were untrue.—

19 T. L. J., 976.

Section 15.

Whatever may be the effect of the pendency of the suit for vacating the decree sought to be executed, a decree of a competent Court nullifying the same to which the decree-holder in the prior suit is a party, should be considered sufficient to suspend the period of limitation available for the execution of the former decree under Section 15 (1) of the Regulation. The Section has to be liberally construed.—

19 T. L. J., 624.

Section 27.

In the case of a right of easement to take water from a well, the presumption of "lost grant" is applicable, and the right of easement should be refused only when evidence rebutting the same is adduced.

Where a defendant's denial of the user has been concurrently found against and where plaintiff's evidence was to the effect that the defendant feeling that the user by the plaintiff would be continued in spite of the obstruction by the former, acquiesced in the same, the plaintiff must be taken to have used the water from the well as of right.

Mere obstruction will be insufficient to constitute interruption within the meaning of Explanation II of Section 26 of the Regulation (1062), as it is essential that the obstruction for the period prescribed therein should have been acquiesced in by the party claiming the easement during that period.

Where it was contended that the suit having been based, on the claim for a declaration of the plaintiff's proprietary right over a share in the plaint well, she could not be given a declaration of a right of easement to the well. Held.—Where there is an express allegation in the plaint referring to a right of easement by reason of long and uninterrupted user, the above contention cannot be accepted as substantial.—

19 T. L. J., 1106.

Article 62.

See Regn. III of 1094.—19 T. L. J., 558.

Article 83.

The wording of Article 78 (old) does not support the restricted interpretation that the word "mistake" used in the Article refers only to mistakes that may have arisen in the course of the creation of contractual relations between the parties and that would give a right to a party to rectification of the contract. All that Section 78 requires is that the suit must claim some relief based upon the ground of mistake evidently mistake of the plaintiff, by reason of which he did something. The relief must be claimed not on the basis of some wrong committed by the defendant, but on the basis of a mistake made by the plaintiff. Evidently, the relief contemplated by the Article is relief from the consequences of an act done by the plaintiff himself, the basis of the claim being that the act was done because of a mistake, and but for the mistake, would not have been done.—

45 T. L. R., *96
(=19 T. L. J., 349).

Article 118.

See Sec. 14 Supra.—45 T. L. R., 103 (=19 T. L. J., 82).

Articles 130 & 132.

1. Every suit for possession of immovable property where the plaintiff alleges that he has had possession is one for ejectment to which the Article of the Limitation Regulation applicable is 119 and not 121.

In order to sustain a claim to land by Limitation, there must be an actual possession by a person claiming as of right by himself or by a person deriving title from him.

Possession by a person who enters on Government land with the hope that it may be registered in his name is not adverse possession, but only precarious possession, and cannot avail against the Government or a person acquiring title from the Government.— 43 T. L. R., 255.

2. A distinction has to be kept in view between cases where there has been an express plea of possession and dispossession and cases where there has been no such plea. In the former case, Article 119 (old) will be applicable, while in the latter case Article 121 thereto should be applied. The time from which the period will begin to run in the former case will be the date of dispossession, while that in the latter case will be the date on which the possession of the defendant will become adverse to the plaintiff. In cases where recovery of possession on title is sought for, the plaintiff has only to prove his title, the defendant who sets up adverse possession having to make out such possession as would entitle him to resist the plaintiff's claim.— 19 T. L. J., 917.

Articles 164 & 166.

1. An application by the decree-holder to the Court which passed the decree under execution for a certificate to obtain a copy of the Chitta to enable him to place an attachment on the property of the Judgment-debtor is a step in aid of the execution of the decree.— 19 T. L. J., 269.

2. Where an application was confirmed before Regulation of 1100 came into force, but the application for delivery of possession of purchased property was made after the date of enactment of the Regulation, the law of limitation applicable to the application in question is the law in force at the date of application.

The application for delivery of possession, by the decree-holder-auction-purchaser is governed by Article 164 and not by Article 166 of the Regulation.— 45 T. L. R., 316.

REGULATION VIII OF 1100.

(The Civil Procedure Code).

Section 8.

1. The suit was for damages on account of the defendant's felling down the trees in a Kandukrishi holding in which the plaintiff was entitled to an one-fourth share, the defendants 1 to 3 being the owners of the remaining three-fourths share. Held.—The sanction of Government contemplated in Section 8 is essential for the suit.

The right to damages will necessarily involve a right to the trees in question which will fall within the definition of immovable property under Section 2 (7) of the General Clauses Regulation. A suit of this nature should be taken to relate to land, and, therefore, as falling within the purview of Section 8 (33 T. L. R., 240 Distinguished.)— 19 T. L. J., 1136.

2. See also Regn. VIII of 1090, Sec. 16.— 43 T. L. R., 466 (=17 T. L. J., 879).

Section 10.

1. The suit was to set aside on Otti and Kuzhikanom mortgage executed by defendants 6 to 8, by plaintiffs who claimed to be of the same Tarwad as defendants 6 to 8 on the ground of want of good and valid consideration. The contention was that defendants 1 to 5 as the mortgagees of defendants 6 to 8 should be bound by a prior judgment against the latter. Held.—After a mortgage has been duly created, the mortgagor in whom the equity of redemption is vested, no longer possesses any such estate as would entitle him to represent the mortgagee in a subsequent suit so as to render that decision binding upon and conclusive against such mortgagee. Defendants 1 to 5 cannot claim under defendants 6 to 8 within the meaning of Section 9 C. P. C. (old).

Admissions by a joint tenant, co-sharer, partner and such like are admissions by all the joint tenants, co-sharers and partners. Admissions by a tenant in common are not, however, admissions against other tenants in common.— 4 S. D., 169.

Section 19.

The plaintiff brought the suit in the lower Court against the defendants for recovery of the value of jaggery sold to them. The defendants contended inter alia that the Court had no jurisdiction to try the suit, themselves being absent foreigners, and denied the plaint agreement of sale.

The lower Court raised the various issues that arose upon the pleadings, and, on the application of the defendants, disposed of the issue relating to the question of jurisdiction after taking the evidence relating thereto, holding that it had jurisdiction to try the suit. The lower Court based its conclusion on its findings that the place intended for the payment of the price of jaggery was within its jurisdiction and that the defendants had voluntarily submitted to its jurisdiction.

Against the above order of the lower Court, the defendants preferred the revision petition. Held.—The finding of the lower Court on the question of submission to jurisdiction was correct. The conduct of the defendants before it clearly showed that there had been a voluntary submission to its jurisdiction by them. The submission should be deemed to have been made voluntarily not only in cases where the defendant appears and pleads to the merits but also when, although protesting, he also pleads on the merits, and even if he merely appears in order to protest against jurisdiction. The motive for the appearance is perfectly immaterial in deciding the question of voluntariness in such cases.

The deletion of Explanation III to Section 14 of the Code of 1065 has not effected any change in the law, for, under the Explanation in the old Code, specific reference was made to the places where the rights and the infringements thereof which constitute the cause of action arose, thereby implying that in the cases of contracts Courts will have jurisdiction even when a portion of the cause of action arose within their territorial limits.

It is doubtful whether the general Rule that a debtor should follow his creditor for payment could be invoked for jurisdictional purposes in the nature of the wording of Section 14 (old). The place of payment of money for purposes of Section 14 seems to have reference only to places where the contract makes any provision with reference thereto.— 19 T. L. J., 940.

Section 31.

1. Payments made out of Court should not be taken into account in the computation of the maximum amount realisable in execution under Section 21 of Regulation IV of 1010 (F. B.). Held by majority.—Agreements between the parties in the course of the execution proceedings as to the enhanced rate of interest and as to the amount that has to be recognised as principal can be enforced by the execution Court.

After obtaining a release from arrest on the strength of an agreement as regards enhanced interest and the amount to be treated as principal, the judgment-debtor cannot go behind the same and require the Court to ignore the terms on which he had been released and allow execution of the decree as originally passed irrespective of the later undertakings. Held per Joseph Thaliath, J.—In no case can a decree-holder realise through Court interest amounting to more than the original principal. Any agreement entered into between the parties, whether approved by the Court or not, cannot be allowed to defeat this principle.— 46 T. L. R., 338 (=19 T. L. J., 1162).

PART II—EXECUTION.
(General.)

1. The decree-holder's remedy of possession of lands sold in Court-auction was by an application under Section 238 C. P. C., (old) and not by a separate suit.

The cause of action for a declaratory suit is the denial of the plaintiff's right by some person coupled with the fact that unless the plaintiff takes steps to have his right declared against such person, there is a reasonable danger that plaintiff might lose relevant evidence by lapse of time or be barred from enjoying the benefit of such rights in the future.

One other test also to see whether it is advisable to give a declaratory decree is to enquire whether a plaintiff is in a position at the time of the suit to claim any more substantial relief in respect of the plaint property against the defendant denying his title or against other persons, and if such substantial relief would necessarily be a declaration of title. If it would so imply the better course is to dismiss the declaratory suit and leave the plaintiff to sue for the more substantial reliefs.— 4 S. D., 44.

2. Where on an application for execution by the assignee of a decree, it is found that the decree is void on account of the death of the defendant prior to the date of the final hearing, the fact of death of the defendant being unknown to both parties at the time of the assignment : Held.—The assignee can recover the purchase money in a separate suit from the assignor.— 4 S. D., 57.

3. A decree for money obtained in the Court of first instance was reversed on appeal by the High Court on the contention of a supplemental defendant whose rights thereunder were not declared. But before the decision of the High Court, the money due to plaintiff under the original Court decree was recovered by him. Held.—The Court could recover the money from the plaintiff on its own motion.— 4 S. D., 99.

4. A hypothecated two separate sets of properties to plaintiff and 2nd defendant respectively. 2nd defendant sued on the document, got a decree, attached the properties covered by plaintiff's hypothecation deed, and himself became the auction purchaser. Plaintiff subsequently got a decree on his document and in execution found that the properties had been already sold. The Munsiff refused to order a re-sale. Held (in reversal of the Munsiff's decree but in confirmation of the lower appellate Court's decree),—The property should be resold and 2nd defendant was not a necessary party to the execution proceedings in this suit, he not being a representative of any of the parties thereof.— 4 S. D., 194.

5. The auction purchase by the decree-holder of some properties belonging to the judgment-debtor having been set aside at the instance of intervenors who claimed to be the real owners, he sought further execution of the decree including the amount realised by the (subsequently cancelled) auction sale. The lower Court held that the appellants should not be allowed to do so. Held.—All questions relating to the execution of the decree between the parties should be determined under Section 238 C. P. C., (old), and not by a separate suit.

The decree-holder was clearly entitled, under the circumstances, to execute the decree in full as if no sale had taken place.— 4 S. D., 302.

6. Decree was passed on 26-3-1066. The application for sale of the hypothecated properties and for attachment of other properties was made on 23-2-'78. The hypothecated properties were sold on 3-7-'78. Attachment list was put in on 5-7-'78, and attachment effected on 8-8-'78. The execution application of 23-2-'78 was struck off on 25-10-'78 for non-payment of batta, retaining the attachment. On 17-11-'78, a fresh application was put in for sale of the attached properties. Held.—The execution was not barred as the last application was not a fresh application for execution, but only a renewal of the former application of 23-2-'78.

Orders passed in execution after notice to judgment-debtors are not res judicata against them.— 4 S. D., 343.

7. Plaintiff moved the execution Court for redelivery of the excess portion, but the petition was dismissed for want of evidence. Plaintiff then brought the present suit for recovery of the excess property so delivered. Held.—The suit related to a question arising in execution, and plaintiff having moved the execution Court, no fresh suit lay.

The plaint might be treated as an application under Section 238 C. P. C. (old).— 4 S. D., 383.

8. The position of the decree-holder who seeks to enforce his decree against certain properties on the ground of their being his debtor's assets differs in no way from that of a person preferring a claim. The burden of proof is on the decree-holder who asserts that the property seized in execution of his decree was the property of the deceased debtor and as such in the possession of the judgment-debtor.— 19 T. L. J., 1338.

9. The plaintiff and second defendant were members of an undivided Varyar family and the plaint property which belongs to the Manampoor Devaswom, had been demised to the plaintiff's family as Karaima for the performance of certain services in the Devaswom. The first defendant obtained a decree for money against the second defendant, and in execution sold and purchased the plaint property. The suit was to set aside the decree and execution proceedings on the grounds that the debt in question was unsupported by consideration and necessity and that the property was inalienable. The Courts below allowed the suit holding that the property was inalienable and could not be sold in execution and left open the question of consideration and necessity for the debt. The first defendant preferred the special appeal. Held.—The special appeal had to be dismissed (F. B.)

Per Parameswaran Pillai and Venkata Rao, JJ.—The holder of land granted for the performance of services which he has no right to alienate has not such an interest in the land as is capable of being transferred or sold in execution of a decree against him.— 19 T. L. J., 1338.

10. A decree was passed against the first defendant and the Tarwad properties of defendants 1 and 2. The decree was ex parte. The first defendant had the ex parte decree set aside. Then the first defendant and the plaintiff compromised the suit and a decree in terms of the compromise was passed under which the first defendant and the Tarwad properties were made liable. The second defendant raised objections to the execution of the decree in execution proceedings and the objection was allowed by the lower Court. On appeal: Held.—It is not open to the second defendant to treat the compromise decree as a nullity, even though he was not a party to the compromise. Such decree is binding on the second defendant until it is vacated by a proper proceeding.

Jurisdiction is the power to hear and determine a matter. It does not depend on the regularity of the exercise of that power or upon the correctness of the decision pronounced, for the power to decide necessarily carries with it the power to decide wrongly as well as rightly.

A distinction has to be drawn between the existence of jurisdiction and an exercise of jurisdiction. Where the exercise of jurisdiction is declared permissible only on the performance of an action as a condition precedent thereto, it would be a case of absence of jurisdiction until that condition is satisfied and not an improper or wrong exercise of jurisdiction. If, however, jurisdiction is had in the Court, the decision passed by it will continue to have binding force between the parties until vacated by one of the modes allowed by law.

The opportunity allowed to junior members of a Tarwad to contest the validity of a decree as against the Tarwad, in execution, would be available only in cases where the objector had not been a party to the decree but has been brought in on the record for the first time as the legal representative of the deceased Karanavan in execution.

With regard to the effect of decrees against a Karanavan, on the junior members of a Tarwad, the opportunity to contest the validity of such decrees must be restricted to the three classes of cases enumerated in paragraph 8 of the judgment in 21 T. L. R., 41, 43 and 44.

"Where (a) there has been a fraud or collusion or treachery on the Karanavan's part, or (b) that the Court was cheated into believing that the case was fairly fought or fairly represented when in point of fact it was not so" (L. R. 8 Ch. D. 616), or (c) the Karanavan has not defended properly the former suit because the plaint debt being a personal debt of his he could not very well himself defend the suit on behalf of the Tarwad though there was no fraud, collusion or treachery, then the Tarwad had not been properly represented and ought to be given an opportunity in a fresh suit to prove that the debt did not exist or was not binding upon it.— 19 T. L. J., 1273.

Section 52.

Future rents and profits are not debts within the meaning of the expression used in Section 52. They are therefore not attachable.

Future rents and profits have no existence on the date of the attachment and they do not fall within the ambit of the expression debitum in presenti solventum in futuro, when only debts will constitute such.

The distinction must be borne in mind between the case where there is an existing debt, payment whereof is deferred and the case where both the debt and the payment rest in the future. In the former case there is an attachable debt, in the latter there is not.

The principle of the decision in 15 T. L. J., 324 cannot, therefore, be challenged.— 19 T. L. J., 1152.

Section 58.

No suit could be maintained against a certified purchaser on the ground that the purchase was made benami (F. B.).— 4 S. D., 310.

---

Section 59.

No appeal lies from an order passed on a petition for rateable distribution under Section 292. There being a separate remedy by suit provided for the case of those aggrieved by orders under Section 292, C. P. C., (old), no revision lies from such orders.— 4 S. D., 102.

---

Section 76.

1. In a suit for redemption, the Zillah Judge reversed the Munsiff's decree dismissing the plaintiff's suit and decreed redemption. In special appeal by 1st defendant, it was contended that, as the 1st defendant alone had appealed, the whole suit could not be dismissed but only the claim for redemption as far as it affected the 1st defendant's share alone. Held.—The Appellate Court could pass a decree in favour also of these defendants who did not appeal if the defendant who did appeal succeeded on a ground common to himself and the other defendants.— 4 S. D., 140.

2. The cross-appeal cannot re-open any questions which have been decided between co-respondents, but must have reference to the appellant and to the points in dispute between the respondent who takes the cross-appeal and the appellant.— 4 S. D., 252.

Section 82.

1. An order passed in a summary suit is not appealable.— 4 S. D., 300.

2. No appeal lies against an order passed in the exercise of the inherent jurisdiction of the Court under Section 115.— 19 T. L. J., 1138.

Section 85.

A suit by a Melottidar for recovery of mortgaged property on the strength of a release deed executed by the mortgagee's Tarwad whose mortgage term for 12 years had not expired on the date of suit. Held.—As the 12 years' term had not expired, there was no valid objection to the surrender of the property, and it might be the duty of the Appellate Court to take notice of events happening since the order challenged in appeal was made.—4 S. D., 136.

Section 108.

In execution of an ex parte decree the properties of the judgment-debtor were sold in court auction and purchased by a stranger and the amount deposited by him in Court was drawn by the decree-holder towards satisfaction of his decree. The ex parte decree was subsequently set aside. The lower Court thereupon passed an order in execution ordering the decree-holder to deposit in Court the amount drawn by him. It was contended for the decree-holder in revision that the remedy of the auction-purchaser lay by a separate suit and that the lower Court was incompetent to direct restitution: Held.—The order for restitution passed by the lower Court was competent.

The principle of the doctrine of restitution is that on the reversal of the judgment the law raises an obligation in the party to the record who received the benefit under an erroneous judgment to make restitution to the other party for what he had lost. That obligation it is the duty of the Courts to enforce, unless it is shown that restitution would be clearly contrary to the real justice of the case. If it is the legal effect of a decree to allow the person in whose favour it is passed to execute it, it is no less the effect of a decree reversing it to direct him to disgorge everything that he has received on the strength of such decree. This power has to be exercised by virtue of the inherent jurisdiction of the Courts as they have to see that no advantage is had by reason of their erroneous decisions. In such cases, the Court has the inherent jurisdiction to call upon a party who has received from Court monies on the strength of its decisions subsequently vacated, to pay the same back, and such directions could be issued irrespective of the fact that there is no specific provision in the Civil Procedure Code authorising the same. Even if it is considered that such a provision is necessary, the powers conferred upon the Court by Section 115 seem sufficiently comprehensive.— 19 T. L. J., 1228.

Section 109.

1. The accepted rule of construction as regards surety bonds is that they should be construed strictly and in a manner favourable to the guarantor.

If the terms of contract in writing are capable of different constructions, it is permissible to examine the conduct of the parties to explain or elucidate the expressions used therein.— 19 T. L. J., 1089.

2. Plaintiff obtained an order of injunction on furnishing security for six years' mesne profits. The security was furnished by a surety-bond executed by plaintiff's son charging certain specified properties under which he agreed that the amount of such profits if they became due to the third defendant under the final decision of the suit may be realised from the properties comprised in the bond. The suit having been dismissed with costs, the third defendant applied for realisation of the mesne profits from plaintiff by sale of the properties on which the amount of such profits had been charged under the bond. The question arose whether, in the circumstances, the third defendant should be given relief in execution proceedings or whether he should seek his remedies by suit: Held.—In this and similar cases, the only mode of enforcing the bond must be by the Court making an order in the suit upon an application to which the surety is a party, that the property charged be sold unless before a day named the surety finds the money.— 45 T. L. R., 477.

Section 115.

" 108 " .— 19 T. L. J., 1228.

Order I, Rule 3.

The Sirkar granted Pattah in respect of certain Viruthi lands after levying Vilayartham and put the plaintiff in possession in 1071, and plaintiff leased the lands to defendant who paid rent till 1076. The defendant contended that he was in possession for the last 50 years and denied plaintiff's allegations: Held.—The Sirkar was a necessary party to determine whether the Sirkar's right to grant Pattah was in existence when that alleged right was exercised and Pattah granted to plaintiff.—

4 S. D., 369.

Order IX.

The principles to be borne in mind in determining whether, in any case, there was appearance or not, are—

Firstly.—If the party or his pleader is not present in Court, there could be no appearance as contemplated in the provisions of Order IX so far as such party is concerned.

Secondly.—No such appearance could be held to have been entered even if the party, or his pleader, or both are present and their application for time is refused whereupon they retire from the conduct of the case. Such retirement need not expressly be stated to the Court, the same being liable to be gathered from the circumstances made out in the case.

Thirdly.—The expression of inability to conduct or a proposal to retire from the conduct of the case must be made when the case is taken up for trial on a particular date. Such intimation given by the party or his agent or his pleader after participating in the conduct of the case, the same being not in connection with applications for the grant of time, would not justify such conduct being held to constitute an appearance within the meaning of the above Order.

Fourthly.—The bona fides of the party with reference to the default referred to above is not a matter which will have a material bearing in the determination of the question of appearance, as the same has to be taken into account only in disposing of an application for restoration under Order IX, Rule 13.

Rules 2 and 3 of Order XVII are independent and mutually exclusive.—

Order XVIII, Rule 17.

Though the Code of 1065 did not contain any express provisions relating to local inspection by the presiding Officers of the trial Courts, the right to do the same has been recognised.

In the amending Code of 1100, statutory recognition of the authority of the Court to conduct the local inspections has been made by the insertion of Rule 17 of Order XVIII.

The object of local investigation that could be made by the presiding Officer is for understanding the evidence adduced before the Court and not for being used as the foundation of the judgment. A judgment based purely on the result of local investigation will ordinarily be unsupportable and will have to be set aside.

The sounder rule is that a Court making a local investigation is bound to commit to writing whatever facts have been noticed by it during the visit. In the absence of such a record, the appellate Court will be unable to examine the soundness or otherwise of the conclusions arrived at by the trial Court. Such commitment to writing is therefore imperative.

Whenever a local investigation is made by Court, it is bound to place on the record of the case, a bill showing the actual charges incurred in connection with such inspection, under Rule 728 of the Civil Courts' Guide.— 19 T. L. J., 1345.

Order XXI, Rule 14.

1. An assignee in writing of the rights under a decree can apply for execution of the decree to the Court which passed the decree, execution having to be allowed thereon as if the original decree-holder himself had applied for the same.

Even mortgagees of decrees would be transferees of decrees within the purview of the above provision.

Partial assignments would attract the provisions of the Rule.

The assignment should clearly relate to the decree. A mere assignment of property in writing would not ordinarily operate as an assignment of a decree, nor would a mere release operate as an assignment within the meaning of the Rule.

The transfer has to be in writing. An oral transfer is ineffectual for this purpose. Such a transferee from one of the joint decree-holders can validly apply for execution.

An application by him would take effect in favour of all.

If he gives up the remaining portion of the decree and execution is allowed to proceed with the other decree-holders on record, it may operate as a bar for execution with respect to the balance.

Strictly construed, the Rule would imply that, in the case of transfers, an application for execution alone is contemplated thereunder. In the nature of the wording of the Rule, it is doubtful whether it could be said that, apart from an order allowing or refusing execution, the Legislature has considered as formal order recognising the assignment essential under this Rule.

The first Proviso to the Rule insists upon notice being given to the decree-holders and judgment-debtors and their being heard before execution is allowed to be proceeded with. A compliance with the provisions of this proviso is imperative. In the absence of such a notice and the disposal of the objections invited thereunder, all the proceedings taken thereafter would be null and void.

What is required under the Rule is that the application should be for execution with the assignee on record and that it is incumbent on the execution Court to issue notice of such application to the decree-holders and judgment-debtors and hear their objections. If the prayer on the application was only for the substitution of the names, the Court should require the party to amend the application by inclusion of the reliefs sought for. If without such amendment, orders had been passed for such substitution alone, the same could be treated as one allowing execution within the meaning of Clause 5 of Article 166 of the Limitation Regulation.

For purposes of execution, an application could be made only by the person who is on record as the decree-holder in cases where the application for execution by the assignee has been refused. The provisions contained in the Rule relate only to the proceedings, the validity or otherwise of the transfer having to be determined by other rules of law relating to transfers generally.

Under the second proviso to the Rule, it would not be improper to treat decrees based on simple mortgages or hypothecation deeds as those for payment of money, even though a right to enforce the debt against certain specified property is allowed. It is however essential that there should be a specific direction for payment by the defendant jointly with others. In the absence of such a provision, the propriety of applying this Rule seems to be doubtful.

It is only in cases where owing to fraud or other infirmative circumstances which would invalidate the transaction as a whole or where the contract cannot be taken to have been a completed one or to have binding effect in the eye of the law that execution could be refused under the first proviso.— 45 T. L. R., 364.

2. Order XXI, Rule 14, does not prohibit a transferee of a decree from applying for recognition as assignee and for execution to the Court to which the decree has been sent for execution. The use of the word 'may' shows that the application to the Court which passed the decree is merely permissive and does not deprive the jurisdiction conferred on the Court of transfer to deal with applications of this kind.

Words in a statute which are only directory, permissive or enabling should ordinarily receive such a construction except in cases where the thing to be done is for the public benefit or in advancement of public justice. In the latter classes of cases, such a provision should be construed as compulsory requiring the things referred to, to be done. As regards the import of the word 'may' occurring in statutes, it has to be observed that its ordinary connotation is of a permissive nature. Unless a contrary intention is clear from the context, this construction alone is allowed to be made.—

Order XXI, Rule 28.

When an attachment was set aside in pursuance of an order passed on a claim petition which itself was nullified by a fresh suit at the instance of the decree-holder: Held.—The former attachment revived and until actually set aside by order of Court, was still subsisting.— 4 S. D. 51.

Order XXI, Rule 51.

In execution of a decree of the Travancore Court, a decree passed by the British Court was attached and the British decree was transferred for execution to the Travancore Court. During the pendency of an application for execution, one of the plaintiffs in the British decree died. Held. The execution of the transferred decree in the Travancore Court need not be stayed for the purpose of having the representative of the deceased impleaded by an application to the proper Court (the British Court), the attaching creditor being virtually in the possession of a transferee of the British decree, unless notice to the contrary has been received by the Travancore Court.— 4 S. D., 66.

Order XXI, Rule 86.

1. Where the legal representative of the judgment-debtor presented two applications on the same day, the one praying to set aside Court sale and the other praying that the money deposited should not be given to the decree-holder: Held.—The deposit contemplated by Section 307-A is an unconditional deposit. The two applications should be read together, the one as supplementing the other. The deposit is not an unconditional deposit.—

4 S D., 376.

Order XXI, Rules 94 & 96.

Where a decree-holder in executing the decree did not apply under Section 317, C. P. C., (old) within one month of the obstruction but put in a fresh execution petition for delivery, and the Munsiff dismissed it on the ground that the petitioner's proper course was to have put in a petition under Section 317: Held.—There was nothing to prevent a second execution petition, specially where the obstructor was a judgment-debtor (see the use of 'may' in Section 317), and every judgment-creditor has a right to put in a fresh execution application unless he is barred by limitation.

4 S. D., *298.

Order XXI, Rules 97-98.

Where a claim petition presented under Section 321 is disallowed, a fresh suit to establish the right to present possession must be instituted within one year under Article 7 of the Limitation Regulation (old). But a suit brought on the strength of title is not barred by Article 7.—

4 S. D., *32.

Order XXII, Rule 4.

Under Section 352, the Court is bound to place on record the name of the person alleged by the plaintiff to be the legal representative of the deceased defendant.

There is nothing in Clause 18 of Section 557 which confines the right of appeal against an order under Section 352 to the person who has been made a party.—

4 S. D., *386.

Order XXIII, Rule 3.

1. A decree cannot be construed so as to extend its terms. Hence, a compromise decree which contained a provision that defendant undertook to build a wall in two months and that, if defendant made default, plaintiff might build it himself cannot be supplemented by the provision that, if plaintiff builds the wall on defendant's default, he should get the whole costs of such building in that suit itself in execution.— 4 S. D., *94.

2. A decree did not embody the terms of a compromise and did not give all the declarations and reliefs or establish all the rights and liabilities agreed to by the parties under the agreement, but merely dismissed the suit then brought as the parties had compromised their disputes. Held.—The agreement could not be regarded as binding on the parties as a decree of Court, and it could not also be treated as a separate agreement validly binding on the Tarwad members as it was not registered.

4 S. D., *133.

3. A decree was passed in favour of the mortgagee for 8,500 Fs. mortgage amount and 884 Fs. by way of interest. In execution of this decree, the property in question was proclaimed for sale. In the proclamation schedule, the amount to be realised was specified by mistake to be 9,644 Fs. The schedule however was rectified before the actual sale. Within 30 days of the sale, the respondent who had meanwhile derived title from the judgment-debtors deposited the sale price of 8550 Fs. together with the five per cent. commission and got the sale set aside. The auction-purchaser (appellant) objected to the cancellation of the auction-sale on the ground that the whole amount specified in the proclamation of sale ought to have been deposited before the cancellation of the sale. Held.—The deposit made by the respondent was clearly sufficient.— 45 T. L. R., *326.

Order XXXI, Rule 1.

The usage of the Devaswom is the governing factor in questions arising as to whether a Manushyam and Mootadu have the power to grant Kanom leases of Devaswom lands without the consent of the Urallers.— 4 S. D., *69.

Order XXXIII, Rule 11.

Plaintiff sued her husband for separate maintenance, past and future. A decree was passed in her favour awarding her future maintenance at a certain rate. Her claim for past maintenance was disallowed. She preferred an appeal claiming a higher rate as monthly allowance and also arrears of past maintenance. The parties then adjusted the matter out of Court and put in a compromise petition. The question arose as to who should be held liable for the payment of Court fees due to the Sirkar.

Held.—The party who is responsible for the payment of Court fees to the Sirkar is the appellant as she must be deemed to have "failed in the suit" within the meaning of Order XXXIII, Rule 11. (F. B.)—

Order XXXVII, Rules 1 and 2.

In a suit for the removal of Karanavan, plaintiff prayed for an injunction against defendant's dealing with Tarwad property, the District Munsiff granted his application restraining defendant from alienating Tarwad property pending suit. On appeal, the question arose whether Tarwad property was property in dispute under Section 471 C. P. C., and whether a general injunction against alienation could be granted. Held.—It was doubtful whether the application would fall under Section 471, but it may come under Section 472 under the head of a suit for restraining defendant from committing injury, and even if it does not so come under Section 472, the Court has inherent powers to pass all interlocutory orders necessary to see that its final decree is not deprived of any portion of its effectiveness by the act of parties pendente lite.

That portion of the injunction order which prohibited alienation generally was bad.— 4 S. D., 870.

Civil Courts' Guide.

1. Article 429, Clauses (2) and (3) of the Civil Courts' Guide relate also to dismissals for default made after the framing of the issues.— 19 T. L. J., 1133.

2. It is incumbent on the Court under Article 383 of the Civil Courts' Guide to note in its judgment whether a refund is allowed or not.— 19 T. L. J., 1255.

3. Some of the Adhikaris of a Devaswom sued the defendants for an injunction to restrain them from performing certain services in the temple on the ground that they had been removed from their offices by the management of the Devaswom. This prayer was allowed by the trial Court as regards the 2nd defendant. On appeal, this decision was reversed and the suit was dismissed as against the second defendant as well. The second defendant then applied to the lower Court in execution for recovery of costs and a sum of 19613 and odd Fanams as damages awardable by way of restitution. The lower Court allowed the claim only to the extent of Fs. 14072. The second defendant filed an appeal as regards the balance disallowed and the Devaswom as regards the amount awarded. It was contended (1) that ad valorem fee had to be paid on amounts involved in the appeal, (2) that Article 338 of the Civil Courts' Guide had ceased to be operative as Section 238 of the old C. P. C. had been repealed and as no amended Notification had been published after the Code of 1100, (3) that even if Article 338 of the Civil Courts' Guide was applicable, the present claim should be treated as one for mesne profits: Held.—The appeal memoranda have to be taxed with a fee of Rs. 2, under Schedule II, Article VI (b), of the Court Fees Regulation read with Article 338 of the Civil Courts' Guide.

(2) Article 338 of the Civil Courts' Guide has not ceased to be operative by the repeal of the old Civil Procedure Code, even though no new Notification has issued subsequent to the passing of the new Code.

(3) The claim cannot be said to be one for mesne profits as it did not relate to profits which the person in wrongful possession of property actually received or might with ordinary diligence have received therefrom.

Notifications issued under the repealed Regulation of 1065 cannot be deemed to have become inoperative by the passing of the Regulation of 1100, especially with reference to matters with respect to which the latter Regulation has not introduced any change in the law.—45 T. L. R., *254

APPENDIX C.

(1)

Rules regulating enquiries into the conduct of Public Servants passed by His Highness the Maha Rajah under date the 12th December 1896 corresponding with the 29th Vrischikom 1072 in supersession of the Proceedings dated 18th November 1891, No. 5740/M. 2393.

Preliminary.

1. For purposes of these Rules, Public Servants not removable from office without the sanction of His Highness the Maha Rajah shall be designated 'Superior Public Servants' and all others 'Inferior Public Servants.'

PART I.

Superior Public Servants.

2. No Superior Public Servant shall be dismissed without a formal and public enquiry in the manner hereinafter described.

3. Whenever on a complaint or otherwise it is found necessary to enquire into the conduct of a Superior Public Servant, the Head of the Department or office in which such Public Servant is employed may make a preliminary enquiry to determine whether there are grounds for a formal and public enquiry. The officer holding the preliminary enquiry may examine such records and such persons as may be necessary to find out the truth of the charge or allegation against the Public Servant concerned, and may also take a statement from such Public Servant. He may, if necessary, and if specially empowered in this behalf, summon any person to give evidence or produce any document in his possession or custody. No formal examination of witnesses is, however, necessary; but a note of the evidence shall be taken by the officer holding the enquiry.

Explanation.—A Division Peishkar is the Head of all the Departments and offices in his Division which are under his control and supervision.

4. If from the preliminary enquiry the officer making it considers that there are sufficient grounds for holding a formal and public enquiry, he shall submit a report to Government detailing the charges or specific acts of alleged misconduct which he considers should be enquired into.

5. Whenever it appears to Government from such report or otherwise that it is necessary to hold a formal and public enquiry into the conduct of a Superior Public Servant, a Commission consisting of one or more officers of position shall be appointed for the purpose.

6. The Commission may be appointed by the Dewan unless the accused Public Servant is an officer drawing a monthly salary of Rs. 200 and above or a Tahsildar or a Magistrate, in which case the Commission shall be appointed only with the sanction of His Highness the Maha Rajah.

7. The conduct of the enquiry shall be regulated by the Commissioner when the Commission consists of one member only and by the President of the Commission when the same consists of more than one member.

DEPARTMENTAL ENQUIRIES RULES.

8. The enquiry shall be held in the presence of the accused, unless the accused after being duly served with a notice, fails without reasonable cause, to attend.

9. The accused shall, before the commencement of the enquiry, be furnished with a list of the charges against him. He shall have the right of cross-examining all the witnesses against him and of examining his own witnesses. He shall be furnished with copies of all evidence against him, and shall have the right of putting in a statement of his defence and any documents relevant to the enquiry. He may also engage a Vakil to defend him.

10. The Commission may summon persons to give evidence or produce documents in their possession or custody either on behalf of the prosecution or the defence.

11. After the close of the enquiry, the Commission shall draw up a report setting forth the evidence and its finding and submit the same with all the proceedings to the Dewan.

12. The Dewan may order further evidence to be taken or call for further explanation of the opinion of the Commission.

13. On receiving the proceedings and such further evidence or explanation as may be called for, the Dewan shall, when the Public Servant accused is one drawing Rs. 200 or above, or a Tahsildar or a Magistrate, submit the same to His Highness the Maha Rajah with his opinion. In other cases, he may, if he sees sufficient reason for doing so, suspend such officer for a period not exceeding 3 months or fine him in any amount not exceeding a month's salary. If higher punishment is deemed necessary, the Dewan shall submit the case with his opinion to His Highness the Maha Rajah.

14. The Rules under this Part do not apply to enquiries into the conduct of Superior Public Servants in the Judicial Department, which are regulated by the Rules passed by His Highness the Maha Rajah under date the 14th Meenom 1059.

PART II.

Inferior Public Servants.

15. No Inferior Public Servant shall be dismissed except on good and sufficient grounds such as fraud, dishonesty, continued and wilful negligence, gross insubordination, offences involving moral disgrace, proved incompetency.

16. In all cases of dismissal of a Public Servant, the charge against him and the evidence in support of the charge should be reduced to writing, his defence should be either taken in or reduced to writing, and the decision or order should also be in writing. Copies of the whole of such proceedings should be maintained in the office of the dismissing authority, and should also be furnished to the person dismissed.

17. The enquiry should, as far as possible, be conducted in the presence of the accused Public Servant. But if the Public Servant concerned has absconded, the charge as well as the evidence in support of it and a formal order setting forth the charge and the grounds on which the dismissal is resolved on should be recorded.

18. The enquiry in all cases should be thorough and, as far as possible, in judicial form. The admission of evidence need not, however, be restricted by the law of judicial evidence. All evidence which, in the opinion of the enquiring officer, conduces to moral conviction regarding the guilt or innocence of the accused Public Servant may be admitted.

19. It is not enough that the Public Servant accused should be told of the charge he has to meet: he should be told also of the evidence and arguments in support of the charge before he is required to defend himself. The accused person may be examined in the form of questions and answers. But this does not deprive him of his right to place on record a full written statement of his defence.

PART III.

General.

20. In dealing with Public Servants, the following general directions should be borne in mind :—

A. As a general rule no Public Servant should be dismissed on mere suspicion or on grounds which are not capable of being stated. A compromising suspicion is, in some cases, sufficient reason for removing a Public Servant from the service of Government. In such cases, the Public Servant should not be dismissed with disgrace, but allowed to resign, or simply relieved of his office—the exact case against him being carefully recorded, so that he may, if possible, satisfy any other employer who has the means of livelihood in his gift.

B. As a rule no old servants—especially those who have earned or nearly earned their pensions—shall be dismissed except upon very strong proof of serious misconduct. It should be borne in mind that the sudden beggary of a man whose working days are drawing to a close is as serious an exercise of power as a penal sentence of a Court of Justice, and should not be inflicted on haphazard principles.

C. In all departmental enquiries, consideration should be given to the previous character of the Public Servant concerned, and especially to any specific instances of good or bad service that may have been officially noted in his case. It would, apart from the question of evidence, work well for the service if Public Servants were able to feel that a good character and acts of good service would stand them in real stead when their conduct is exposed to question. The admission, however, of evidence of previous bad character requires great caution. Care should be taken that a weak case is not unduly supported by reference to previous punishments for misconduct too slight for confidence that it received close attention.

D. Controlling and appellate authorities to whom orders of dismissal are submitted for confirmation or an appeal should remember that they have an individual responsibility of their own. They must, of course, on certain points, place confidence on the judgment of the officer who has personally conducted the enquiry, but they should withhold this confidence unless it is clear from the proceedings that the inquiring officer has acted with care and fairness. No defects in the record of enquiry should be passed over with such reflection as that the inquiring officer is a very careful man and that he probably knows a good deal more about the case than he has been able to say. If there are such defects, the case should be remanded for further enquiry, and the controlling officer should commit himself to no opinion of his own till the case is as complete as it can be made.

E. In regard to dismissals based on facts or inferences elicited at a judicial trial, it should be remembered that though, in some cases, the conduct of some Public Servant is so mixed up with the matter under adjudication that any after-enquiry into it by the head of his department would be superfluous, what oftener happens is, that some censure is passed on a Public Servant in a side remark from the Bench which he has no opportunity of answering or which the presiding officer may not have thought of sufficient importance to require verification. It would be extremely hazardous and unfair to accept such a remark as a deliberate judgment. As a general rule, therefore, a Public Servant, unless himself convicted at a judicial trial, has a right to defend himself departmentally against any imputation that he may have therein incurred.

F. In case of dismissal on the ground of continued negligence or incompetency, instances of such negligence or incompetency should have been placed on record before the present intention to dismiss was conceived and gross insubordination should be such as cannot be atoned for by an apology or otherwise. Cases of inefficiency should, as a rule, be met by a readjustment of the duties of the Public Servant without recourse to the harsh steps of removal from office. In cases of dismissal for inefficiency or insubordination, the above rules should be followed, especially the rule requiring that the charge should be reduced to writing and the explanation of the subordinate should be taken in writing and duly considered.

G. No Public Servant shall be removed from service on the ground of ill-health or of physical incompetence to perform his duties unless he has undergone Medical Examination and unless a certificate to his unfitness for further performance of his duties has been obtained. In all such cases, the Public Servant so removed shall be granted the pension or retiring allowance to which he is entitled at the date of such removal.

21. These rules do not apply to punishments other than dismissal—such as degradation, suspension, fine &c. But the general principles above indicated should, as far as possible, be followed. Suspension from office should always be for a definite period.

22. A Public Servant once dismissed upon just grounds shall be permanently excluded from Government employ.

23. These rules do not apply to peons and other menial servants, and to servants in temporary establishments. But even in respect of these servants, responsible officers are expected to exercise a fair and impartial consideration of the case.

Tax on Kandukrishi wet lands.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF HER HIGHNESS THE MAHA RANI REGENT OF TRAVANCORE.

* * * *

(Order Dis. No. 1559/26/Revenue, dated Trivandrum, 22nd October 1926).

The correspondence read above relates to the question of commuting into money payments the pattom or rent now paid in kind on wet lands held under the Kandukrishi pattom tenure. Kandukrishi lands are Crown lands which, although included in the State Ayacut, are the private property of the Sovereign. Holders of such lands are only tenants-at-will with no permanent right of occupancy. The rent due on Kandukrishi lands is now recovered in the same manner as revenue from Government lands under the special provision made for the purpose in the Revenue Recovery Regulation. But in cases of default the lands cannot be attached or sold as the holders have no right of ownership over them.

APPENDIX C.

2. The rent on Kandukrishi wet lands was payable wholly in paddy before the last Settlement and the practice has been continued after the Settlement also in accordance with paragraph 28 of the Settlement Proclamation, dated the 14th Kumbham 1061. During the Settlement, the lands, after having been demarcated and surveyed and assessed on the same principles as Pandarapattom lands, were allowed to be enjoyed by the holders on the then existing terms subject to the condition that the payment of the rent was to be in kind as theretofore. All extra payments outside the paattom were abolished.

3. The question of abolishing the system of rent recovery in kind on Kandukrishi lands was considered by the Government along with the general question of abolishing taxation in kind on Pandaravaga lands including Devaswomvaga lands. The latter question was decided in the year 1906 and, under G. O. No. C/t, dated the 2nd February 1906, the system of levying land tax in kind was wholly abolished in respect of all Sirkar lands and money payment was substituted from the 1st Chingam 1082. In view of practical difficulties and of the need for further consideration, Kandukrishi lands were not included in the application of the Government Order of 1906.

4. Since then the desirability of the change has been constantly before the Government. At the 14th Session of the Assembly, the Member for the Neyyattinkara taluk suggested, that, if deemed necessary, even a higher commutation rate than that fixed for Sirkar lands might be adopted for Kandukrishi lands. Members of the Legislative Council also in the course of discussion on the annual budget and also by means of interpellations frequently drew attention to the matter. Memorials and resolutions passed at public meetings have been received from tenants of Kandukrishi lands representing the hardship and inconvenience incidental to the present system of collecting the paattom in kind. A deputation of tenants of Kandukrishi lands also waited on the Dewan on the 14th June 1926 and presented a memorial in which they pressed the need for the early abolition of payment in kind.

5. Towards the close of the year 1924, the then Dewan Peishkar, Quilon, urged the desirability of commuting the paattom on Kandukrishi lands into money and he submitted proposals to the Land Revenue Commissioner. The Land Revenue Commissioner thereupon instituted a further enquiry into the matter and submitted his final report to the Government in his letter dated the 21st August 1925. Mr. K. Narayanan Pandalay and Mr. S. Parameswara Aiyar, whom the Land Revenue Commissioner consulted in their capacity as Dewan Peishkars of the Trivandrum and Quilon Divisions, advocated the abolition of the system of payment of rent in kind and the substitution of money payments instead. The Land Revenue Commissioner expressed the view that, if the Government could arrange to obtain through contractors the paddy required for the supply of rice to the Palace and for payment of pensions, jenmibhogam, etc., the best course would be to allow the Kandukrishi tenants to pay their rent either in kind or in money according to their convenience at the market rates and that this arrangement might be tried for some years and necessary changes introduced in the light of the further experience gained. A conference to discuss the question was held on the 15th October 1926, the Dewan presiding. The Land Revenue Commissioner was unavoidably absent, but the Dewan Peishkars of Quilon and Trivandrum who were present were in favour of the immediate total abolition of the system of payment of Kandukrishi paattom in kind.

6. Her Highness's Government have carefully considered the question in all its aspects and they have no hesitation in holding that the present system of collecting in kind the pattom on Kandukrishi lands is attended with many disadvantages and inconveniences and that its abolition will be beneficial both to the tenants and to the Government in diverse ways. For instance,

(a) it will put an end to the abuse and exaction of which the holders of Kandukrishi lands complain and will remove a temptation to corruption from the subordinates of the Kandukrishi Department;

(b) it will eliminate anomalies and defects in the land revenue accounts and render the administration of lands and the control of expenditure easy, uniform and effective;

(c) it will effect a saving in expenditure as the existing agency for the collection and storage of paddy can be substantially reduced, if not wholly abolished and the collection and accounting can be entrusted to the regular revenue establishment, slightly strengthened if need be; and

(d) above all, it will lighten the burden of Kandukrishi tenants and remove their longstanding grievances.

7. The Government accordingly resolve to abolish the system of payment in kind in respect of Kandukrishi pattom lands and to substitute a money payment instead. As regards the rate of commutation, the Government find from statistics received from the Land Revenue and Income-Tax Commissioner that the vilatharam brought to credit on account of this paddy revenue comes to 18,85,253 fanams per annum on an average which gives a commutation rate of 24 Chs. 2 cash per para of paddy i. e, 4 Chs. 2 cash in excess of the present standard rate of 20 Chs. employed for purposes of accounting and 5 Chs. 3 cash less than the average market price of paddy for the 5 years ending 1099 which was 29 Chs. 3 cash per para. At the Karkatakam Session, 1101, of the Legislative Council, Mr. K. K. Thomas, Member for Kottayam taluk, urged that the commutation scheme should not be delayed any further and that the commutation rate might be fixed even at the full market rate. In these circumstances and having regard to the impermanent tenure of Kandukrishi lands the Government will be justified in fixing the commutation rate at the average market price of paddy in the State. But in pursuance of the policy adopted by the Government in connection with the abolition of grain tax on Sirkar lands and with due regard to the public good the Government prefer to be liberal in determining the rate. They are accordingly pleased to fix the commutation rate at 24 Chs. per para of paddy. This rate will be liable to revision at the end of six years with due reference to the market rates of paddy prevailing during the period. The rate for conversion is substantially lower than the prevailing market rate. The results which must follow upon so fixing it are fully realised. Grain will have to be purchased at higher prices to meet Palace requirements, jenmibhogams, thirippuvarams, and, possibly, family and political pensions. These transactions will involve a loss; but in introducing a measure the principal object of which is to do away with a system that weighs heavily upon a large body of tenants of Crown lands, Her Highness's Government will not be actuated by a meticulous balancing of profit and loss.

8. There are at present certain Oozhiams or services rendered by Kandukrishi tenants. Some of the Kandukrishi lands are charged with the Oozhiam of supplying vari and gnavara paddy to the Palace and also dharmapullu for value paid to the holders. Taking the case of vari and gnavara first, it is seen that for every para of grain of these varieties supplied by the tenants, they are given an equal quantity of paddy of the ordinary variety. These services are attached only to the lands comprised in the Ambalapuzha Kandukrishi. The Land Revenue Commissioner reports that a total quantity of 526 paras and 2½ edangalies of vari and 1,480 paras and 6¼ edangalies of gnavara is now required to be supplied by the tenants. This has to be collected by the Vicharippukars of 10 out of the 12 Nelpuras attached to the Ambalapuzha Kandukrishi (excepting Aranazhi and Cherukole) and has to be delivered at the Nedumudi Nelpura. Gnavara ari and Oora are Vari ari prepared out of vari paddy are sent to the Palace every month by special agency at stated times. It has been ascertained from the Kandukrishi Tahsildar, Ambalapuzha, that the Oozhiam or duty laid on the Kandukrishi tenants of supplying vari and gnavara is seldom discharged by them. In actual practice the required quantity of vari and gnavara is purchased by the Vicharippukar of the Nedumudi Nelpura from wherever he can procure them by advancing money from his own pocket. He then arranges for their conversion into rice and delivery at the Palace. For the paddy so purchased by the Vicharippukar he fixes his own price and the value of the paddy so fixed is recovered rateably from the tenants whose duty it is to make the supply, along with the paattom, by coercive action when necessary, under the Revenue Recovery Regulation. In other words, in practice the Oozhiam is never satisfied by the tenants on whom the service is imposed and the paddy required for conversion into amritari is actually obtained by purchase in the open market. The Oozhiam has thus fallen into desuetude because the Kandukrishi tenants do not generally cultivate vari or gnavara themselves on their lands and, this being so, they prefer to pay the value of the paddy they have to supply even at high rates instead of themselves finding the required quantity from elsewhere and delivering it at the Nelpuras. For obvious reasons it is undesirable to continue an arrangement of this kind, as it on the one hand operates as a source of hardship to the tenants burdened with this service, and on the other, gives room for malpractices and exactions by the Nelpura subordinates. There can be very little difficulty for the Government to make efficient arrangements for the supply of the required quantity of vari and gnavara, the conversion of the same into rice of approved quality and the delivery of the several varieties of rice at the Palace on the prescribed dates. The Government are, therefore, pleased to direct that the Kandukrishi tenants who are now charged with the Oozhiam of supplying vari and gnavara be discharged from that obligation.

9. As regards dharmapullu, 54,726 loads of grass have to be supplied annually by the Kandukrishi tenants under the Champakulam, Kainakari, Panaveli, Kozhimukku, Nedumudi and Talavadi Nelpuars. The supply is utilised as a charity for the feeding of cattle attached to the Ambalapuzha Devaswom and also for other cattle in and about Ambalapuzha. On an average, 150 loads of grass have to be supplied daily by the Kandukrishi tenants attached to the above said six Nelpuras. For all the 54,726 loads of grass, a pathivuvila of 1,719 paras and 6 edangalies of paddy is paid to the tenants in cash calculated at the commutation rate of 11 Chs. per para. The money value of the pathivu vila comes to Rs. 675 Chs. 15 c. 9., i. e., 5·5 cash per load of grass. For every load of grass in respect of which there is default in supply by the tenants, vilavasi at the rate of 1½ Chs. is recovered. It was usual to make provision for this expenditure under pathivu vila for dharmapullu in the State Charities budget. From the year 1098, when the State Devaswoms were separated, this item was omitted in the State Budget and the question of dispensing with the service and making a money provision for the purpose of carrying on the charity has been under the consideration of the Government. The Government find that the grass is supplied as a charity for feeding stray cattle and that it is not intended exclusively for Devaswom cattle although the latter also are fed out of the grass supplied by the tenants under the Oozhiam. The charity being a charge to which the Kandukrishi tenants are subject, there is reason to suppose that it was instituted by the Royal household. The Government therefore consider it advisable to continue the charity and to entrust its administration to the Devaswom Department. As in the case of vari and gnavara the tenants burdened with this service do not make the supply either regularly or in full. The Government therefore resolve that, in the best interests of the tenants, they be discharged from this obligation altogether. For the future conduct of the charity, a suitable allotment will be provided annually in the State Charities budget. The Devaswom Commissioner is requested to utilise the funds and arrange to conduct the charity efficiently. The Government desire to make it clear, in this connection, that the charity is intended for the cattle of the locality and not exclusively for the cattle attached to the Ambalapuzha Devaswom.

10. Besides vari and gnavara, a quantity of 54,996 paras of paddy of the ordinary variety out of the Kandukrishi collections is also converted into rice (Pazhayari, Nediyari and Oonakkalari), vittaval, malar, malarpodi, etc., and supplied to the Palace, from the Ambalapuzha and Trivandrum Kandukrishies together. This is mostly for use in the matapallies for feeding the Palace employes etc., for purposes of Easwarassevas and for distribution to arikoppukars. The Government consider that the requirements under these heads can be efficiently arranged by local purchase or through contract agency. For the Nediyari and Pazhayari supplied from the Kandukrishi Department, value calculated at the rate of 11 Chs. per para of the equivalent paddy is paid by the Palace in accordance with G. O. No. 4998/L. R., dated the 12th June 1910. This arrangement will continue.

11. There is another point for consideration in this connection. Certain payments such as family and political pensions, jenmibhogam, arthapalisa, thiruppuvaram, etc., are now made in paddy collected by the Kandukrishi Department after the commutation into money payments of tax on Sirkar lands. From the date this Order comes into force, Sirkar paddy will not be available for payment of such dues and other suitable arrangements will have to be made to satisfy these claims. Separate orders will issue in regard to this matter.

12. The scheme as detailed above will be brought into effect from the 1st Meenam 1102 provided the majority of Kandukrishi tenants signify their consent, within a period to be fixed, to paddy rent being converted into money at the commutation rate herein fixed. Should any tenants prefer to continue to pay the rent in paddy, the introduction of the scheme will not be delayed on that account, but a separate account will be opened for such tenants and the scheme will be given effect to in respect of those who accept the conversion into money. The Government desire it to be clearly understood that this Order effects a change merely in the manner of payment of the paattom on Kandukrishi lands and will not in any way affect their tenure as Crown lands. The scheme will not apply to Kandukrishi tanatu lands.
